FARMER CONGRESS DEPLORES STRIKES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 27.—Protesting that organized labor is demanding more production of the farmers, while demanding of its members less production, delegates to the International Farm Congress late today went on record as deploring strikes except in "grave emergency" and opposing the unionization of police and other peace officers.

The resolutions demanded legislative action to adjust the difference in prices between producer and consumer, condemned "the growing tendency towards idleness among all classes of people" and opposed government ownership of railroads. Pledging themselves to continue to produce in amounts to meet any emergency, the delegates, representing twenty-five States and seven foreign nations, expressed in the resolutions a belief that "the obligation of labor to society is not less than that of the farmer."

Senator Capper of Kansas was elected president of the congress. The vice-presidents elected included L. A. Nares, Los Angeles, and Andrew Kimball, Thatcher, Ariz.

KILL BURGLAR IN STREET FIGHT.

POLICE LAND LONG-SOUGHT CRIMINAL AFTER MANY SHOTS EXCHANGED.

Helmer Nyland, 27 years old, wanted for many burglaries, was shot at 1 o'clock this morning and died an hour later, after a spectacular revolver battle with police officers between Seventh and Eighth on Olive street. Shortly before 1 a.m., G. W. Garver, a lodged in the Gilpin Hotel at 719 South Olive street, saw a man in the hallway acting strangely, and Garver, after notifying the police over the telephone, secured a 32-calibre revolver and waited for the man's return. When he came, the stranger drw a largt rtvolver and said to Garver, "Throw up your hands!" Instead of complying, Garver fired twice, one of the bullets hitting the intruder in the leg. The man, who later was identified as Nyland, ran to the rear of the floor, jumped out of a second-story window to the ground, ran into the Triangle Restaurant on the street floor of the hotel building. The burglar fired two shots and ran into Olive street, where Police Sergt. William Cahill and Policemtn Lane, who had heard the firing, came running toward the restaurant. Nyland fired two shots at the policemen, and they fired at him, but the burglar continued to run toward Seventh street, where Officers E. T. Barnes and F. R. Parsons of the flying squad, who had answered the first telephone call, running toward Nyland, began firing at him. Barnes fired twice, and Parsons three times, and all bullets took effect in Nyland's head.

LENINE RED RUNS STEEL STRIKE.

Foster, in Supreme Command, Admits Capturing Union Labor to Work Out Revolutionary Plans and "Blow Up" Government.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 27.—William Z. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the national committee for organizing iron and steel workers and the directing genius of the steel strike, is a revolutionist of the Lenine type. Proof of this is available in his red book entitled "Syndicalism" in which he details plans and theories for a social revolution in the United States. This is the first time that a self-defined revolutionist has been intrusted by the American Federation of Labor with the conduct of a great union-labor conflict. According to Foster's own statement he entered the American Federation of Labor with the purpose of capturing that organization for his revolutionary purposes. He labored diligently and incessantly to achieve his present position. The teachings of his book "Syndicalism" can be summarized thus:

"The present so-called capitalist system must be destroyed.

"The way to accomplish it is to organize the working people into great syndicalist organizations—revolutionary labor unions.

"The political state as at present constituted must be blown up, wrecked and cast aside.

"The way to accomplish this is by direct action, the general strike.

"Labor must not stop to choose its weapons in its struggle against the great industrial organization of today and the state as a whole. All considerations of ethics and morality must be discarded as so much dead wood, as so many letters blocking labor's liberty of action.

"Preparations must be made to obtain control of the armed forces of society. This can best be done by propaganda, but the workers must be ready to resist the capitalist class and the state by force if necessary. Sabotage must be employed both against the capitalist class in the industries and the state outside.

URGES GENERAL STRIKE.

"Labor must cut loose not only from conservative trade union methods but also from the Socialist party. It must pay no attention to political action. The ballot is only a scrap of paper. The strike, and above all, the general strike, is the sword it must learn to wield. By the application of the general strike capitalization and the state can best be destroyed by one stroke and the necessity of autonomous syndicalism organizations established."

Foster comes not to heal but to destroy. He does not conceal his sword beneath his cloak. He carries it conspicuously dangling at his side. For in "Syndicalism" he says: "The wages system of robbery is responsible for the great extremes of poverty and wealth to be found in modern society. It has existed ever since the very beginning of industrialism and its effects grow worse daily. Every invention of a labor saving device, by increasing the army of unemployed and making the competition for jobs keener, enables the owners of the industries to more thoroughly exploit their slaves. Thus the wage system has the effect of making inventions of labor-saving devices curses to the bulk of society instead of blessings as they should be."

"ABOLISH WAGE SYSTEM."

And thus does Foster pronounce the doom of the society he is denouncing:

"The wage system is the most brazen and gigantic robbery ever perpetrated since the world began. So disastrous are its consequences on the vast armies of slaves within its toils that it is threatening the very existence of society. If society is even to be perpetuated—to say nothing of being organized upon an equitable basis—the wages system must be abolished. The thieves at present in control of the industries must be stripped of their booty and society so reorganized that every individual shall have free access to the social means of production. This social reorganization will be a revolution. Only after such a revolution will the great inequalities of modern society disappear."

And then carefully in detail, Foster has a diagnosis. He boldly proclaims the gospel of class war. To him society is divided into two mutually opposed classes whose interests are irreconcilable, and the strug-

JOHNSON'S CAMPAIGN IS PRO-GERMAN, PRO-HEARST.

Senator Johnson is on his way West to make a number of addresses on the Pacific Coast in opposition to the ratification of the peace treaty, including the covenant of the League of Nations. He is known in Washington as one of the seven irreconcilables who will vote against the ratification in any form. He advertises his western trip as a move to promote Americanism; but, in reality, it is an attempt to defeat the peace treaty and is in the interest of pro-Germanism and Hearstism.

From the beginning the campaign of the irreconcilables has been fostered and promoted by the men, the interests and the newspapers that were pro-German during the war. Some of the advocates of interpretative amendments to certain sections of the treaty are sincere believers in the great principle involved—a League of Nations to discourage war and promote peace. But Senator Johnson and his associates have been campaigning from the beginning against the treaty itself.

Men are judged by the company they keep. Senator Johnson is now associating with the pro-German element of the country, although, strange to say, a number of patriotic citizens are mistakenly supporting him in his stand. His present speaking tour is arranged by the Hearst newspapers and other interests that were palpably pro-German during the war. During Senator Johnson's recent speaking tour of the Middle West his meetings were packed by the pro-German element. The hyphenated Americans followed him across three States. His big meetings were in the pro-German districts. The crowds that greeted him in some places spoke German even more freely than English.

Arrangements for his tour of California are backed up by those who were opposed to the part America took in the war. They wanted this country to stay out or to side with Germany. They hope now to secure a rejection of the peace treaty and, in that way, to rob the free peoples of the world of the fruits of their victory.

Senator Johnson's argument on the Shantung controversy is shamelessly pro-German. If the amendment which he is advocating were to be adopted the whole peace treaty would have to be redrafted and signed anew. Shantung is not mentioned in the covenant of the League of Nations. An argument against the Shantung award is not an argument against the league covenant; yet Senator Johnson persistently confuses the two.

His talk about calling American troops home from Siberia and points in Eastern and Central Europe smells strongly of pro-German propaganda. If the United States will pledge itself not to interfere again in the affairs of Europe, then Germany can take up the broken threads of her imperial policy and unite them again.

During the last four years the pro-German propaganda in this country has taken on many disguises. Senator Johnson was one of those on whom the Germans relied to defeat a declaration of war. But the war sentiment was so strong in this country after the Hun submarine outrages that all opposition was plainly futile. Nevertheless Senator Johnson was one of the reluctant members of the Senate who insisted on explaining and qualifying his vote. He was decidedly lukewarm on conscription, although he was careful of his record when the majority were for it. While not all those supporting the programme of the irreconcilables to defeat the peace treaty are pro-German, it is absolutely true that the pro-German elements in all the Allied countries are pursuing the same tactics as Johnson and his associates in their fight on the treaty.

FAIR PLAY, RULE NOW.

Strikers Represent Scanty Minority.

Kenyon Wants Testimony from Eighty Per Cent. Nonunionists.

Has Protest from 7000 Workers Who Call the Strike a "Crime."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Chairman Kenyon of the committee investigating the underlying reasons for the steel strike has called for statements from the unorganized workers in the industry. Union leaders have admitted that the strike has been forced by less than one-fifth of the total number employed in the steel and iron manufacturing industries, and, so far, the only witnesses have been those representing the minority of 20 per cent. So, Senator Kenyon wants to hear what the unorganized men—the nonunion men—have to say about working conditions and wages. Efforts are being made to get these men to come from the different points—Pittsburgh, Youngstown, and Cleveland. Judge Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, has been invited to see that several union men and an equal or even larger number of the unorganized employees are here to testify.

It is probable that, at the meeting Monday, the committee will decide to hear a number of witnesses from the unorganized branch of industry in proportion to their relative strength as compared with the union men and by that time it is probable the committee will know the number coming from the different centers.

At least four witnesses from the unorganized men of the United States Steel Corporation will be here the latter part of the week to testify. These witnesses will follow Judge Gary's testimony, which is now scheduled for Wednesday.

The committee has decided not to put W. Z. Foster on the stand. His activities in the past have been reviewed by the Department of Justice and for the present, at least, the committee will not call him.

Employees of the Inland Steel Company at Indiana Harbor, Ind., wired Senator Kenyon, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, investigating the stee strike, today, that nearly 7000 of their number consider the strike "a crime" and want to go back to work. The telegram follows: "In reply to the testimony of John Fitzpatrick before your committee yesterday, the employees of the Inland Steel Company of Indiana Harbor, Ind., which employs nearly 7000 men locally, want to contradict his testimony in every particular. The Inland Steel Company wants to operate its plant. Ninety per cent. of the men are satisfied and want to return to work. The Inland Steel Company has given all of its employees the eight-hour day, has adopted the profit-sharing plan that nets its employees thousands of dollars yearly; it has given us the collective bargaining plan. It pays as a bonus each Christmas in addition to the sharing of profits. The lowest wage paid common labor is 50 cents per hour, and on the whole the Inland Steel Company pays a majority of its skilled workers higher wages than the amalgamated scale.

CONDITIONS THE BEST.

"The working conditions in the mills of the Inland Steel Company are the best possible. It supplies visiting nurses and doctors to look after our welfare and the welfare of our families. It maintains club rooms for our benefit. It has instituted a $15,000,000 housing programme to enable its employees to secure homes at the lowest possible cost. It does not discriminate against any man because of affiliation with any organization. The strike was called at the Inland plant without any demands being made on the company. A large majority of the men attempted to go to work last Monday and were restrained from going to work by the threats of a mob of about 3000 men, mostly outsiders. We consider this strike a crime against the men that toil and we believe it is a blow at the vitals of our government."

The telegram was signed by A. K. Perkins, representing the employees.

Reaffirming that conservative labor unionism is in danger of being swept off its feet by radicals and of being converted to "revolutionary unionism," Representative Cooper of Ohio renewed in the House today his attack on William Z. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the steel strikers' committee.

COOPER DEFIANT.

The Mahoning county (Ohio) central labor union passed a resolution recently condemning Cooper for his attack on Foster. Replying to this criticism Cooper today had read to the House his letter to the union in which he says: "Relative to my warning I want to call your attention to the fact that for the last several months prominent union labor leaders have repeatedly come before committees of Congress and stated they feared it would be impossible to hold radicalism in check.

GRAYSON SLOWS WILSON'S TRAIN.

Says President will be Well Again After a Complete Rest.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ON BOARD PRESIDENT WILSON'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Sept. 27.—As the President's train neared Pittsburgh, running at a rate in excess of most express trains, Dr. Grayson objected to the pace and it was decided to slacken it during the night. It was understood Mr. Wilson became uneasy at the way the train was speeding and that Dr. Grayson decided a slower pace would be advisable in the interests of the patient's comfort.

At the rear end of the train the President's private car had the hardest jolts as the special cracked around curves and bumped over switches along the way. On the new schedule no attempt will be made to reach Washington until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dr. Grayson issued no further formal bulletin, but he told inquirers late tonight that the President was doing "as well as could be expected."

"He still suffers from headaches and nervousness," said Dr. Grayson, "but he has secured a little refreshing sleep and retained some nourishing food. I believe he will respond to the simple treatment of complete rest."

"DRINK MORE MILK"—PLAN GETS A JOLT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 27.—When Samuel Green, secretary and manager of the California Dairy Council, came here to inaugurate a "drink-more-milk" campaign he was informed by George H. Hicks, health officer, that the scarcity of feed, due to the dry season, has caused an announcement that milk prices will be raised October 1 from 15 cents to 16 cents per quart. The supply, Mr. Hicks said, nowhere equals the demand in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties. Many dairy cattle have been killed for beef, it is declared, because of three successive dry seasons.

Physician and Wife in Constant Attention During Night and Day.

Illness Due in Large Part to Influenza Attack in Paris Last April.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ON BOARD PRESIDENT WILSON'S TRAIN, Sept. 27.—President Wilson's condition showed no important change tonight, while the special train on which he made his interrupted tour of the country was approaching Washington.

Late this afternoon Dr. Grayson, Mr. Wilson's personal physician, issued this bulletin:

"The condition of the President this afternoon shows no very material change since this morning, but he has benefited from the sleep and rest of the early hours of the day.

"GRAYSON."

ON BOARD PRESIDENT WILSON'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Sept. 27.—Remaining in bed nearly all day, the President was said to have regained some of the strength lost as a result of his nervous attack yesterday. His train is due in Washington tomorrow morning and he will be taken to the White House for a more complete rest from his long speechmaking trip for the treaty.

The bulletin issued by Dr. Grayson was the second of the day, a morning statement declaring there was little change from Mr. Wilson's condition of yesterday, which had been described as "not alarming."

Mr. Wilson sat up a short time during the early afternoon, but Dr. Grayson, enforcing strictly his rule of absolute rest, did not permit his patient to give attention to executive affairs or exert himself in any other way. The physician spent practically the entire day with the President and insisted on keeping

Southern California was visited yesterday by a general rain, which began falling lightly early Friday evening, and, growing heavier in force and volume during the early-morning hours, settled down into a steady drizzle until yesterday afternoon when the sun appeared, and the first rainstorm of the season was apparently concluded. Up to 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Los Angeles Weather Bureau recorded .67 of an inch rainfall. A resumption of showers is predicted for today, with slightly cooler temperature.

Especially surprising was the rain throughout the Imperial Valley, where in two hours yesterday morning .4 of an inch fell. Up to this time last year no rain had fallen in the valley.

While the farmers generally considered the rain as of great benefit to the crops and to fruit orchards, as well as to water storage supplies, fear was expressed in the Imperial Valley that the rain had damaged the cotton crop, some growers placing the damage as high as $50,000.

The bean and beet farmers, especially those near Oxnard and the surrounding country, were not joyful over the rain, as much of these two crops remains to be harvested. No damage will result, it is believed, unless the rains should continue for several days. In the San Fernando Valley there also were large quantities of beans and alfalfa hay, ready for baling, in the fields, although throughout the valley the bean crop is 75 per cent. harvested and in storage.

There have been days in September when there has been greater rainfall, but the storm of yesterday was above the average for this month, which is .03 of an inch.

The storm of yesterday was caused by an area of high pressure which has been forcing the low pressure south along the Pacific Coast. This high pressure has been passing over Montana and the Dakotas, and encountered the low pressure north of this city. Ordinarily, the weather men say, the rain would have fallen considerably north of here. The department did not explain the cause of the different atmospheric pressures at this

MAYOR LOST IN THE AIR.

Mayor Casey Abbott of Calexico left the Mexican border city at 3:34 o'clock yesterday as a passenger with Pilot C. O. Payne in what was planned to be the first flight from the Imperial Valley city to Los Angeles. The plane was expected at Chaplin Field, Hollywood, at 6:20 o'clock last night, but up to midnight nothing had been heard of the party. The belief was expressed by the officials at the Hollywood field that the plane had landed between Calexico and Los Angeles, the pilot doubtless planning to resume his flight to Los Angeles today. As Pilot Payne is an experienced flyer, having been a government aviator during the war, no fear was expressed that the pilot and his passenger had met with an accident, even though a forced landing had been made on account of rainy weather conditions.

Inquiries last night at March Field, Riverside, and at the army and naval air stations, North Island, San Diego, showed that the plane from Calexico had not landed at any of the three fields.

Naval American Force Recovers Dalmatian Town from Italians.

DANIELS ACTS IN FIUME ROW.

Insists Americans Act Under Peace Council Order.

Seizure is Effected Without Use of Violence.

Paris Regards Crisis as Full of Sinister Possibilities.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—A force of American sailors from the cruiser Olympia was landed at Trau, on the lower Dalmatian coast, September 23, Secretary Daniels announced today. Without bloodshed, the Americans gained possession of the city, which previously had been occupied by a force of Italians.

Secretary Daniels's announcement said: "On September 23, a number of Italians surprised and captured Trau, a Dalmatian port in the zone assigned by the supreme council to be policed by the Americans. A small landing force from the United States steamship Olympia succeeded in recovering the town and preserving order there without bloodshed. Serbians were persuaded by Admiral Andrews from taking action."

Rear-Admiral Andrews, commanding the American naval forces in the Adriatic, in reporting the landing, said he acted on instructions from the supreme council at Paris received after he had reported that a force of Italians, apparently revolutionists, had occupied the city on the morning of September 23. His message did not say whether the Americans still occupied the town, but press dispatches from Copenhagen and Paris have said that the Americans withdrew after turning the town over to the Jugoslavs.

The Italians, Admiral Andrews reported, retired when the Americans landed without offering resistance.

It was said at the Navy Department that Trau was in that section of the Dalmatian coast assigned by the Peace Conference to the United States for patrol. The Italian government is responsible for the strip of coast line to the northward and the French for that to the south.

THREAT OF BALKAN WAR.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The Peace Conference apparently is changing its attitude toward the Fiume situation, which many members no longer regard as a strictly Italian affair because of indications that the Jugoslavs are being involved and likewise the report of increasing claims by the Italians as regards the Adriatic, creating conditions which are regarded as holding the threat of a Balkan war.

Capt. D'Annunzio, whose sensational raid on Fiume brought about serious complications in the Adriatic, has written an appeal to the French, the text of which is printed today by Excelsior. It begins:

CLAIM DIVINE AID.

"Brothers of France, you know what we have done under the inspiration and protection of our God. The most Italian of the towns of Istria, today more Italian than Verona, Pisa and Perugia, was lost to us under the menace of profanations and violations."

The proposal to create a buffer state with Fiume as its center will be resisted forcibly by D'Annunzio and his men, he told the correspondent of the Excelsior in an interview.

Dispatches to the Excelsior and the Journal say that D'Annunzio after permitting the correspondents to enter Fiume, told them: "If on the eleventh I decided to act immediately, it was because I had proof that the Croats would have sacked Fiume on the twelfth."

FEAR CIVIL WAR.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, Thursday, Sept. 25.—Alarmist reports are current in this city, one of them being that a civil war is imminent. On one side would be ranged the nationalist and militarist factions, which would be opposed by the Socialists.

Several generals are credited with the intention of heading the militarist faction, with a view to controlling the government, it being said that they believe the weakness of those in power since the armistice caused the present deadlock. Some of these generals have already been mentioned as being in league with Capt. D'Annunzio before the Fiume raid, with the object of overthrowing by force the Nitti Cabinet and replacing it with a military dictatorship.

The navy is represented as being even more dissatisfied than the army, having, according to naval officers' statements, suffered more from "the lack of consideration of their Anglo-French colleagues, who have acted as if they were masters of the Adriatic and have favored Jugo-Slav aims."

Foreign Minister Tittoni is said to have expressed the belief that the first thing to be done in the present serious situation was for the Cabinet to resign, thus eliminating one reason for discord. It is said his intention was the formation of a national Cabinet including all the leaders of the chief political parties, which would give the government the greatest possible power under the circumstances.

Premier Nitti, instead, considered that the resignation of the Cabinet would be an admission either of culpability or weakness, which would make the situation worse. He added that he would step down if any one could suggest a man better fitted to cope with the crisis.

ADMITS NITTI'S POWER.

Tittoni was obliged to confess during a conversation with the King, it is reported, that he did not see any other politician having the statesmanlike qualities and force possessed by Nitti.

Thus the idea of a resignation of the Cabinet was abandoned, but there is no prospect as yet of any amelioration of the gravity of the situation, nor is there a distant glimmer for a solution of the Adriatic problem.

Workmen numbering approximately 1,000,000 are on strike and dissatisfaction is growing everywhere at the constantly increasing cost of living. It is impossible for the government to call any men to the colors, especially after having recently pardoned all deserters under the proclamation of amnesty.

SOCIALISTS ARE ACTIVE.

Strenuous efforts are being made by Socialists to reach an understanding between the workmen and the soldiers. They are urging the latter to refuse to obey either their officers or the government, and they thus hope to organize in Italy workmen's and soldiers' committees which would lead to the formation of soviets and an upheaval of the whole social order. No one has suggested a remedy for this alarming state of affairs, but the hope is expressed that some unforeseen events may happen to give things a turn in the right direction.

SENATORS' CABLES UNDERMINE WILSON

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 27.—While President Wilson was devoting his attention to the Peace Conference in Paris, certain United States Senators were sending messages to Italian statesmen, saying sentiment in this country was not with the President on the Fiume question, but was with the Italians, Prof. Fred Morrow Fling, head of the European history department of the University of Nebraska and one of the two official War Department historians at the Peace Conference, declared in an address here today.

BRITISH STRIKE IS A CLASS WAR.

Men Sing "The Red Flag" for Hour, After Which Leader Delivers Impassioned Speech; Press and Public Unite in Condemning Action of the Railway Men.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The first day of the greatest strike in England's history passed without disorder but with practically complete stoppage of every transport throughout the country. Thus far it has been from a union standpoint the most successful tieup of industry ever recorded by warring labor.

Tonight a great mass meeting of railway men was held in Albert Hall, at which James Henry Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railway Men—after the audience for an hour had sung "The Red Flag"—delivered a heated speech of censure against the government and declared trouble was brewing which might lead to bloodshed.

Both Thomas and C. T. Cramp, president of the union, who preceded him, asserted the men were firmly behind the leaders in this great crisis.

President Cramp denounced the government statement regarding the purpose of the strike as a "deliberate lie." It was not the public with whom the strikers were at war, he declared; it was the people who for the moment were in the position of directing the affairs of the country.

All "the powers of hell, the press, platform and perhaps the pulpit" would be invoked against the strikers, said President Cramp, but if they remained solid they would be victorious.

Both speakers denounced what they characterized as the government attempt to debase the mind of the public by saying the strike was not in defense of union rights, but against the life of the community. Answering the Premier's strong statement earlier in the day that the strike was an anarchistic conspiracy against the government, Secretary Thomas declared if that were true, "God help the country."

He had warned the government that their proposals would be fatal to peace, he said.

"My answer to the Prime Minister's challenge," said Mr. Thomas, "is that if he will say to us officially himself, not influenced or intimidated by anyone else; if he will say, as head of the state, that he is prepared to concede the same principle to all railway servants then the strike can cease at once."

PUBLIC AGAINST STRIKERS.

Official pronouncement from government sources and bitter rejoinders from the railway executives, coupled with the attitude of the press, which largely is with the government, has surrounded the strike with a decidedly political atmosphere. The general feeling expressed by the newspapers is that the present struggle is a test between the relative power of the government and the organized working classes.

A lengthy verbatim report issued officially tonight concerning Friday's conference between the government and railway men shows Secretary Thomas asked for a minimum of sixty shillings a week for all workers. Mr. Lloyd George admitted that the railway men before the war had been "disgracefully underpaid."

A few trains, manned by nonunionists, pulled out of the London stations during the day. Several trains which left for the north tonight were stopped by pickets and the engines taken off.

TO MAKE TIE-UP COMPLETE.

Two great railway organizations, the National Union of Railway Men and the Society of Engineers and Firemen, have stopped work. The miners and transport workers' unions, the latter including the dockworkers, are expected to join them.

The English Channel steamers and railway boats plying the Irish Sea probably will be tied up, cutting off England's communication with the outer world to a large degree.

The effect on business already is disastrous. Shops and offices everywhere are being operated with partial forces. Many miners have been unable to get to their work. The shortage of coal and of supplies promises to cause the wholesale shutting down of factories.

The system of food distribution and the mail service are disorganized, but the government expects to have them in operation again without much delay.

CALL IT CLASS WAR.

In view of the widespread effect of the movement leading newspapers like the Times declare it is more than a strike—that it is class war.

Several papers commenting on the railway strike urge an immediate summoning of Parliament and there are some indications this will be done. It is contended the nation does not know the full story and that only searching debates in the House of Commons will reveal it.

All shades of opinion in the London press, except the Laborite Herald, condemn the National Union of Railway Men, the action of which in declaring a strike is described as a "wanton war on society and an attempt to starve the country into submission. The newspapers appeal to the people to support the government in a finish fight. Some editorials express the desire to treat the railway men fairly and admit they are "entitled to every just consideration," but it is asserted they have put themselves entirely in the wrong by "needlessly forcing an industrial war upon the country three months before the negotiating period would elapse."

MINES AFFECTED.

The mining industry already has been affected by the strike. Advices from the Welsh fields announced that because of a shortage of coal cars and lack of transportation for the miners two of the pits had been forced to shut down.

Probably less than half the working population of the center of London went to business today. All the trains which bring tens of thousands of persons from suburban towns daily were cut off by the strike and the suburban busses were unable to accommodate a fraction of the people desiring passage.

Tens of thousands of bicycles, including many ancient types, meanwhile were threading their way through the crush.

Hundreds of thousands of the work-goers were walking to their places of employment, crowding the sidewalks as the vehicles crowded the pavements.

TIE-UP COMPLETE.

Decision of the Underground Motormen's Union last night to support and National Union of Railway Men's strike caused a complete tie-up of the railways here today. Thousands of persons could not be accommodated by the inadequate bus and tram services and were obliged to walk to work.

The government having failed in its negotiations with the union to adjust the situation, is said to be prepared to operate the railroads with armed forces if necessary, but its definite programme for meeting the condition before the country has not yet developed.

One of the most disquieting features of the situation is the possibility that the miners and transport workers, who, with the railway men, form what is known as the "triple alliance," also may strike.

The strike which has Great Britain in its grip today is of a different nature from ordinary labor disturbances because the railways and the mines are under government management.

Heretofore the government has been blamed by a large section of the press for the country's after-war troubles, but nearly all the newspapers now have dropped partisanship and are supporting the authorities. The general opinion expressed is that the labor leaders are trying to use the strike weapon to enforce their campaign for the nationalization of the railways and mines. The labor interests, on the other hand, declare their only purpose is to secure a firm agreement for wages adequate to the increased cost of living under better living conditions.

The Ministry of Transport shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon announced that the stoppage of traffic on the railroads through the strike was virtually complete, except in Ireland, where the lines are not affected. The announcement said that no disturbances had been reported.

WALK OUT IN BODY.

So far as could be heard at 10 o'clock this morning the members of the National Association of Railway Men had walked out in a body and the stoppage of service was complete.

C. T. Cramp, president of the union, interviewed Sir Eric Geddes, Minister of Transport, this forenoon. This, although not regarded as a reopening of negotiations, is considered an indication that the men and the government still maintain friendly terms.

"The precipitancy of this action gives the impression of a deliberate and matured intention on the part of some individuals to seek a quarrel at any cost," said Premier Lloyd George in a statement today on the nation-wide railway strike.

"It has convinced me it is not a strike for wages or better conditions," continued the Premier. "The government have reason to believe it has been engineered for some time by a small but active body of men who have wrought tirelessly and insidiously to exploit the labor organizations of this country for subversive ends."

Decks Clear for Vote on the Fall Amendments.

League of Nations covenant, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, left today for a week's campaign in the Middle West in criticism of the league. Senator Reed will make his first address Monday at Muskogee, Okla., and will speak later at Oklahoma City, Ardmore and Tulsa, Okla., Denver, and Lincoln, Neb.

Only a few Senators were present today when reading of the peace treaty was resumed.

Senator Brandegee, urging against ratification, referred to conditions under which the Foreign Relations Committee worked and its failure to obtain information needed in formulating its report.

"The press of the country, stirred by appeals from the League to Enforce Peace," said Senator Brandegee, "was demanding that we report out the treaty. Then when it was intimated that we were proposing resolutions there was a clamor from people who said this would wreck it."

Senator Brandegee declared the "United States was asked now to abandon the only chance it had of amending the treaty."

DECKS ARE CLEARED.

All that part of the German peace treaty affected by the amendments of Senator Fall, Republican, New Mexico, which would exempt the United States from representation on foreign commissions, was read formally to the Senate late today, with only half a dozen Senators listening at the end. The reading paved the way for general debate, beginning Monday, and made possible a vote on the amendments during the week. There was no indication tonight, however, as to how soon the discussion might close.

The vote will give the first accurate test of the line-up of the forces. Republicans have asserted that the amendments will be adopted, while Democratic leaders declare their defeat is certain.

The reading was interrupted soon after it started by a brief discussion of the League of Nations covenant, but the half holiday spirit was in the air and Senators, weary from a week of treaty debate, had no desire to return to the fray.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT.

Some Democrats suggested that because of the certainty that no vote would be changed by further discussion, they sent their case to the jury, so to speak, without argument. This, they contended, would speed up the treaty and put the question of delay squarely up to the Republicans. Most Democrats opposed such procedure. Those who advocated it said they would endeavor to obtain the views of President Wilson.

Senator Smith, Democrat, Georgia, announced he planned to present to the Senate Monday a set of reservations to the treaty similar to those offered by the group favoring "mild reservations." It is understood Senator Smith's reservation to Article X of the treaty will declare that American military force cannot be used in furtherance of a territorial guarantee without the approval of Congress.

LLOYD GEORGE WILL WIN FROM STRIKERS.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPERMAN PREDICTS NORTHCLIFFE NEXT PREMIER.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Premier David Lloyd George is a brilliant compromiser. He will weather the railroad strike which paralyzed English traffic today and threatened a clash between the military and the unionists, but sooner or later the Labor party will govern England. And then you may expect to see Lord Northcliffe become the first Premier of the first British Labor government.

Such was the "inside information" brought to Chicago today by Frederick W. Wile, who went to work on the Chicago Record just twenty-one years ago this week and who has come to Chicago for a post-war vacation from London, where he is a member of the Northcliffe press staff.

"Lloyd George will meet this crucial railroad walkout," said Mr. Wile, "just as he has won out in other severe tests—by brilliant compromising. But it wouldn't surprise me to see Northcliffe become Premier in the next few years when the Labor party obtains control. It will be a good thing. Northcliffe is aggressively friendly toward America.

ORIGIN OF HAIR AND SCALP TROUBLES DISCOVERED

Up to 40 Years Ago Causes of Hair and Scalp Troubles Were Practically Unknown.

Then Prof. John H. Austin, bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, discovered that with the aid of a powerful microscope the origin of the troubles could be traced and a cure effected.

Professor Austin says that using dandruff cures, mange cures, etc., without the proper advice is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your hair or scalp is afflicted—and there are many of them—must be known before it can be intelligently treated.

For example, one person may require an astringent, another a healing ointment, and another an antiseptic for an itching scalp, which is caused by vegetable parasites, and still another something to relieve an excessively oily condition.

With the aid of a very powerful compound microscope Professor Austin is able to quickly determine the exact cause of the trouble, and will tell each one what is best to do in his or her particular case.

Both men and women are invited to take advantage of a free examination of the hair and scalp. Women need not take down their hair. Office hours from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Private office, Second Floor—Hamburger's.—[Advertisement.

time, though they are not out of the ordinary.

Terrific storms on the desert have caused several serious washouts on the railroads, according to San Bernardino advices. Between Cadise and Parker on the Parker cutoff of the Santa Fe there is a washout, which will stop traffic for many hours it is stated, while the main line of the Santa Fe has suffered trouble west of Needles. The California Southern operating between Blythe Junction and Blythe in the Palo Verde Valley is out of commission for several days as a result of washouts. Passengers have been turned back, it is reported, with advice that they cannot get through for days.

Over an inch of rain fell yesterday in the San Bernardino Valley, putting an end to the forest fires in the adjoining range of mountains, and coming also as a welcome visitor to ranchers and orchardists.

Walnut growers were delighted at the coming of the rain, declaring that if additional heavy rains do not come, walnut picking will be helped by yesterday's showers, as walnuts will drop more freely from the hulls.

A light sprinkle of rain fell in Santa Maria yesterday afternoon, continuing but a brief period. This is the nearest to Santa Barbara the rain has come. Lompoc reports a high barometer and the barometer in Santa Barbara has raised considerably during the day giving little indication of rain. Bean growers state a heavy precipitation at this time would do immense damage throughout the county. Only a third of the small white crop is under cover and the lima crop is to a large extent in the field yet also.

WILSON SECURES SLEEP AND REST.

his mind away from the cares of his office and of the treaty fight.

MRS. WILSON ATTENDS HIM.

During the entire day Mrs. Wilson, too, was in constant attendance upon her husband, insisting on acting as his nurse and ministering in person to many of his wants.

Dr. Grayson seemed particularly pleased at the rest the President was able to get during last night and this morning. Throughout the evening and early night Mr. Wilson had been restless, but in the early morning he fell into a sound sleep, which lasted for several hours. Although still weak, his rest during the night helped him to pass a more comfortable day.

Speeding eastward on a clear track, the Presidential special ran virtually without schedule, railroad officials making what speed they could without taking unnecessary risks. No stops were made except at long intervals to take on water or change engines. It is thought tonight that the capital would be reached not later than 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PACKING-UP DAY.

Aboard the train it was packing-up day for the members of the Presidential party, who virtually have made their home aboard since the departure from Washington three and a half weeks ago.

During the trip of nearly ten thousand miles, all of those in the party, including the President and Mrs. Wilson, have spent all but three nights on the train.

Just before the Presidential special reached Indianapolis late in the forenoon, Dr. Cary T. Grayson issued the following bulletin:

"The President's condition is about the same. He has had a fairly restful night.

"GRAYSON."

This was all the physician cared to add to his statement of last night, in which he said Mr. Wilson's indisposition was not alarming, although a considerable period of rest would be necessary to recovery.

GETS NEEDED SLEEP.

It was learned, however, that the President had slept during much of the night and until late in the morning. He had been more or less restless in the evening, and Dr. Grayson, who as a precautionary measure spent the night in an adjoining room on the private car Mayflower, did not get to bed until a late hour.

That he was able to get some sleep was interpreted as a good omen, the evident concern of those nearest him being to get his mind entirely away from the subjects which have occupied his energies during recent months.

Besides Dr. Grayson, Mrs. Wilson was in constant attendance upon the President during the night and again today. She also was able to get some rest, however, and seemed refreshed from the apparent strain of the last few days.

The train arrived at Indianapolis at 10:38 and left at 10:51 a.m.

The special train, shunted off from its original schedule yesterday noon at Wichita, Kan., was routed direct for the capital and had the right of way for a continuous run at the greatest speed consistent with absolute safety. It crossed the Mississippi at St. Louis early in the day and was to be well across the Ohio by nightfall. It is due at Washington tomorrow morning.

The President's illness, although brought to a head by his exertion of his speaking tour, is ascribed by Dr. Grayson in large part to the attack of influenza from which Mr. Wilson suffered last April in Paris. On that occasion he was confined to bed for several days, but he continued his conferences with the other members of the "big four," consulting with them at his bedside about critical problems of the peace negotiations.

MAY GREET KING ALBERT.

Although Secretary Tumulty announced that all of the President's appointments in the near future had been canceled, it became known that Mr. Wilson still believed he might be able to go to New York next Friday to welcome King Albert. Other members of the party thought it likely that the plan would be abandoned, however, and the greeting would take place instead at Washington.

Whether the President will leave Washington for the rest Dr. Grayson has prescribed will not be determined immediately. He will at least remain at the White House for a few days and it may be decided that the isolation desired can be secured there better than at some place away from the capital.

The President was described as in good spirits and in a telegram to the members of his family he assured them there was "nothing to be alarmed at" in his illness.

HAS COMFORTABLE NIGHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TERRE HAUTE (Ind) Sept. 27.—(On board the President's special train.) President Wilson passed a comfortable night. He appeared to be sleeping throughout. Not once did he ask for anything. Dr. Grayson, who slept in the President's car, was not aroused during the night.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—President Wilson's special train arrived in St. Louis at 3:30 a.m. today and left at 4:15, stopping only long enough to change engines and take on water. The President was reported to be "resting quietly." His car was in darkness during the half-hour stop.

ARCTIC TRAPPERS ARE SAVED BY RELIEF SHIP.

LIEBES COMPANY'S VESSEL REACHES BANKS LAND JUST IN TIME.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—After three unsuccessful attempts in a period of three years the H. Liebes & Co.'s ship Herman has succeeded in reaching Banks Land, Coronation Gulf, the mouth of the northwest passage to the Arctic, according to a wireless received from Nome and sent by the ship's captain, C. T. Pedersen, to the main office of the company here. The firm has a Los Angeles branch.

The arrival of the vessel in the Far North meant the rescue at an opportune time of the Liebes company's trappers. When the relief expedition reached the men the only food in sight was two Arctic cranes and ammunition was almost exhausted. The ship also brought from Banks Land to Teller, above Nome, two remaining members of Stefansson's expedition for the Canadian government, who have been there for about six years. The wireless did not state whether these men had been lost or had been left there purposely for scientific research. The ship brought from Banks Land a four years' accumulation of pelts trapped in this absolutely virgin field.

The Herman left San Francisco April 9 and reached Nome July 21. It left Nome July 29 for H. Liebes & Co.'s more northern stations and will return to San Francisco about October 22 with the most valuable fur cargo the firm has ever brought out of the north.

CUBAN GROWERS TO REAP PROFIT.

Sugar Men Urge President to Take Some Action.

World Shortage of Crop will Send Price Higher.

American Supply Already Sold at a Low Figure.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—"Fifteen-cent sugar is certain within a few weeks and 25-cent sugar probable by spring, unless President Wilson at once authorizes the taking by the United States sugar equalization board of the entire Cuban sugar crop and brings sufficient pressure to force the Cuban government to set a maximum price and make it possible for the United States to acquire the sugar. It is already almost too late for such action to do much good, but the chances are the President will not act anyhow. He ignored the request of the sugar men of this country to do it July 16 last. He will probably ignore the request we are making today through the equalization board. The people had better prepare to pay the price the Cuban sugar men set."

This statement, made by a member of the Beet Sugar Manufacturers' Association, meeting here, was submitted to Henry H. Rolapp, president of the association, and chairman of the Sugar Distribution Committee of the sugar equalization body.

WORLD SHORTAGE OF SUGAR.

"I do not care to predict what the President will or will not do, although I am inclined to believe he will take no action," Mr. Rolapp said. "He has been too busy with other matters. Otherwise, I believe the statement summarizes the situation exactly. There is a world shortage of sugar. The Cuban sugar people have forced their government to adopt a hands-off policy and are holding their product for the highest price they can get.

"As things stand the United States must bid against the world for nearly 2,500,000 tons of sugar, half of its yearly consumption. Also the domestic supply—from Louisiana, Porto Rico, Hawaii, the Western and Coast States, with a small amount from the Philippines—is far below normal. More than 1,500,000 tons of the present crop will be used before the first of the year.

"The United States government controls only some 400,000 tons now. Only the taking over of the Cuban sugar crop and of such domestic sugar as may be had can keep the price from skyrocketing."

CANDY MAKERS GET THEIRS.

Commenting on reports that candy makers were being regularly supplied with sugar, while food dealers could get only limited supplies—in some instances none at all—Mr. Rolapp said:

"Candy manufacturers have obtained little or no sugar from the sugar equalization board. There is no reason, however, if they want to go into markets not controlled by the government—the government has no jurisdiction over the new beet sugar, nor the present Cuban output—and pay the price they should not get all the sugar they can pay for. They cannot, and did not get it from us.

"We did give sugar to canners, because we believed it was imperative to preserve foods. Some of them used millions of pounds—but it went into foodstuffs."

MAY RUIN INDUSTRY.

A number of sugar men who attended the meeting expressed the fear the present situation might injure the beet sugar industry by sending prices so high that because of apparent profits, the protective tariff would be taken off sugar. Such action would, in a normal surgar market, ruin the beet sugar companies. They claim they will not partake of the great profits that are to come because they already have sold the greater part of their output at the present market.

"It will be tough," said J. R. Sinsinbaugh of Sacramento, Cal., "to sit around and see the Cubans get the big profits while we, who cannot share them, having sold all our sugar, get blamed for the high prices."

The sugar men, in an effort to make the United States independent of Europe, voted to make up a pool of $100,000 a year for the purpose of scientific research for the improvement of beet sugar culture. Experts will be sought. For these, sugar men admitted, "unofficially" they expected to bid against German beet growers—or even the German government.

MANY ARMY OFFICERS TO TAKE LOWER RANK

THIS IS NECESSARY TO COMPLY WITH ACT REDUCING NUMBER TO 18,000.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Thousands of army officers must be reduced in rank, the War Department announces, in order to comply with the act of September 17, 1919, providing that after October 31 the total number of commissioned officers, exclusive of retired officers and disabled emergency officers awaiting discharge, shall not exceed 18,000.

The authorization by grades of the 18,000, it was disclosed, will be as follows:

General officers, 101; colonels, 693; lieutenant - colonels, 797; majors, 2717; captains, 5408; first lieutenants, 5179; second lieutenants, 3105.

"In order to conform to the above table," the Adjutant-General said today, "it is necessary generally to reduce officers of the army from the grades they held on a basis of 200,000 officers to the grades they should properly hold on a basis of 18,000 officers.

"In accordance with instructions heretofore issued, the names of emergency officers recommended for retention in service as a part of the 18,000 officers are now being submitted to the War Department by organized commanders and chiefs of staff corps to whom allotments have been made. From such recommendations the War Department will determine and announce the names and grades of emergency officers whose retention in service is approved."

CURTAIN RUNG DOWN FOR ADELINA PATTI.

QUEEN OF SINGERS FOR FORTY YEARS DIES AT CASTLE IN SOUTH WALES.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Sept. 27. — Adelina Patti, the prima donna, died this morning at Craig-y-Nos castle, Penycae, South Wales.

Mme. Adelina Patti reigned for forty years as queen of singers.

Her marvelous voice thrilled the greatest contemporaries of her day. The elder Dumas, the French dramatist, once said to her:

"Being a man and a Christian, I love to listen to your singing, but if I were a bird I would die of envy."

"She had tones so beautiful," said one eminent musical critic, "that they seemed to gush spontaneously from the very fountain-spring of vocal youth."

"CHILD OF THE STAGE."

Mme. Patti inherited her talent.

"I am a child of the stage," she has said, "being born during an operatic season at Madrid, Spain, in 1843. My father, Salvatore Patti, a Sicilian, was a good tenor singer. My mother, a Roman, became a famous artist as Signora Barili—the name of her first husband."

Dwindling finances sent the Patti family to New York when Adelina, whose birth name was Adela Juana Maria Patti, was a baby. When she was 7 years old, her parents suddenly became destitute.

"In the emergency," the singer said, "my mother considered that I had extraordinary vocal talent, and hit upon the idea of bringing me out in concert. And so I sang and soon won bread for the family."

The child made her debut at Tripler Hall, in New York, singing arias from the "Barber," in 1850. She was the juvenile prodigy of the day, and nearly ruined her voice by overwork. She appeared again at the age of 16. After a tour through the West Indies, she withdrew to prepare for a greater career.

FIRST OPERA ROLE.

At the age of 16 she appeared in the Academy of Music, New York, in her first opera role, "Lucia di Lammermoor." Her wonderful soprano roused the audience to the wildest enthusiasm, and her fame swept the country. At this time she was earning $100 a week.

She repeated her conquest as Amina in "La Sonnambula," in Covent Garden, London, in 1861. Her salary had increased to $750 a month.

It was the beginning of a dazzling conquest of all Europe. Royalty entertained her and courted her favors. The populace besieged her hotels and theaters. Men in all stations of life wooed her, but she brushed them aside with a laugh and trill. She finally capitulated at the age of 25 to Henri, Marquis de Caux, equerry to Napoleon III. They separated after a few years, Mme. Patti finally securing a divorce in 1885 to marry Signor Ernesto Nicolini, an Italian tenor singer.

Her first American tour began in 1881—her last in 1903. She was greeted by a magnificent ovation when she made her first appearance in opera in the New York Academy of Music, the scene of her girlish triumph of twenty years before. She was at the height of her career, and became the musical sensation of the winter. The following year she sang at the newly opened Metropolitan Operahouse. Her guaranteed salary was $5000 a night—and it was paid, for Mme. Patti invariably refused to appear until the money was in her possession.

HOLDS FINANCIAL RECORD.

Mme. Patti held the record as a box office star in operatic circles. When she appeared at a matinee concert in Mechanic's Hall in Boston in 1888, she faced an audience which had paid $18,000 to hear her. During a single tour through South America she received in salary and bonuses more than $300,000. It has been estimated that she earned more than $5,000,000 during her singing career.

She made her final professional appearance at the age of 65 in London. Her last days were passed in Wales at her beautiful castle, "Craig-y-Nos," with her third husband, Baron of Cederstrom, whom she married in 1899, a year after the death of Nicolini.

Mme. Patti is reputed to have left an estate valued at more than $5,000,000.

She was the first operatic singer in the world to be made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. She was decorated by the Czar of Russia with the Order of Merit, and was appointed by him as "First Singer of the Court." European potentates vied with each other in showering her with jewels, decorations and social distinctions.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The British evacuation of Archangel has been completed with the exception of 200 Highlanders who are expected to embark today, according to an announcement here.

WILSON PRAISES FRANCIS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—In a telegram made public today, President Wilson paid tribute to David R. Francis, United States Ambassador to Russia, for his dealings in that country "with a situation which was difficult to the point of impossibility." The message was announced in connection with a dinner last night in the Ambassador's honor.

POGROMS DENIED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Reports of pogroms in Siberia were denied in an official dispatch from Ernest L. Harris, American Consul at Omsk, received today at the State Department. The message said: "At no time has there been a single pogrom since Kolchak came into power."

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The appointment of a commission to study the question of the repatriation of the German and Austrian prisoners in Siberia was decided upon today by the supreme council. The return home of these troops would be effected after the Czecho-Slovak troops in the Far East had been repatriated.

ELLIS KEEPS UP FIGHT ON DOZIER

Would Oust General Manager of Reclamation Board.

Charges of Incompetency and Inefficiency are Made.

Report Doesn't Mince Matters on Extravagance Issue.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 27.—Charging incompetency and failure to "fill the bill" as manifested in his supervision of clearing brush and trees along the Feather River and in the other work of the department, E. T. Ellis, Jr., of Marysville renewed his fight here this week to oust Melville P. Dozier as general manager of the State Reclamation Board.

In a report which was filed with the board at a special meeting, Ellis attacked the work of his fellow-board members, and went on record as being opposed to the increase in salary from $7500 to $10,000 under any circumstances. He cited Dozier "as particularly unfitted for the duties of his office."

Ellis also charged that Dozier, at the time he asked for an assistant stating that he had too much work to do for one man, was spending a great deal of his time in furthering private interests. In the closing remarks of the report the general manager of the board was accused of having incurred debts without the sanction of the other members.

The State Board of Education in its session here this week cited Mrs. Margaret L. (or Mary L.) Walling, formerly Miss Williams, to appear at the November meeting and show cause why her life diploma as a teacher should not be revoked.

This action is taken on complaint of Elisa S. Walling, who says Miss Williams stole the affections of Horace Herbert Walling and afterward married him. Elisa S. Walling has already scored once against her rival, as she collected a judgment of $15,500 some months ago in Los Angeles county for alienation.

The documentary evidence placed before the State board includes love missives that passed between Walling and Miss Williams.

Gov. Stephens's recent request that Atty.-Gen. Webb tell him what laws are available for the purpose of meeting the high-cost-of-living problem has resulted in much comment.

Webb's reply that the only hope is the calling of a special session of the Legislature recalls to legislative authorities the bill that Assemblyman Thomas L. Ambrose introduced in 1917, "to promote freedom of trade, to protect the public against unlawful restraints and monopolies and to provide penalties, etc." Terms of imprisonment for two and three years were proposed for those who formed pools or trusts for the control of food supplies, or who attempted to corner any commodity.

The bill was brief, but pointed, and was armed with teeth that would bite any offender, but it did not get far in the Legislature. The Judiciary Committee reported it out without recommendation and it died quickly.

It was not brought forward at the last session, but if now on the books it is said there would be no question about the power of the State to successfully attack the profiteers.

Los Angeles bidders figured prominently in the highway bids received by the State commission this week. Fred Hoffman of Long Beach is the lowest bidder on 8.6 miles of paving in Los Angeles county, near Acton and Palmdale, his offer being $181,445. The estimate of the highway engineer was $225,435.

Near the Ventura-Los Angeles border 1.3 miles of paving was estimated at $29,120 and the bid of George R. Curtis of Los Angeles was $25,600. Between the southerly boundary of Ventura county and Conjeo grade 5.2 miles of paving was estimated at $112,150. The lowest of four bidders was C. H. Hudson of Los Angeles, $98,825.

A California Supreme Court decision in the case of Chauncey Rust of San Francisco is said by the State Board of Medical Examiners to affect a large number of osteopathic practitioners who have claimed the right to practice medicine and surgery without taking an examination on these subjects.

Rust was prosecuted by the optometry board because he fitted glasses without a license for that special work. The Supreme Court goes into this section of the law upon which the osteopathic medicos have been relying and overturns their theories, says Pinkham.

Out of 1141 osteopaths to whom licenses have been issued, only 400 remain in practice. Sixty of these have gained the right to practice medicine and surgery under oral examinations provided by the 1917 Legislature.

The report of the State bureau of labor statistics, which has been issued by Deputy Commissioner Blair, states that 1432 men and women were given positions by the Los Angeles bureau during last week. Approximately 55,000 people have been placed by the bureaus throughout the State since July 1 of this year. The Los Angeles bureau leads the State in placements.

"A declaration of principles" has been adopted by the State Board of Education as outlined by Supt. Wood and the three commissions.

There are sixteen points, No. 11 calling for school buildings not over two stories in height, modern, sanitary, hygienic, simple and artistic, suited to the needs of school and community activities. The draft also declares that physical education shall be provided for all, and outlines a plan for the Americanization of foreign-born residents.

ARIZONA NEWS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 27.—Atty.-Gen. Wilie E. Jones has prepared an answer for filing in the Superior Court, denying the charge made by Gov. Campbell that Jones was under the influence of liquor at the time when the new Adjutant-General bill was under discussion in the Governor's office. He also denies the statement of the Governor that he advised that the bill in no way would help keep Adjt.-Gen. Harris in office. Interpretation of this bill now is the main point in a case affecting Harris's right to the place.

Gov. Campbell states that he will defer the calling of a special legislative session till next spring, in order to consider a number of other matters that are expected to need attention, in addition to the national suffrage amendment. The suffragists have been demanding a session immediately.

Senator Mark Smith wires from Washington terming "a silly lie" the statement that he will seek the second Federal judgeship in Arizona. He states that he is ineligible to fill any office created during his senatorial term.

More than half an inch of rain fell yesterday in Phoenix and the Salt River Valley. Little damage was done save in stopping cotton picking.

DANGER AHEAD! MEXICO POSTER.

Author has Urged Carranza to Change His Policy.

Says Comment of Senator Fall Indicates Distrust.

Urges Union of Factions Opposed to Government.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—"Danger ahead!" is the title of a poster that has been spread throughout Mexico, according to a courier from the interior reaching Washington with official reports.

The poster is signed by Alfredo Robles Dominguez, an engineer, who first came into prominence at the time of the Madero revolution, when he was placed in charge of the policing of Mexico City after Porfirio Diaz had left and before Madero had entered.

Dominguez has frequently published open letters to President Carranza, urging a change of policy. His poster comments on the answer of United States Senator Fall to the query of a Mexico City newspaper and takes as its text a paragraph of the Senator's reply to the effect that each member of the Fall committee hopes Mexico can establish a government which will comply with the country's international obligations without making intervention by the United States necessary.

This means, says Dominguez, that the American Senate no longer takes into account the Mexican government and that the Mexican people should take matters into their own hands and create a responsible government

"No Mexican who has an atom of shame should remain inactive," reads the poster. "It is silly to attempt to resist by force of arms an infinitely superior force. We lack money, ammunition, arms and even in these moments the moral qualities which make peoples patriotic and virile."

The poster declares it has been put up to the Mexican people to find adequate measures to cure Mexico's evils and suggests that Carranza and his government withdraw, that a provisional government be formed to begin forthwith negotiations with the creditors of Mexico and union of all factions now opposed to the Carranza government.

HALF MILLION LACK BREAD IN BUDAPEST.

RUMANIANS TRY TO LOOT PALACE WHERE ALLIED COMMISSIONS STAY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BUDAPEST, Sept. 26.—The food situation again is very bad. For days thousands of people have had no bread. A member of the Allied mission puts the figure at half a million. This is considered high.

While the Rumanian representative is telling how the Rumanians are helping to provision the city and to assist the people, the facts belie his statements. The Rumanians began to loot the palace where the Allied military commissions stay and even entered the American offices and living quarters to carry off the furnishings. They were ordered out, but went so reluctantly that one Rumanian literally was kicked out. Another part of Rumanians appeared to carry off stuff of the British. They were ordered away, but they came next day with a truck and were about to carry away the typewriters when they were discovered by British officers.

The were not inclined to obey his orders until a bunch of marines drove the Rumanians out with bayonets.

SHIP DIRECT TO IRELAND.

American Steamer Does not Stop at English Port.

Considered Deliverance from British Dominance.

Tax is Levied on United States Autos, However.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DUBLIN, Sept. 26.—America and Ireland have united in trade relations. The accomplishment of this long-expected end now seems quite possible, for last week there came into Dublin harbor a small steamer of about 2000 tons flying the American flag. The craft was as young as it was small, having left the stocks hardly three months ago at Wyandotte, Mich., where it was built for the Warren Transport Company, the present owners. The Lake Gretna is controlled by the United States Shipping Board and is now under charter of Moore and McCormick, 5 Broadway, New York. She is the first American ship flying the American flag to open direct ocean trade between the United States and Ireland.

The Lake Gretna carried a full general cargo of American goods ranging from automobiles to pins and American jazz music. It is the first American cargo ever landed in Ireland that did not first pass through the hands of the British commission merchants in Liverpool or Southampton and then undergo reshipment in British vessels across the Irish Sea.

MAKES A SAVING.

Elimination of the commission charges for handling and the additional sea freight constitute a saving which Irish merchants and consumers consider of sufficient importance to celebrate. The establishment of this direct economical trade route is looked upon by the Irish as a deliverance from the commercial dominance of England.

The deliverance is not complete, however. At the Dublin docks British customs officers were present in the name of English automobile manufacturers and assessed a tax of 33 1-3 per cent. on each American automobile unloaded. The Irish claim that such a tax does not protect them because they have no automobile factories and the only protection it affords is to the English automobile makers.

A MIXED CARGO.

Other items of the cargo were barrels of paraffin, brushes, pins, type-setting machines, brooms, canned fruit, sample jellies and jams, lubricating oil, paint, varnish, leather, California wine, baking powder, candies, cattle hides, molasses, clippers, combs, padlocks, hosiery, boots, shoes, and household articles. Not only are the Irish merchants happy over the cheapness of the price compared with amounts previously charged when handled through the British middleman system, but the speed of delivery is considered record-breaking. American goods were delivered direct in three weeks as against three months reported to be the customary time by the English route.

As a result of this successful venture, for which much credit should go to Moore and McCormick, Irish importers through the medium of the Dublin Industrial Development Association, are crowding the offices of American consulate in Dublin demanding more cargo space by a direct American route and more important still are listing tons of Irish goods as a return cargo for American ships.

WEEKLY CALLS PLANNED.

It is announced here that Moore and McCormick have now under charter a sufficient number of American ships to make weekly calls at Dublin, Belfast and Cork, discharging cargoes direct from America and taking on cargoes of Irish linen, poplin, woolens, chemicals, hosiery, paper, books, furs, skins, hides, feathers, fish, lace, bacon, biscuits and oatmeal for direct exportation to America.

One Irish importing association has asked the American Consul for bids from American firms on the delivery of 150,000 tons of bituminous coal for this winter.

The Lake Gretna, under command of Capt. Ellertson, is returning this week after picking up a cargo at Belfast and Cork.

HORN CLAIMS ACTION WAS A MILITARY ONE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

JERSEY CITY (N. J.) Sept. 27.—Werner Horn admitted before James G. Carpenter, Jr., United States Commissioner, here today that he blew up the Canadian Pacific Railroad bridge over the St. Croix in McAdam parish, N. B., February 2, 1915, but insisted that it was a military act committed in a hostile country during war time.

The admission was made at a hearing on a petition of the British government for Horn's extradition to Canada.

After a series of affidavits implicating Horn in the crime had been read, the prisoner was taken to the Hudson County Jail, where he will be held pending a decision on the question of his extradition.

HAWAIIAN VOLCANO ERUPTING.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU, Sept. 27. — Mauna Loa volcano on Hilo Island burst into eruption today at nearly the same spot where occurred the eruption in 1916. Two rising columns of lava or incandescent gases are visible from the Kilauea observatory, which is located at a 4000-foot elevation. The volcano is situated on the summit of Mt. Mauna Loa, a 13,000-foot peak. Unlike the volcano Kilauea, Mauna Loa is extremely difficult of access and its summit stands always above the clouds.

SUPREME COUNCIL INSTRUCTS MARSHAL FOCH TO MAKE DEMAND IMPERATIVE.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The supreme council decided today to send the German government through Marshal Foch a note demanding the evacuation of Lithuania by German troops under severe penalties for noncompliance.

The note informs Germany that her provisioning will be immediately stopped and the financial arrangements she has requested be held up if Lithuania is not evacuated.

If all German troops are not recalled from the Baltic provinces within a very short time the Allies will cut off supplies from Germany, re-establish the blockade and interrupt the repatriation of German prisoners of war, according to the Figaro, which states a note prepared in answer to a communication from the German government stated that forces under Gen. Von der Goltz were being retained in the Baltic provinces because it was impossible to prepare a plan of evacuation at present.

American experts, the newspaper says, suggested these measures.

RAIN AIDS FIGHT TO SAVE REDWOOD PARK.

TWO BIG FIRES TWO MILES NORTHEAST QUALIFY REPORT OF SAFETY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, Sept. 27.—Rain, which began falling early today, was aiding the fire fighters who were striving to save the California Redwood Park in Santa Cruz county, it was reported here.

SANTA CRUZ, Sept. 27.—Although the California Redwood Park appeared to be safe today, two big fires were reported to be burning in the Pescadero Creek and China Grade regions, two miles northeast of the park. The absence of winds was aiding in the fighting of these fires, although they were said to be out of control.

The fire which crept to within half a mile of Governor's Camp, a resort within the park, was reported to have broken out anew today, but was not expected to break beyond the control of the fighters.

One of the uncontrolled fires is along a line of three miles from Pescadero Creek to China Grade. The other was in the Maddock Canyon, near China Grade.

GRADES FOR ARMY ARE OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Under the authority recently given to maintain the commissioned strength of the army at 18,000, the War Department today announced the number each grade will have. The list follows:

"General officers, 101; colonels, 693; lieutenants-colonels, 797; majors, 2717; captains, 5408; first lieutenants, 5179 and second lieutenants, 2105.

In order that the officer lists may be cut to the above figures, inclusive or regulars, a general reduction in grade will be ordered. The majority of the officers now are graded on the basis of a total commissioned personnel of 200,000.

Designation of officers of the Regular Army who will be permitted to hold their temporary rank will be made by a board from the General Staff, the announcement said, and all changes will have been completed prior to October 31.

SENATE TO HEAR NONUNION MEN.

The day after I made the speech in question Mr. Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, made this statement to a Senate committee: "The disposition toward radicalism is so great now that democracy is sneered at by certain groups who say that it is only a pretext which the employing classes hold up to cheat workers and that workers can only secure justice by revolution."

"I assert that this statement by Mr. Gompers himself justifies my action to any fair man.

CONDEMNING LETTER.

"I note that your Resolutions Committee comes to the defense of William Z. Foster, whom I pointed out as the type of radical against whom I wished to warn the workers. Regarding Foster I wish to say that Mr. Gompers admits this man was an I.W.W. and the author of the revolutionary pamphlet, 'Syndicalism,' but claims that Foster has been converted to labor-union principles. In this connection I quote from a letter written by Foster in 1911 now on file in the office of the United States District Attorney at Chicago, in which Foster said: 'I am satisfied from my observation that the only way for an I.W.W. to have the workers adopt and practice the principles of revolutionary unionism, which I take it is its mission, is to give up the attempt to create a new labor movement, turn itself into a propaganda league, get into the organized-labor movement and by building up better fighting machines within the old unions than those possessed by our reactionary enemies revolutionize these unions, even as our French syndicalist fellow-workers have so successfully done.'

"This letter was signed, 'Yours for the revolution, William Z. Foster.'

ACHIEVED PURPOSE.

"It seems that Foster has actually carried into effect his purpose to get into the organized-labor movement, for he is secretary-treasurer of the national committee to organize the steel workers, but I for one shall continue to oppose with all the force and power at my command his efforts to overthrow conservation leadership and have the workers adopt and practice the principles of revolutionary unionism.

"Your resolutions further say my statements have caused misunderstandings that threaten to discredit the object of the movement which resulted in the strike of the steel workers. I contend it is Foster's statement and record rather than anything that I have said that is likely to have this result.

"Your resolutions further state that I criticised the campaign to organize the workers of the iron and steel industry. As to this I wish to say that I never have and never will criticise any movement to organize workers for the purpose of bettering their conditions, but that I always have and always will support measures for the true benefit of all the working men."

INCREASED FORCES IN STEEL PLANTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 27.—From virtually every part of the Pittsburgh district came reports today of preparations by steel companies to resume operations on Monday on a larger scale than on any day of the first week of the steel workers' strike. Few changes in the situation were reported and from many towns came the announcement, "Wait till Monday."

The Carnegie Steel Company officials said today they were going along smoothly with increased forces in the plants the company is operating.

The close of the first week of the steel workers' strike does not show any radical changes in the situation. Both sides today virtually marked time waiting for Monday, when both steel companies and strike leaders expect a change. Steel company officials said they did not expect any considerable number of men to return to the mills today but did look for a general influx with the beginning of the new week.

The national committee for organizing iron and steel workers after canvassing the strike situation here today, sent a telegram to United States Senator Kenyon, Chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, tonight, asking him to have the committee come to Pittsburgh and investigate for itself the conditions the strikers complain of in Western Pennsylvania.

The national committee also decided to confer with the Railroad Brotherhoods on matters in connection with the strike.

W. B. Rubin, New York, general counsel for the striking steel workers, arrived here today to take up the union's "fight for free speech and free assemblage. He opened the fight a few minutes after arriving at union headquarters, when word was received from Monessen, Pa., that the Sheriff of Westmoreland county had ordered the closing of the organizers office at that place.

The strikers' committee was ordered to reopen the office and told to tell the Sheriff that it would remain open as long as the "steel trust" keep their offices open, Mr. Rubin said.

The national committee at a meeting here today ordered a general strike in the plants of the Bethlehem Steel Company to become effective next Monday morning at 6 o'clock.

The shipbuilding plants of the Bethlehem interests will not be affected, Mr. Foster said, as they are working under union agreement.

The plants affected by the strike order are at Steelton, Reading, Lebannon, Titusville, South Bethlehem in Pennsylvania, and Sparrow's Point, Ind.

FOSTER'S CLAIM.

Secretary Foster of the committee, in announcing the strike, said that between 40,000 and 50,000 men were expected to be affected. He asserted the Bethlehem plants were among the best organized in the country.

The committee with John Fitzpatrick, chairman, present, met in a special session to consider the reply of E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, to the union's demand for a conference. Mr. Grace in his reply said that he would not grant a conference to the union and that he would not abandon the present system of collective bargaining with employees, which was adopted by the committee during the war.

Electro-Radium Ore Appliances

GIVE READY RELIEF IN PAIN AND IN SICKNESS.

If your system can throw off the sediments which cause congestion and irritation, it will rid itself of poisonous matters which are constantly generated, and you will have no pain nor sickness. This can be accomplished by Electro-Radium, which is the strongest curative agent known, because it assists in the functions of assimilation and elimination.

RADIO ACTIVITY lowers the Blood Pressure; stimulates the activity of the digestive tract, both in the stomach and intestines, and lessens chronic constipation; increases the secretion of uric acid in the urine; dilates or expands the blood vessels by excitation of the Vaso-Motor Nerves; increases the secretion of urine; increases metabolism, especially hydro-carbons, as proved by the amount of carbonic acid excreted; soothes the nerves and relieves insomnia; modifies the constitution of the blood, resulting in real and lasting improvement in anemia, and stimulates the activity of the liver.

The Electro-Radio Ore Appliances are made suitable for each particular need.

Electro-Radio Activity appliances—what they are, how used and why they are curative, explained in booklet.

Schomacker Pianos

The Piano Of the Presidents From Lincoln On Down

It is interesting to know that the piano Lincoln used in the White House is still in existence.

It is a Schomacker piano and was selected by Mrs. Lincoln. It was exhibited in Chicago not long ago along with other historical relics of Lincoln. "It is a noble and majestic instrument," writes one who saw the exhibit.

Schomacker Pianos have been made since 1838. Today the Schomacker is a shining example of what an aim, so long pursued can accomplish in a piano. We are proud to show Schomacker Grands, Uprights and the Schomaker Angelus.

PICKS UNIONS TO BE LOSERS.

Wall Street Believes Steel Companies will Win.

Brokers Base Their Faith on Experiences in Past.

Corporation Heads Know Men Best.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The week's stock market shows that Wall street believes that the companies—not the men—will win the steel strike.

Why?

The average annual income per employee of the United States Steel Corporation in 1914 was $905. Last year it was $1666, but last December it was at the rate of $1950—more than double the 1914 average. It necessarily follows in Wall street's reasoning that the striking employees will go back to get the coin. Those expressions are frequent in La Salle street, where they contrast the steel worker with the stockyards worker. The latter they claim will average less than $927 this year despite the union efforts of Fitzpatrick and Foster, who are now bossing the steel strike.

UNIONS REPEATEDLY BEATEN.

Another factor in the betting of the moneyed interests is the past performances of steel companies in strikes. They have beaten the unions repeatedly. Seldom they have lost. Sometimes the unions have been starved out. In other conflicts equally drastic methods have been used. Unions have been broken up. Members have been discharged. Collective bargaining has been banished. Men have been forced to resume work at lower wages after a strike and in a few instances at longer hours.

The third feature in bolstering up the confidence of the men who watch the stock tickers is their belief that the managers of the steel corporations know more about human nature than the union leaders. They believe that the corporation heads can make a more accurate guess of what the steel employees desire and what they will accept than the union labor chiefs. In a word, the corporation "guess" is more reliable than the union labor "information."

"A 'spite steel strike—as one union leader has acknowledged this to be—won't win and can't win,'" said a Chicago broker yesterday, whose views were indorsed by other brokers.

"A steel strike for more money would have an excellent chance. Get the information on steel strikes and you will have as much as any of us outsiders have and you can see why we are doping the employees to lose. That will show you they are gluttons for wages."

WAGES FIRST OBJECT.

In the decade between 1880 and 1890 the steel industry was more nearly unionized than during any other period in this country.

The employees and the employers conferred. There are instances where Pittsburgh employers asked the privilege of appearing before the convention of employees. In 1884 the plants in Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Youngstown and Sharon closed for the "annual reunion" of employees. That happened again in 1886. The Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers was then doing business.

William Martin, secretary at the 1884 annual convention declared "the main object" of the organization to be "the keeping up of wages." The proceedings of 1889 show that a committee presented a resolution condemning strikes for any purpose other than in relation to wages.

In 1883 it was announced that McCleane & Co. would force a day of eight hours upon employees. The Amalgamated cited this as an example of the "encroachments of aggressive and designing capital" because it was feared their wages would be reduced not because they plants during this decade. disliked an eight-hour day. That was established in a number of plants during this decade.

In 1886 the employees at the Carnegie plant at Braddock were working on an eight-hour shift. For a certain labor cost there during twenty-four hours Carnegie was paying $46.35. That was divided among three shifts of men. In Chicago the same work cost $48.30 but two shifts of men got the cash. The national labor tribune tells of the repeated unsuccessful efforts to organize the Chicago men and get them to strike.

Other information of like character is available to support the brokers' view that the steel employees, first desire is wages.

BEATEN BY CORPORATION.

The unions have made only one big effort to whip the United States Steel Corporation. That was at the time when it was forming in 1901 and the union leaders then attempted to persuade the men to break their contracts. Joliet and Milwaukee in this section went out but the South Chicago men refused to budge. Their charter was revoked. President Shafer for the unions then offered to arbitrate. The strike was called in July. Its principal object, as now, was to force collective bargaining. The offer to arbitrate was rejected and the strike was declared off at the end of August. Ten former union mills became non-union.

Since 1909 unionism has been completely eliminated from the mills of the United States Steel Corporation. At the Toronto convention of the American Federation of Labor President McArdle of the Amalgamated characterized that corporation as "the greatest enemy of organized labor."

Since then attempts have been made to organize the steel industry and President Gompers was selected as the head of a committee to do the work at the annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor in St. Paul in 1918. At the meeting of the federation this year, at Atlantic City, John Fitzpatrick succeeded Gompers as head of that committee.

FEARED WAGE CUT.

The employees apparently were not much interested in the attempt to organize until E. H. Gary told the government that he was willing to reduce the price of steel. That caused some of the employees to fear a wage reduction.

The Illinois Steel Company has written contracts with its employees at Joliet and at Milwaukee. They follow the principle established by Carnegie thirty years ago. This provides that the wages shall increase or decrease as the selling price of steel is raised or lowered.

That interested those stolid, willing working "hunkies" and they listened to the union-labor agitators. In most instances the speakers promised that a strike would reduce the hours to eight and still maintain the present wages. The theory of William Z. Foster for a short, strenuous strike of a few days was impressed on the listeners. Perhaps they thought with a three days' lay-off they would have the Steel Corporation licked and they would try it.

MANY MILLS WILL REOPEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 27.—From virtually every part of the Pittsburgh district came reports today of preparations by steel companies to resume operations on Monday on a larger scale than on any day of the first week of the steel workers' strike. Few changes in the situation were reported and from many towns came the announcement, "Wait till Monday."

Carnegie Steel Company officials said today they were going along smoothly with increased forces in the plants the company is operating.

The close of the first week of the steel workers' strike does not show any radical changes in the situation. Both sides today virtually marked time waiting for Monday, when both steel companies and strike leaders expect a change. Steel company officials said they did not expect any considerable number of men to return to the mills today, but did look for a general influx with the beginning of the new week.

The strike has resulted in the shutting down or crippling of virtually every plant of the United States Steel Corporation and many of the independent mills. The subsidiaries of the corporation were harder hit outside the Pittsburgh district than they were in this vicinity, according to report. The Carnegie Steel Company, largest of the subsidiaries, managed to keep its great plants at Homestead, Duquesne and Braddock running, although the strikers asserted they were badly crippled and losing men constantly. The Carnegie company insisted that each day saw more men returning to work. The same reports came from the independents that kept their plants in operation.

APPEAL TO KENYON.

The National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers, after canvassing the strike situation here today, sent a telegram to United States Senator Kenyon, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, tonight, asking him to have the committee come to Pittsburgh and investigate for itself the conditions the strikers complain of in Western Pennsylvania.

The national committee also decided to confer with the railroad brotherhoods on matters in connection with the strike.

W. B. Rubin, New York, general counsel for the striking steel workers arrived here today to take up the union's "fight for free speech and free assemblage. He opened the fight a few minutes after arriving at union headquarters, when word was received from Monessen, Pa., that the Sheriff of Westmoreland county had ordered the closing of the organizer's office at that place.

The strikers' committee was ordered to reopen the office and told to tell the Sheriff that it would remain open as long as the "steel trust" keep their offices open, Mr. Rubin said.

The national committee at a meeting here today ordered a general strike in the plants of the Bethlehem Steel Company to become effective next Monday morning at 6 o'clock.

The shipbuilding plants of the Bethlehem interests will not be affected, Mr. Foster said, as they are working under union agreement.

The plants affected by the strike are at Steelton, Reading, Lebanon, Titusville, South Bethlehem in Pennsylvania, and Sparrow's Point, Md.

Secretary Foster of the committee, in announcing the strike, said that between 40,000 and 50,000 men were expected to be affected. He asserted the Bethlehem plants were among the best organized in the country.

The committee with John Fitzpatrick, chairman, present, met in a special session to consider the reply of E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, to the union's demand for a conference. Mr. Grace in his reply said that he would not grant a conference to the union and that he would not abandon the present system of collective bargaining with employees, which was adopted by the committee during the war.

RED SHOTS BY GOMPERS'S FRIEND FOSTER, STEEL STRIKE ORGANIZER.

Among the maxims set forth by William Z. Foster in his book on "syndicalism" are these:

"The wages system must be abolished."

"The thieves at present in control of the industries must be stripped of their booty and society so reorganized that every individual shall have free access to the social means of production. This social organization will be a revolution."

"Only after such a revolution will the great inequalities of modern society disappear."

"The syndicalist sees in the state only an instrument of oppression."

"The workers in each industry shall manage the affairs of their particular industry; the miners shall manage the mines; the railroaders manage the railroads, and so on through all the lines of human activity."

"Capitalization is organized robbery."

"Capitalists have no more right to the wealth they have amassed than a burglar has to his loot."

"The so-called legal and inalienable rights of man are but pretenses with which to deceive workingmen."

"In modern society, as in all ages, might is right."

"The end justifies the means."

WANT WAR INDUSTRY BASIS IN STEEL RULING

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—In a supplemental brief filed today the United States Steel Corporation asked the Supreme Court to decide the pending anti-trust case brought by the government under the Sherman act on the basis of the situation in the steel industry growing out of the war instead of upon conditions twenty years ago. The case is to be argued soon after the court reconvenes on October 6.

The corporation pointed out that in 1901 it produced 50.1 per cent. of the steel, while in 1911 its proportion was only 45.7 per cent. and said that despite its failure to have the suit decided before the war the corporation had proceeded to expend enormous sums of money enlarging its plants, which enabled it to meet "every requirement of the government of the end of the war."

How Any Woman Can Remove Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to visit a beauty specialist to have superfluous hairs removed, for, with the aid of a plain delatone paste, she can, in the privacy of her own home, remove even a stubborn growth in a very few minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes removed and the skin washed, when it will be left clear and hairless. Be sure you buy real delatone.—[Advertisement.

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength,) and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.—[Advertisement.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo your hair so frequently if it is entirely and properly cleansed each time by the use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers is one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair and may be enjoyed at very little expense, by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox which can be obtained from any druggist, in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just to the top of the head. This, when rubbed into the scalp and onto every strand of hair, chemically dissolves all impurities. It is very soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to both scalp and hair. After rinsing out the lather so created, you will find the scalp is fresh, clean and free from dandruff, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—[Advertisement.

location had been made by Allied shipping commission and Great Britain has con- that it was only temporary when the need for the the homeward movement of troops ceased to exist they revert to the inter-Allied pool for permanent disposition among associated and Allied powers as might be agreed upon by the commission.

At the War Department it was stated that the position of the deparment was that the ships were turned over to it by the Shipping Board for the specific purpose of transporting troops and war supplies and that this activity having been practically concluded, the obvious procedure was to return the vessels to the board regardless of any international agreement.

ISSUES STATEMENT.

J. H. Rossiter, director of the division of operations of the board, issued tonight this statement:

"It is understood by the United States Shipping Board that the Imperator, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and six other ex-German ships now in New York, were allocated to the United States under the terms of peace and the board therefore assigned these vessels to the War Department for repatriation of troops. This service being performed, the chairman of the board requested the War Department to deliver the ships to the United States Shipping Board. Accordingly, the War Department this morning re-delivered the Imperator at New York to the shipping Board representatives."

ALLIES GET TANKERS.

While no official of the Shipping Board would stand sponsor for the statement, it was understood the action of the board in retaining the ships was a direct result of a decision by the supreme economic council at Brussels to allocate to the Allies twelve oil tank steamers in German ports which the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey contends are its property. The ships were operated under the German flag, but the company declared they belonged to its German subsidiary.

In announcing the Shipping Board would rethin the eight German liners, Mr. Rossiter said their allocation to the United States was permanent.

CHARMED LIFE OFT MENACED.

Lusitania Survivor Battles Turk and Teuton.

Then is Hurt in Wreck on Peaceful Journey.

Four Years in War, Now Back on His Old Job.

A victim of shipwreck and trainwreck, a target for bombs and torpedoes, often in the path of Turkish scimitar or Teutonic bullet, the life of Yeoman A. G. Shepperson of 237 East Second street has been scores of times in jeopardy since he left here four years ago, yet he returned home yesterday, little the worse for his thrilling experiences except for a bumped nose which he received in peaceful New Mexico long after the armistice was signed.

Mr. Shepperson left his job with the Edison Company in March, 1915, and went to San Francisco, where he enlisted as a yeoman in the British Army. He was sent to New York and sailed from there the following May on the ill-fated Lusitania.

After the liner was torpedoed Shepperson watched the heavily-laden boats leave the ship, then, with others, leaped into the ocean. A strong swimmer, he managed to keep afloat, without support of boat or plank, for interminable hours until he was picked up by the fishing boat Flying Fox. Three other survivors were with him on the boat and all were in a weakened condition. The boat sailed for Queenstown where the rescued men were placed in a military hospital. Shepperson recuperated and was discharged from the hospital in a few days. He was provided with clothing by the Cunard Steamship Company.

He was then sent to Gallipoli and there participated in the latter part of 1915 in many engagements of the losing campaign of the British forces in that theater of the war. After the British troops withdrew from Gallipoli he was sent to Alexandria, Egypt, his regiment being a portion of the forces used in suppressing Bedouin riots.

He was with the British Palestine expedition of 1916 and was wounded at the battle of Gaza, where the Turks inflicted heavy losses on the British. The Turkish Army at that time was well equipped, he says. British soldiers were dying from lack of water as well as from wounds.

Shepperson was sent to the military hospital at Cairo where he slowly recovered. In 1917 he went with the victorious forces of Gen. Allenby, passing over the grounds of former defeats until Jerusalem and other Holy Land cities were taken. After the Turks were defeated some of the British troops, Shepperson among them, were sent to Egypt to put down a native uprising that had assumed serious proportions.

Last summer Shepperson was sent to England, after four years of service and from there shipped to Quebec on the Saturnia. Returning to Los Angeles, he was in a railroad collision at Kennedy, New Mexico, and again injured. Tomorrow he will go back to work with the Edison Company and hopes to find life comparatively quiet.

YOUTH WALKS OUT OF HOME; MISSING SINCE.

PARENTS ASK POLICE TO FIND BOY WHO DISAPPEARED SEVERAL DAYS AGO.

Peculiar circumstances surrounding the disappearance last Monday, of Ralph Kosel, 18, a shipyard worker at San Pedro, were reported to the Sheriff's office yesterday, by G. Kosel, the youth's father. The boy was in his home, 1021 Washington boulevard, Venice, on Monday evening, while his mother was cooking dinner. While she was in the kitchen, the youth, attired in khaki breeches, shoes and leather puttees, left the house. He has not been seen since.

The father said the young man had two week's pay at the shipyards, which he had not collected, that he was apparently happy at home and had no trouble with his parents. The fact that he left without coat or hat, leads the parents to think that he may have wandered away. The Sheriff's office is making an effor to find him.

SEES FREE PORT AS HARBOR PLAN HERE.

SWEDISH SHIP EXPERT THINKS FIRST AND LARGEST IN U. S. SHOULD BE ESTABLISHED.

The possibility of making Los Angeles Harbor the first and largest free port in America was pronounced feasible last night by Carl Frick, one of the leading business men of Sweden, who is a guest at the Alexandria. Mr. Frick is president of Malmo Free Port Company, Ltd., the Malmo Gas and Electric Power Works and the Frick & Frick, Ltd., Insurance Corporation.

Following a trip to Los Angeles Harbor, Mr. Frick said that it possessed practically the same facilities for a free port as Malmo, Sweden. The Malmo Free Port, which will handle interchange commerce from all nations without the usual customs collections unless the merchandise is shipped directly into Sweden, will commence operations early next year, but will not be completed until 1921. It comprises eighty-three acres of land and thirty-eight acres of water.

The free port is owned by the city of Malmo, which built not only the new port, but also the warehouses, grain elevators and other buildings. It is to be operated by a private company, of which Mr. Frick is the head, and the income of the company will be the taxes on the ships and goods or rents accruing from warehouses. From the profits gained by the business the city will receive up to 5 per cent. on the capital invested by the city in building the port. The operating company is to receive up to 5 per cent. on its share capital. The purpose of the free port is to save the duty on merchandise which is to pass through marine exchanges at Malmo and is destined for some other port or country.

"America as yet has no free port," said Mr. Frick, "though there are six large free ports in various parts of the world. Every port of some importance should have at least a part of it arranged as a free port, because a free port does not hurt the interests of the country from a customs point of view, but relieves the merchants of a great deal of difficulty pertaining to customs.

"I believe that with free ports the trade between Sweden and America will develop more and more and will tend to stabilize values of currency in both countries. Also, the possibilities of interchange of goods will be greatly facilitated.

OBSERVES BIRTHDAY OF UNION OF ITALY.

CONSUL PIUMI HOLDS HIS USUAL DINNER PARTY IN HONOR OF THE ANNIVERSARY.

Giovanni Piumi, the local Italian Consul, gave a dinner at his home, 295 San Fernando road, yesterday, to commemorate the forty-ninth anniversary of the unification of Italy. Mr. Piumi has been giving these dinners on this anniversary for a number of years. It was intended to have had the function on Saturday, September 20, the aniversary date, but on account of the presence of President Wilson in this city, a later date was decided on.

Addresses were delivered by Collector John P. Carter and United States District-Attorney J. Robert O'Connor, who congratulated the Consul on representing a redeemed and proseperous Italy. The other guests were United States Marshal C. T. Walton, W. E. White, chief deputy in the office of Collector Carter, and the following deputies, F. R. McReynolds, Thomas Bacher, G. C. Briggs and A. O. Kriete.

ANOTHER CHUNK FROM CITY HALL.

Councilman Says It's Time to Get New Building When Coping Comes Down.

"That's a forewarning to the city that it's time to get a new City Hall," declared Councilman Fleming yesterday when a big chunk of the sandstone coping on the Broadway frontage crashed down to the balcony over the main portal. Building Superintendent Backus, after an investigation, said that the sandstone coping is rotten and should be removed. It is only a few months since the City Hall tower reached such a dangerous condition that sixty-five feet of its top had to be removed.

RAID REVEALS CACHE FOR LIQUOR IN HOUSE.

FIFTEEN MEN CAUGHT, WOMAN ALSO IS HELD WITH HER CHILDREN FOUND THERE.

Following a week's investigation into the alleged sale of intoxicating liquors at the home of Baedo Bopich, 631 Castelar street, members of the metropolitan squad under the command of Jack Phillips last night descended on the house and placed fifteen men under arrest as well as Mrs. Bopich and three children, all of whom are under 16. The juveniles were turned over to Mrs. Ella Purcell, who booked them on charges of delinquency.

After a search of the house the officers discovered in a cleverly hidden cache in the cellar more than 500 gallons of wines and liquors. Three trips of the police patrol were necessary to transfer the liquors to the property room at Central Station.

The proprietor of the place was booked for violation of the Federal liquor law and held in default of bonds of $5000. The mother was charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors while the rest of the men were charged with being drunk.

LOCAL RAINS PREVENT GAME.

While Tigers are Bogged the Angels Garner a Duo.

Essick Believes Teams Should Play Full Quota.

Washington Park Drained by Sponge System.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

The rain not only drowned yesterday's double-header, but somewhat dampened the pennant hopes of the Tigers.

While the Tigers were bogged down here, the Angels were engaged in winning two games up in Seattle, where the sun shines in September—sometimes. Thus Los Angeles increased its lead over Vernon to two and a half games, which comes under the head of salting away bacon for the final week.

When a rainstorm exploded in the wake of our forest fire all precedents for baseball weather, or rather the lack of it, were broken here for September. Also, for it to rain here and shine in Seattle furnishes whatever proof was lacking that the world is upside down.

TABLES TURNED.

Everybody had realized the possibility of rain in Seattle, and Angel fans hated even to think about it, as it would prevent their club from picking up a fat wad of points. By the same token, Tiger fans became exalted when contemplating this possibility. But the tables have been exactly reversed, and it goes further to prove the extreme difficulty of doping a pennant race. Doping a pennant race now involves a knowledge of meteorology, the ability to recite the rain table for forty years back and that 'steenth sense which enables a guy to smell the approach of wet weather.

Frankly, rain either here or in Seattle was something to be deplored, except that it saved our forests. Everybody wanted to see a dry track with no interruption and the best team winning.

UP TO HERR.

How the Tigers are to get these games back is a question. They will play a double-header this afternoon with Salt Lake if the sun is shining at all, but that leaves the series short two games. There is a possibility that these may be played tomorrow if Eddie Herr and his athletes can be induced to delay their departure.

Not only was the rain a detriment to the Tigers through being unable to play, but it would appear to militate against their chances in the remaining contests as it has given the wobbling, arm-weary Salt Lake athletes a needed respite. This is especially true of Herr's beavers, who were in wretched shape.

So the way has been made pretty sloppy for Bill Essick and his bunch.

But as the philosophic Bill says, "If we win under these conditions, the greater the glory, Amen."

SKIPS ONE.

Essick believes that a great mistake is being made in not requiring each club to play the full number of games. He points out that Los Angeles not only is skipping one in Seattle, but played only six in its last visit to Salt Lake. Had those two games been played there would have been a possibility of Los Angeles and Vernon ending the season a tie, which would have necessitated a play-off with interest at fever heat.

His position is certainly tenable. If it is physically possible all scheduled games should be played. Not that the playing of these games or the failure to play them would necessarily have any effect on the chances of either club, but a championship race is supposed to be conducted in conformity with the schedule, unless impossible situations arise.

LOSE AT GATE.

The rain cost the Vernon and Salt Lake clubs a $4000 gate at least. It might be well for those who pray for rain in the future not to bear down quite so hard. Half this much rain would have extinguished the fire in the mountains, and would not have interfered with our great national pastime and amusement. The Pomona brethren went a little too strong. While benefiting the ranchers, the rain impoverished our baseball magnates. The Lord sure has a tough time trying to please everybody.

Much worry regarding our watersheds has been relieved. The rain demonstrated that the watersheds are still there, and can shed water like a duck's back.

FAILS ON JOB.

At the same time, the storm demonstrated the need of a watershed at Washington Park. Nature, while erecting watersheds for the future, fell down on the job at the ball yard. The field out there is flat, but contains depressions that are not visible to the naked eye until it rains. The water seems to pile up in these depressions, and remains until it evaporates or is bailed out.

Ed Schalimo and a force of skilled assistants were yesterday afternoon and all last night bailing out this water with sponges. It is estimated that guy can pick up half a pint of rain water at a time with an average sized sponge. Then the sponge is squeezed and its contents dumped into a bucket. Removing eleven million gallons of water from a depressed ball park half a pint at a time requires almost as much patience and unremitting devotion to duty as picking fly specks out of black pepper.

CINCINNATI (O.) Sept. 27.—Chairman August Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission issued a statement today in which he said the world's series games between the Chicago White Sox and the Cincinnati Nationals would begin in each city promptly at 2 o'clock.

Herrmann said the time for starting the world's series game in 1918 was 2:30 o'clock and that this time was by some oversight allowed to remain in the bulletin for this year's games instead of being changed to 2 o'clock, the time agreed upon for the games to begin.

ALL HAIL TO TYRUS COBB!

World's Greatest Player Leads Batters Again.

Repeats Feat Twelfth Time in Thirteen Years.

Cravath Heads Stickers in the National League.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Closing days of the baseball season find Tyrus Raymond Cobb, star outfielder of the Detroit team, in possession of the American League batting championship for the twelfth time in thirteen years. Cobb, according to unofficial averages today, is leading the race with a mark of .379, twenty-nine points ahead of Veach, his team-mate.

The figures include games of Wednesday. The only year in which Cobb was deposed from the batting championship during his major league career was in 1916, when Tris Speaker forced him out.

RUTH A WONDER.

"Babe" Ruth, the home run marvel, is in seventh place in the list of batting leaders, with an average of .322. Ruth, whose achievement of driving out twenty-eight homers is a world's record, leads the league in extra base hitting, having stretched 138 safe blows for a total of 280 bases. He also leads in scoring, having counted 102 runs.

Eddie Collins, the Chicago second baseman, is topping the base stealers with thirty-two, with George Sisler of St. Louis next in the list with twenty-eight. Other leading American League batters for sixty games: Jackson, Chicago, .348; Sisler, St. Louis, .341; Tobin, St. Louis, .326; Heilman, Detroit, .323; Ruth, Boston, .322; Jacobson, St. Louis, .323; Flagstead, Detroit, .320; Rice, Washington, .319; Collins, Chicago, .317; Peckinaugh, New York, .313.

"GAVVY" THERE.

"Gavvy" Cravath, manager of the Philadelphia club, is ahead in the race for the National League batting title, although the race is close. The averages show Cravath in the lead with .336, with Jim Thorpe of Boston five points behind him. Eddie Roush, star outfielder, with Cincinnati, is third with .322.

Burns of New York, who crowded Heinie Groh, the Cincinnati third baseman, out of the commanding position in scoring, managed to cling to his lead of one run. Burns has registered seventy-nine scores. Zack Wheat, the Brooklyn veteran, and Roush are fighting it out for honors in total base hitting. Roush has a total of 214, while Wheat's mark is 213.

SOME STEALER.

Cutshaw of Pittsburgh is in no danger of being deposed as the leading base stealer, his record of thirty-five being high. Bigbee, a team-mate is next in line, with twenty-nine. Cravath's home run record of eleven remains unchallenged.

Other leading National League batters for sixty or more games: Carey, Pittsburgh, .312; Groh, Cincinnati, .311; Meusel, Philadelphia, .310; Hornsby, St. Louis, .310; Barber, Chicago, .309; Stock, St. Louis, .309; Myers, Brooklyn, .305; Holke, Boston, .297; Wheat, Brooklyn, .295.

WADDELL'S RECORD EQUALLED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—New York won both games today from Philadelphia 4 to 1 and 9 to 2. In the second Shawkey equalled the late Rube Waddell's strike-out record, fanning fifteen batsmen in the first eight innings. Griffin, who got four hits and a pass, was the only man who could fathom his curves. Wingo fanned four times. New York bunched hits on Kinney in the first game and won handily.

SAGEHENS PRACTICE FIGHTING BIG FIRES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

POMONA, Sept. 27.—With practically all of the male contingent of both Pomona College and Pomona High School in the mountains fighting fire, football plans and practices have gone a glimmering for the time being and it will probably be another week before there will be anything like regular football practice which had just started in earnest when the call came for fire fighters.

Coach Nixon, himself, led his bunch of pigskin chasers into the mountains and has not yet returned. The high school candidates for the team simply got up and left when the call for men came and said nothing to anyone. Both schools have much the appearance of seminaries for women at the present time.

NEED A REST.

It is probable that when the men do return it will be a week or so before they recover from their exertion and loss of sleep, sufficiently to make pounding on the football field attractive. Coach Leonard has little chance to develop any kind of a team at the high school before the first scheduled game on October 3.

In the meantime down at Los Angeles, Oxy and U.S.C. are going blissfully foreward with their preparations to wipe Pomona off the map and from the Eagle Rock institution there comes the usual and familiar Stanton pre-game utterances. He declares that the Oxy outfit may not win the championship this year or may not even win a game, but look out for them next year for they will learn to play ball.

AIRMAN WUEST SEEKS GROUND.

First Balloon to Start has a Leaky Valve.

Ensign K. H. Stevens Covers a Long Distance.

Army Gas Bag Reported Loaded at Noontime.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Sept. 27.—The first of the five balloons which started last night in the army-navy balloon race, came to earth four and a half hours after the start, in St. Louis county at 10:30 o'clock last night. It was the army craft from Fort Omaha, Neb. Lieut.-Col. J. W. S. Wuest reported that he had found his bag leaking shortly after the start and the trouble became so apparent that there was nothing to do but descend.

The first navy balloon to land was that piloted by Ensign K. H. Stevens, assisted by Lieut. W. R. Reed, the Pensacola naval station entry. It came down four miles north of Menominee, Mich., after being in the air thirteen hours twenty-five minutes. Menominee is 484 miles from St. Louis on an air line.

STILL IN AIR.

Only two of the five starters remained to be heard from at noon today. The two balloons that have not been heard from and which the judges believe to be still in the air, are the balloon from Langley Field, Va., piloted by Capt. E. P. Phillips and Lieut. Byren T. Burt, and the navy balloon from Washington, D. C., piloted by Lieut. R. Emerson and Ensign F. L. Sloman.

An army balloon was reported to have landed at noon today. It alighted at Pittsfield Wis. It was piloted by Lieut. I. H. Coulter and Harold K. Kine and hailed from Brooks Field, San Antonio, Tex.

According to word received here late today, the army balloon from Langley Field, Va., piloted by Capt. Phillips and Lieut. Burt, came down in Lake Michigan. The telegram stated that both men and equipment were rescued.

The telegram which came to Maj. A. B. Lambert, official of the race, stated that the balloon had come down in the lake about twenty miles from the shore at Marinette, Wis. No details were given as to how the rescue was effected.

JIMMY DARCEY GETS TITLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

RENO (Nev.) Sept. 27.—Jimmy Darcy, otherwise known as Valley Trambitas of Portland, Or., was given the decision over Jack Reeves of San Francisco here last night in a boxing contest that went the full twenty-five rounds. The men are light heavyweights.

TWO GAMES ARE ON FOR TODAY.

Weather permitting, the Salt Lakes and the Vernons will play a double-header at Washington Park this afternoon. The first game will be called at 1:30 o'clock and the second about ten minutes after the finish of the first. Both games can be witnessed for the price of one admission.

TOLEDO WHITEWASHED BY THE SAINT CLUB.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. PAUL (Minn.) Sept. 27.—With a recruit pitcher on the mound, Eddie Foster, Toledo was held down tight when they clashed with the Saints today. Foster joined the Saints last spring but was sent to Memphis soon after and returned only recently. Toledo failed to score while the Saints rolled up four counts. Tomorrow the Saints play their last game of the season with Toledo. Monday night the Saints will be the guests of the Athletic Club, the St. Paul association and the municipal government at a banquet as a token of the city's appreciation for winning the pennant. MANY NIBBLES FOR OAKLAND BALL CLUB.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OAKLAND, Sept. 27.—"Just received another of these things," said J. Cal Ewing, president of the Oakland baseball club, this morning, after reading a telegram from Houdini, the magician, who wired from Los Angeles, asking for details and price of the Oakland franchise in the Pacific Coast Baseball League.

"A number of moving-picture people and others who need publicity are apparently jealous of 'Fatty' Arbuckle, who recently bought the Vernon club and got considerable publicity. I have received half a dozen telegrams recently from people who I know wanted the publicity. I gave them all the courtesy of a reply, 'collect,' advising them to come to Oakland and talk business. That's the reply Mr. Houdini got. We are not hawking the franchise."

Girls to be Organized for Military Drill.

Close Part of State Highway During Improvement.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 27.—There are nearly 300 more high school students in Orange county this year than last year, according to reports from Principals Plummer of Fullerton, Clays of Anaheim, Hammond of Santa Ana and Brunton of Orange. Fullerton has an enrollment of 550 as compared with 450 last year, Santa Ana's enrollment is increased from 750 to 800, Orange from 335 to 380, and Anaheim from 275 to 325. Practically all classes are crowded to the limit and already plans are being considered for increasing the capacity of the high schools. The Fullerton board, it is reported, is now planning to double the capacity of that High School.

The high school principals are urging Congressman William Kettner of San Diego, to support the Smith-Towner bill for establishing the department of education as a part of the President's Cabinet and appropriating $100,000,000 for educational purposes to be apportioned to the various States.

DRILL FOR GIRLS.

Girls of the Santa Ana High School are to have military training. This feature, so long discussed, is being brought about by the formation of a girls' physical organization, under the direction of Miss Birdenia Henry and Commandant Carrier. Part of the physical culture periods will be devoted to military training, part to games, and on Friday afternoons there will be a mass drill on the campus.

Uniforms will be white middies, dark skirts, stockings and tennis slippers. Officers of the girl's battalion are: Holly Lash, major; Violet Cook, adjutant; Berthena Selway, quartermaster; Anita Cox, ordinance officer; Margaret Wallace, sergeant-major.

Captains of the six companies are the Misses Mignon Swales, Mary Covington, Louise Duntley, Grace Dickey, Marion Gerrard and Hazel Palmer.

Other officers are the following: First lieutenants—Elisabeth Anderson, Edna Spencer, Louise Ford, Frances Walker, Ruth Walker, Dorothy Duggan; second lieutenants—Dorothy Carothers, Mirrle Wilson, Irene Harlin, Helen Randall, Alice Strong, Lillian Lykke, first sergeants—Dorothy Garstang, Edith Knox, Dorcas Jaques, Josephine Bull, Edna Patmor, Helen Mateer; second sergeants—Onita Cain, Helen Hankey, Jean Ross, Ruth Finley, Ruth Gatchell, Dorothy Sammis.

CLOSE STATE HIGHWAY.

The Los Angeles-to-San Diego State highway will be closed to traffic early the coming week from Irvine to the El Toro road and will remain closed probably two months, according to announcement today by County Surveyor J. L. McBride. While the road is closed the State Highway Commission's force of men will be busy on this stretch of pavement putting on a one-and-one-half-inch wearing surface and increasing the width of the road by the addition of concrete shoulders two and one-half feet wide on each side and six inches in thickness to the present pavement. This improvement will be appreciated, as the lack of shoulders has made traveling there dangerous and has resulted in many accidents. Eventually the entire strip from Irvine to Galivan will be so improved, but the present improvement will extend three and one-half miles south from Irvine.

While the State highway is closed all through traffic will be routed via the oil-surfaced Trabuco road through El Toro. Going south, autoists may take this road either from Culver's Corner or Irvine.

COMPANY INCORPORATES.

Articles of incorporation of the Placentia-Richfield Central Oil Company were filed with the County Clerk here today. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000 in 1,000,000 shares of a par value of $1 each. The principal place of business is Placentia, near the Chapman gusher. Directors of the company are George F. Collins and Clarence E. McFadden of Richfield, Earl C. Hazzard of Placentia, Newton M. Durkee of Anaheim and M. MacFarland Johnson of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Blanch L. Newkirk of West Riverside was in the Superior Court today and heard her son, John, aged 22, committed to State's prison for a term of from one to ten years by Judge R. Y. Williams. Young Newkirk had pleaded guilty to robbing the cash register of Huntington Inn at Huntington Beach of $70 in cash. The boy, it is said, was formerly an inmate of the State School at Ione.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—[Advertisement.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—[Advertisement.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" to be genuine must be marked with the safety "Bayer Cross." Always buy an unbroken Bayer package which contains proper directions to safely relieve Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Colds and pain. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents at drug stores—larger packages also. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—[Advertisement.

MARKET HERE GOOD.

Publisher Sees Good Chances for "Pop" Music.

Much impressed with the chances for developing the popular music market on this coast, Sam Fox, publisher of Cleveland, has practically decided to establish a branch of his concern on the Pacific Coast. At present he is divided in his choice of location between San Francisco and Los Angeles. He has been looking over the ground while spending a vacation in this city with his wife and family.

Since Mr. Fox arrived here, arrangements have been made through Harry Kerr, staff lyric writer of the publishing company, who resides here to celebrate a Sam Fox week at the local theaters and cafes. This will now he carried out. Many of the local theaters are to play the new Fox compositions including "One Sweet Day," "Love Me," "Karzan," and the novelty songs "Me-Ow" and "Taxi," this week. Special programmes of the music have been made up at the larger cafes for dancing and cabaret entertainment.

Mr. Fox predicts that the coming year will be the biggest for popular music ever known. "Music was one of the prime factors in winning the war," he said recently, "and that it will enjoy the fruits of the new era of prosperity that is now sweeping the country goes without saying from the popularity it acquired with the soldiers, as well as the people at home.

"Music is a real necessity in cheering the hearts of toilers as well as soldiers, and in place of the martial airs we have been hearing, and the jazz that has been merely a fad, the people are seeking the sweet beautiful and restful songs of individual charm."

His belief that it is easier to sell music if one keeps in close touch with the people—the real music buyers—is actuating Mr. Fox in his plan to establish a branch of his Cleveland office here, where the market is large because of the many motion picture and theatrical people, and where new talent is at hand for composition.

WOULD CLOSE HOUSE.

District-Attorney Woolwine filed suit yesterday, invoking the red light abatement act against the premises at 518 1-2 East Ninth street, alleged to have been raided by the police last Thursday night. He asks that the place be declared a nuisance and closed for one year. J. L. Doyle, as agent, and Jessie Elliott and others as occupants, were named as defendants.

Contracts ahead! Better see "Broken Blossoms" while you can—lights, music, prologues, the Balalaika. Never again shown like this.—[Advertisement.

CUMNOCK SCHOOL TO HOLD FOUNDERS' DAY.

WILL COMMEMORATE THE WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY TWO WOMEN EDUCATORS.

On Wednesday exercises will be held at Cumnock School of Expression, commemorating the work of Mrs. Merrill Moore Grigg and Mrs. Kate W. Galpin, founders of the school. Miss Dora A. Haller of the Cumnock faculty will speak on Mrs. Grigg's life and work and Mrs. Oliver Brant will tell of Mrs. Galpin's educational work and aims, and her ideas for the Galpin-Shakespeare Club, which she founded.

The programme for Founders' Day, it is announced, will be informal and open to the public. A number of graduates of the school will return for the occasion, among them Miss Wilhelmine Wilkes, the play producer. Registrations for the full semester and Saturday morning normal courses will begin on Tuesday.

New courses in voice, diction, story-telling, how to read, how to teach reading, aesthetic dancing and play production will begin next Saturday morning. These courses have been specially planned to meet the needs of teachers and others who desire preparation for that profession.

Because of the increasing enrollments at the school plans have been drawn for a new building for junior school students. The structure will contain an auditorium, classrooms and lockers, and is expected to be complete within six weeks.

ELKS CELEBRATE.

To Make Corner-stone Laying at Anaheim Big Event.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, Sept. 27.—The greatest event—or one of the greatest—in Southern California Elkdom is scheduled for Anaheim on Sunday, October 12, when Grand Exalted Ruler Frank L. Rain will be here to lay the corner-stone of Anaheim's new $85,000 Elks' hall, whose erection has been definitely determined upon. The Grand Lodge party will be at the San Diego State Elk convention, October 6-11, and will stop over here for the local ceremony at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon on their return trip to Los Angeles.

Besides Grand Exalted Ruler Rain, there will be present Grand Secretary Fred B. Robinson, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, William Abbott, John P. Sullivan, Henry A. Melvin and Raymond Benjamin. There will be two or three drill teams in uniform and at least two bands. The Los Angeles street, upon which the new Elks' home will be located, will be specially decorated for the occasion.

Five Oil Properties Are Included in

Do you realize what that means with a capitalization of $150,000?

We find it difficult to decide which one of the five Frank Company holdings will prove the largest revenue producer. We do believe, however, very positively and firmly, that each one of them will prove to be healthy oil producers, and we believe that each one will be worth far more than the entire capitalization of the company.

One Share of Stock, However, Covers an Investment in All

The fact that the Frank Oil Company's officials—all practical business men of Texas—are devoting their most intelligent energies to the rapid development of all of these five holdings is the best rason why, we believe, securities in this Company at the present first levels are morally certain to be unobtainable in the very near future. Increased prices for these securities, once any one of the above properties develops a flow of oil, should make your investment today return you more than a gratifying reward.

A big hole has been made in the last block of 25,000 shares.

We don't wish to appear to hurry anyone into an investment, except as their best judgment tells them that Frank Oil Company is "in a class by itself."

Days are being numbered. This offer cannot, will probably not, be open much longer.

AS WORLD TRADE CENTER.

That Los Angeles is fast becoming known as a world trading center is attested by numerous letters received recently by the Chamber of Commerce and the Los Angeles-Pacific Navigation Company from important foreign ports, asking for details relative to harbor facilities here and the plans for extending direct shipping.

The Chamber of Commerce monthly bulletin reaches some 500 leading exporters and importers in foreign countries bordering the Pacific and frequent notices in this official organ have attracted the favorable attention of prospective traders and acquainted them with the possibilities of Los Angeles as a great shipping center.

The Los Angeles Pacific Navigation Company, initiated by the chamber, and the first shipping concern to send a cargo from this port to the orient under a Los Angeles banner, have received numerous clippings from foreign newspapers, commenting favorably upon Los Angeles Harbor, and references to the port in the correspondence received by the chamber and the shipping company are most gratifying.

Letters have been received from large shipping concerns in the Malay states, Ceylon, Siam, China, Japan, the Philippine Islands, Australia, New Zealand, England, Holland, Central America, New South Wales and Mexico.

A reading notice concerning the Los Angeles shipping company in the Pinang Gazette Press, the leading publication of the Straits Settlements, gives the American Consul at Pinang as their authority for the news and his advices were received from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

RUSH WORK ON TAXES FOR SALARY RISES.

ILLNESS OF DIRECTOR CAUSES MAYOR TO DETAIL OTHERS TO COMPLETE ORDINANCE.

J. S. McQuiston, city efficiency director, is seriously ill, and this has called a temporary halt on the work of completing the new license ordinance that is required to raise municipal revenues so that demands for increases of salaries in the police, fire and other departments may be met.

The completion of this ordinance is considered a matter of such importance that yesterday Mayor Snyder conferred with members of the Council's Finance Committee, and then directed that Arthur Eldridge, his assistant secretary, formerly in the efficiency department, be detailed to work on the ordinance, City Clerk Wilde and City Attorney Burnell were each requested to provide assistants from their offices to go on with the work that was in charge of Mr. McQuiston.

Beginning tomorrow day and night sessions will be held by the Finance Committee and the corps working on the ordinance, in order that it may be ready for presentation to the Council at the earliest possible date. It will probably carry the emergency clause, so that it may go into effect immediately after its passage and publication. Through this license ordinance, it is expected that the city's revenues will be increased approximately $1,000,000 a year, and at least 200 lines of business and professional work not now subject to taxation will be required to pay the special tax.

H. ... of 121 East Avenue 32 yes- ...alled at Central Police Sta- ...d asked the police to make ...effort to capture the slayers of his son. Following Mr. Sleeper's plea the Pacific Electric offered a reward of $1000 for the capture of the two men.

Mr. Sleeper, in his statement yesterday, declared that a desperate effort to frighten his son away from his work was made by strikers before his murder. Once the youth, who was only 22 years of age, was attacked by two striking car men near Watts. The strikers were driven from the street car by deputy sheriffs. The second time an automobile was run across the track in front of his car in an effort to bring about a wreck. On many occasions, according to Mr. Sleeper, his son told him of threats being made and declarations that he would "get his" coming from different strikers.

"The murder of my son," said Mr. Sleeper, "is without doubt the work of some of the strikers or some of their friends. I believe that the negroes were set upon my boy by the strikers and I think that the killing was the outcome of the threats made against him."

Motorman Sleeper was employed by the Pacific Electric for a year before going to war. He served almost a year in France and returned to Los Angeles from the army just three weeks before his murder. He remained with his family for one week and then returned to his position with the street car company. When he enlisted in the army his name was not dropped from the Pacific Electric rolls and he was returned to his old run as soon as he applied for his position.

Mr. Sleeper yesterday announced that the funeral of his son will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. from Pierce Brothers' undertaking establishment.

LENINE RED IS RUNNING STRIKE

gle between them must go on until one or the other is crushed.

WANTS REVOLUTION.

"For years the progressive workers have realized the necessity for this revolution. They have also realized that it must be brought about by the workers themselves.

"The wages system has divided the immense bulk of society—the capitalists and the working class. The interests of these two classes are radically opposed to each other. It is the interest of the capitalist class to rob the workers of as much of their product as possible, and the interest of the workers to prevent this robbery as far as they can. A guerrilla warfare, known as the class struggle and evidenced by the many strikes, working class political eruptions and the many acts of oppression committed by capitalists upon their workers, constantly goes on between these opposing classes.

"The capitalists who are heartlessness and cupidity personified being the dominant class of society and the shapers of its institutions, have organized the whole fabric of society with a view to keeping the working class in slavery. It is therefore evident that if the workers are to become free it must be through their own efforts and directly against those of the capitalists. Hence the revolutionary slogan—the emancipation of the workers must be wrought by the workers themselves."

Foster placed himself in his present position by ingeniously applying what he calls the policy of "boring from within" the American Federation of Labor. He was at one time connected with the I.W.W., an organization formed, among other things, to destroy the American Federation of Labor because of its conservative methods of policies. He found after long experience that the American Federation cannot be destroyed by attacks from without and conceived the idea of transforming it into a revolutionary syndicalist organization, from within.

He joined the American Federation of Labor and for a long time worked quietly, unostentatiously and diligently. His first big job, a job that drew the attention of the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, was the organization of the stockyards and packing-houses in Chicago and Kansas City, a task which other union labor men had found difficult.

HONORED BY GOMPERS.

So energetic and capable an organizer did he prove that when Samuel Gompers and other leaders held a meeting in Chicago more than a year ago to discuss plans for organizing the workers in the steel industry Foster was among those who attended and was given the post of secretary-treasurer of the committee to organize the steel workers.

Foster made no attempt to deny he joined the American Federation of Labor with the purpose of transforming it into a revolutionary syndicalist organization, but he was clever enough to play the game in accordance with the accepted rules and regulations laid down in the American Federation of Labor constitution. He never laid himself open to attack for violations of the provisions of this constitution.

GIVEN A FREE HAND.

He ultimately won the confidence of Samuel Gompers and was given a free hand in carrying out the task allotted to him in the steel industry. When Mr. Gompers made his last trip to Europe and John Fitzpatrick assumed the chairmanship of the committee at work on the organization of the steel workers, Foster really became the chief figure in the organization campaign. Like his teacher, Nikolai Lenine, who ingeniously took advantage of a period of great unrest and upheaval to propagate his ideas and carry out his plans, Foster carried on feverishly his work of organization and agitation in the steel industry. When Mr. Gompers returned from Europe he was confronted with an accomplished fact. When Foster urged that the moment to strike at the United States Steel Corporation had arrived, Mr. Gompers and the other conservative leaders associated with him were obliged either to agree or step aside or stand the combined attack of the radical factions of the American Federation of Labor, thus endangering their control of the organization.

NO USE FOR BALLOT.

Foster has no use for political action—for the ballot—and pins all his hopes on the labor unions. He believes that by gaining control of the industries the workers can gain control of society and he urges the workers to do so and to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat over every other class in society. To justify this he has created his own system of ethics—the syndicalist system of ethics.

"The syndicalist is characterized by the harmony that exists between his theories and his tactics," he says, "he realizes that the capitalist class is his mortal enemy; that it must be overthrown, the wages system abolished and the new society he has outlined established, if he is to live; and he is proceeding to the accomplishment of these tasks with unparalleled directness. He allows nothing to swerve him from his course and lead him in an indirection.

VICIOUS TEACHINGS.

"The syndicalist knows that capitalism is organized robbery. And he consistently considers and treats captialists as thieves plying their trade. He knows they have no more right to wealth they have amassed than a burglar has to his loot and the idea of expropriating them without remuneration seems as natural to him as for the footpad-victim to take back his stolen property without paying the footpad for it. From long experience he has learned that the so-called legal and inalienable rights of man are but pretenses with, which to deceive working men, that in reality rights are only enjoyed by those capable of enforcing them.

"END JUSTIFIES MEANS."

"In his choice of weapons to fight his capitalist enemies the syndicalist is no more careful to select those that are fair, just or civilized, than is a householder attacked in the night by a burglar. He knows he is engaged in a life and death struggle with an absolutely lawless and unscrupulous enemy and considers his tactics only from the standpoint of their attractiveness; with him the end justifies the means.

"He proposes to develop, regardless of capitalist conceptions of legality, fairness, right, etc, a greater power than his capitalist enemies have, and then to wrest from them by force the industries they have stolen from him by force and duplicity and to put an end forever to the wages system. He proposes to bring about the revolution by the general strike."

The general strike theory is developed by Foster thus:

"The power of the workers to disorganize and paralyze the delicately adjusted capitalist society and the inability of the capitalists to cope with this power are shown by every large strike conducted by modern methods. This has been even more clearly demonstrated than usual by the recent great strikes in England. The two days' strike of the railroaders paralyzed England and the frantic capitalist class hastily brought it to a close.

"Once the general strike is in active operation, the greatest obstacle to its success will be the armed forces of capitalism, soldiers, police, detectives, etc. This formidable force will be used energetically by the capitalists to break the general strike. The syndicalists have given much study to the problem presented by this force and have found the solution for it.

CUT OFF SUPPLIES.

"Their proposed tactics are very different from those used by rebels in former revolutions. They are not going to mass themselves and allow themselves to be slaughtered by capitalism's trained murderers in the orthodox way. There is a safer, more effective and more modern method. They are going to defeat the armed forces by disorganizing and demoralizing them.

"A fruitful source of this disorganization will be the extreme difficulty the armed forces will experience in securing supplies and transportation. Modern armies to be effective must have immense arsenals, powder works and other industrial establishments behind them to furnish them their supplies of ammunition, arms, food and clothing. They also must have the railroads constantly at their depot for their transportation.

"When the general strike has halted the industries the army will be stricken with paralysis. Another source of disorganization will be the division of the armed forces into minute detachments to guard the many beleaguered gates of capitalism. The strikers, or revolutionists, will be everywhere and will everywhere seize and dissipate whatever capitalist property they can lay their hands on."

SHE HATED THE IRISH, SO WANTED DIVORCE.

CELTIC ATTORNEYS WIN DECREE FOR HUSBAND; WIFE WED FOR TRIP.

William Balsley Thompson married Emogene Thompson in Oklahoma, October 4, 1916. They separated in Huntington Park, March 29, 1917. In Judge Crail's court yesterday, the story was told of an unusual reason for both marriage and divorce. The father of Mr. Thompson testified that a week before the separation, he had a talk with his daughter-in-law. He asked her what the trouble was, and she replied: "I am a man hater."

"What in the world did you marry my boy for?" she was asked.

"Well, to tell you the truth, I married him so that I could co to California," was the reply.

It also developed that Mrs. Thompson had no love for the Irish. She wrote her husband a letter which was introduced in evidence. She stated:

"Am so tired of this Irish name I have to carry that it makes he sick to hear it. I don't want people to think I am Irish or would associate with one. They are all devils. That is the only reason I want a divorce I still want you to know that I fee like you owe me money for the trouble you have caused me. I never expect to find peace again in any way.

"I think you should send me some money and get a divorce from me at once so I can buy back my maiden name. I thought when I married you that I would have a home and a companion and a protection from the world, but it put me in a worse predicament in every way."

Mr. Thompson sued for divorce, employing Attorneys Thomas V. Cassidy and James Roche, two good Irish names, to represent him. Judge Crail granted Mr. Thompson the decree.

NOT [illegible]RTION.

Financing Husband's Trip Causes Woman to Lose Divorce.

Another Santa Ana marriage went on the rocks when Robert Campbell deserted Anna Catharine Campbell three years after the ceremony, she declared in Judge Crail's court yesterday. She testified in divorce proceedings that she gave her husband $325, and $5 more the day he went. This was all she had, she declared. He told her he would send the money back, but she says he never did.

Judge Crail remarked:

"It would appear that you gave him all the money you had to get him to go. That is not desertion under the law of California."

Mrs. Campbell declared he did not go with her consent. The decree was denied.

GET BUILDINGS FOR NEW COUNTY OFFICES.

STRUCTURE AT NEW HIGH AND COURT STREETS TO GIVE BETTER FLOOR SPACE.

The county now has title to the Bradbury Building and the adjoining building formerly occupied by the Title Insurance and Trust Company at New High and Court streets, and plans are being prepared to alter them to accommodate county departments. The county paid $80,000 for the buildings. The Bradbury Building is separated from the Hall of Records by a narrow alley.

Supervisor Bean stated yesterday that this alley will be bridged, affording access from the Hall of Records to the Bradbury Building. Floor plans have been prepared, showing the changes decided upon. The outdoor relief will be moved from Temple street and will occupy one or two floors of the new annex.

It is proposed to have a general store from which departments will be supplied, thereby abolishing the requisition system. Material will be purchased in carload lots instead of piecemeal, thus saving the county the difference between wholesale and retail prices in cost.

The Tax Collector's offices will be moved into the annex. A large skylight will afford plenty of light for the workers in that department.

JUDGE HAS A CHANCE YET TO BEAT CHARGE.

Because there is some doubt as to whether or not Judge Hewitt and his court parked their automobiles at the curb of the Monrovia Park last Thursday, a practice prohibited by ordinance and styled a misdemeanor, Justice Burr continued the case against the defendants until Thursday.

Judge Hewitt and his court attaches, after taking the deposition of a man in Monrovia, left their automobiles and went into Spanish Canyon. Upon their return, Deputy Marshal Johnson told them they were under arrest. The hearing was set for yesterday, but by telephone Judge Hewitt was notified of the continuance.

CITY LIBRARY OPENS NEW OLIVE EXHIBIT.

The Public Library is having an interesting olive exhibit on the eighth floor of the Metropolitan Building. Books and pamphlets on olive culture are being displayed.

Since 1769, the days of the padres and the old missions, the olive has been one of California's most prized products. The hardy followers of Junipero Serra brought it from Mexico and planted it in San Diego. There are now 18,977 bearing olive trees in California. California produces 60,000 gallons of olive oil and 750,000 gallons of pickled olives a year.

Do You Know Good Clothes Are Scarce?

Men of the United States this Fall will not be able to find enough clothes—good clothes—to go 'round. Reliable woolens are too scarce. Skilled tailors too few. Production is far behind demand—will be for months to come. In such a situation is it likely every clothes maker will be "fussy" on the subject of quality? When he can turn out his product about as he pleases and still find a ready market for it, is it likely?

Perhaps you have never before inquired about the origin of your clothes—never before thought it necessary. Well, today it is the most necessary step in buying a suit of clothes—to find out about the house which made it. Is it a house which aims to make clothes better—or merely to make them faster? Is it a house with the moral courage to shut its eyes to unfilled orders, but to keep them wide open in maintaining standards? Is it a house with a long, clear, steady record for quality? Is it a house you can trust?

DIES FROM BURNS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TULARE, Sept. 27.—Mary, aged 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cotta, died at a local hospital from burns received when she accidentally set her clothing on fire. The child was playing in the yard of her home, eight miles west of here, with a box of matches, which her parents said they did not see her secure. The mother was attracted by the little girl's screams and found her clothing a mass of flames. She died three hours later.

MEXICANS HOLD BIG CARNIVAL.

Engage in Belated Celebration of Natal Day.

Festival Given Sanction of Gov. Cantu.

Horse Races and Band Concerts Attractions.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL CENTRO, Sept. 27.—Mexicali's deferred celebration of Mexico's national day of independence will be held tomorrow across the border. Mexicans in the Imperial Valley generally celebrated the event on the proper day, September 15, but those across the line were forced by edict of Gov. Cantu to defer it until tomorrow.

The original programme has been condensed until it will occupy one day. The Celebration Committee consists of Hector Gonzales, president; Alfred J. Nunez, treasurer; Jesus G. Quinard and Manuel de la Pena. Invitations have been extended to many prominent persons.

The announcements say the celebration is given with the sanction of Gov. Cantu. The event is in commemoration of the one hundred and ninth anniversary of the declaration of Mexican independence.

At 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning Gov. Cantu will receive in his office the civil and military authorities of the district, and they will go in a body to the school building where the programme will be carried out.

Following the overture by the band from the Twenty-fifth Regiment, the principal address will be given by Sr. Guilabaldo Zavala and he will be followed by an address by Senorita Professor Maria Cruz Echeverria.

"La Bandera Mexicana," words by E. C. Rebemen and music by J. Hernandez, will be given as a compliment to the alumni of the Mexicali High School. A poem read by the author, Senor Isaac Bolanas Cacho, will follow.

At 5 o'clock a series of horse races will be held on Porfirio Diaz avenue, between the school building and Gov. Cantu's residence. From 7:30 to 12 p.m. the Mexicali Band will give a concert.

Officers at Tulare Investigate Recent Robberies.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TULARE, Sept. 27.—Grover C. Willey, who says he came from Southern California, but who refuses to tell anything else of himself, was arrested by local officers while endeavoring to sell to professional men a quantity of gold of the kind used for dental fillings.

When Willey was searched at the jail materials used by drug addicts were found in his possession. Later, after a talk with Willey, the police arrested a man who gave the name of Chester Pruitt and who was in Willey's company when they arrived here.

The two men are to be held pending an investigation into reports of robbery of dental offices in this county, in which gold and other materials were stolen.

LEADING REPUBLICANS PROTEST TO JOHNSON.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 27.—That the Republicans of Riverside are united in their opposition to Senator Hiram Johnson's course in fighting the League of Nations was shown by the telegram, which was forwarded to him Friday. All factions of the party were represented in the signatures.

"We the undersigned citizens of Riverside, Cal., and members of the Republican party, have become convinced by a study of the speeches made by yourself and President Wilson, that our national interests and our obvious mission as one of the great nations of the world, require an acceptance of the principles contained in the proposed peace covenant and League of Nations as a means of preserving peace and engendering good feeling between all peoples; and we, therefore, earnestly request that you cease your opposition to the League of Nations and the peace covenant and use your best endeavors to secure the early ratification of the same without amendment or reservation."

SILENT TRIBUTE TO FALLEN HEROES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BANNING, Sept. 27.—A unique feature of the welcome-home celebration given to Banning's returned soldiers Saturday was the silent commemoration of the five Banning boys, who lost their lives in the world war. At the conclusion of Mayor Gates's address of welcome, a gong sounded, the service flag on the City Hall was lowered to half-mast and the entire assemblage stood in silence for one minute in memory of William Miller, Paul Smith, C. H. L. Ghriest, Jr., Samuel Smith and John Fowler. The ceremony ended with the blowing of taps by a bugler.

DEMOBILIZE FLAGS.

Tributes to Service Men Objects of Appropriate Ceremony.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Sept. 27.—Demobilization of the service flags of the First Methodist and the Presbyterian churches will be observed here Sunday night. The ceremony will take place at the former church. Speeches will be made, the service roll called, taps sounded for the dead and discharge chevrons pinned on the individual stars. The flags will then be committed to the care of proper custodians in each church to be put away and kept as a trophy of the world war.

YOUNG BOYS AID IN FIGHTING FIRE.

POMONA YOUTHS RENDER VALUABLE SERVICE IN COMBATTING BLAZE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Sept. 27.—When it comes to handing out the bouquets for strenuous efforts put forth in aiding to check the progress of the devastating mountain fires, which have been raging in this district, the small boys must not be forgotten. An example of the faithful and enthusiastic service rendered, was brought to the Chamber of Commerce headquarters today when Raymond Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Beck, and Francis Blodgett arrived after having made twenty miles over the rough and unknown mountain trails in three and one-half hours. Once in this time the Beck boy became lost in the myriad of small canyons and it was only after some effort that he was able to again find his way out. The boys left Evey's Canyon with a number of messages including several being sent out by the fire fighters to parents or families, telling of their safety. Beck says that they ran nearly half of the way and did not waste a moment along the road, so eager were they to deliver the messages in the shortest possible time. These boys had volunteered their services. Since the fire started the headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce has been the big attraction for the small boys and they have hung around the place all eager to get a chance to go to the fire line.

Another instance is cited where Messenger Shields, who owns a motorcycle, called Charles Howard out of bed at 6:30 in the morning to tender his services and the services of his machine. He was sent to Evey's Canyon and was back at 7:50 and during the morning he made four trips to the different camps, literally burning up the mountain roads.

NEW BANK OFFICERS.

Ontario Man Heads County Organization of Financiers.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Sept. 27.—H. E. Swan, president of the First National Bank of Ontario, was last night elected president of the San Bernardino County Bankers' Association, when the organization held its annual banquet at Hotel Casa Blanca.

W. T. Smith of San Bernardino was elected first vice-president; C. W. Curtis of Colton, second vice-president; R. C. Norton of Upland, secretary, and W. C. Goebel of Victorville, treasurer.

The banquet was attended by fifty and the principal speakers of the evening were M. H. W. Williams of Redlands, County Treasurer, and Harlow Wilson of Upland.

WOMEN OBJECT TO SUNDAY FAIR.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 27.—At a special meeting of the W.C.T.U. held at the home of Mrs. J. P. Guinn, resolutions were adopted protesting against the proposal to have the Tulare County Victory Fair, which is to be held in Visalia, remain open on Sunday. Similar resolutions have been adopted by chapters of the union in other parts of the county.

There has been some comment, friendly and otherwise, on the fact that the fair plans are in charge of J. D. (Parson Jake) Allen, former pastor of a Visalia church, and who recently returned from France, where he served as an army chaplain.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Sept. 27.—The State Board of Education has decided to submit to local authorities the issue of permitting the organization of chapters of the Junior Red Cross. The local board has decided that no organized effort will be made to get the 100 per cent. membership that was secured during the war period. There will probably be chapters maintained in the school and interest will be wide, but there will no doubt be many who will not care to take an active part now.

HALLOWEEN DANCE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SEAL BEACH, Sept. 27. — The Chamber of Commerce at a meeting held last night voted to give a Halloween dance Friday night, October 31. Committees were appointed for the various departments in planning the event. The Halloween dance given by the Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce two years ago was a decided success and it was planned to make the occasion an annual event, but the one scheduled for last year had to be abandoned because of the influenza epidemic.

HEADS ASSOCIATION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Sept. 27.—Frank Lamberson, former District Attorney, and one of the widely-known young lawyers of this section of California, has been named the Tulare county chairman of the Roosevelt Memorial Association.

A campaign for funds is to be started October 20 in all parts of the county to raise the quota of $3000 assigned to Tulare county as its part of the $5,000,000 to be raised nationally. Mr. Lamberson is expected to appoint subcommittees in all county cities and towns.

UNION PLANS BOYCOTT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

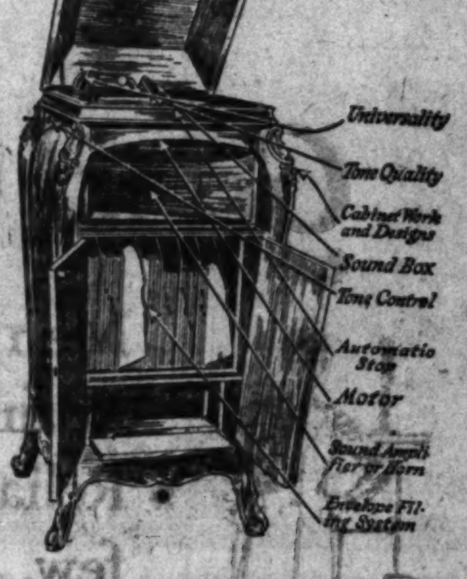
LINDSAY, Sept. 27.—Officials of the Central California Fruit Workers' Union have established a "dead line" around the Tulare county citrus district in the form of an order to its members to refuse to accept work with any of the packing plants in the territory named until the union's newly-published contract has been accepted by employers.

Packing-house managers are maintaining a consistent silence, having refused either to accept the contract or discuss it.

RETAINS OLD MANAGER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SEAL BEACH, Sept. 26.—Roy Edwards, who for some time was manager of the Jewel City Cafe for Gustav Mann, has been engaged by F. C. Blankenship, the new proprietor, as manager. Edwards has a large acquaintance among members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and other organizations. During the last season he was manager of the Pavilion at Alamitos Bay.



THE INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY
Sonora
CLEAR AS A BELL

Consider Carefully the Points of Merit of This Wonderful Phonograph

Below, we list a number of the features of this instrument as enumerated by the Sonora Company for whom we are exclusive representatives in Los Angeles

Before you purchase your phonograph, hear the Sonora. Study its sixteen features individually and compare them, one by one, with those of other makes. Make a fair and critical comparison.

By all means do not neglect hearing the Sonora play. The Sonora tone is one of the greatest secrets of its phenomenal success. There is keen pride of possession in owning a Sonora Phonograph.

(1) Tone Quality: Sonora's tone is as brilliant as the sparkle of gems and as sweet as an old love song—as clear as the Sabbath church bells' chimes and as true as the ring of a gong.

(2) Sound Amplifier: Made of wood throughout, built on patented scientific principles.

(3) Universality: Sonora is designed primarily to play all makes of disc records perfectly when played with a Semi-Permanent Silvered Steel, Diamond, or Sapphire Needle, and the Sonora needs no extra attachments or changing of tubes.

(4) Cabinet Work and Designs: The beauty of the Sonora tone has a charming echo in the graceful, flowing lines and in the handsome finish of the cabinet work—the "bulge" models particularly displaying remarkable beauty.

(5) Sound Box: Because so much care is taken in the selection of the materials used in the construction of the Sonora Sound Box, and because exclusive features of construction are employed, the results are of great importance in securing the rich and distinctive Sonora tone.

(6) Tone Modifier: The Sonora modifies its tone at the throat of the amplifier.

(7) Motors: Sonora takes pride in being a leader in Motor construction, both in the standpoint of durability and running time. Sonora Motors run from fifteen to forty-five minutes with one winding, and are built to last a lifetime.

(8) Automatic Stop: This is thoroughly reliable yet exceedingly simple in its operation, requiring but one adjustment.

(9) Tone Arm: The metal tone arm of the Sonora is quite different from other series. It operates on a pivot bearing, has no irregular curves, and is solid and substantial in construction.

(10) All Wooden Tone Passage: (Extra.) This is a feature which is exclusively Sonora's, and adds the final element to perfect the reproduction, producing a result which is almost unbelievable until the Sonora, built with this equipment, is heard.

(11) Envelope Filing System (In models above the Trovatore:) This is of ideal simplicity and convenience, and permits the quick location of any record desired.

(12) Motor Meter: The Invincible and Supreme are both equipped with this valuable device which indicates at all times the number of records the motor will play before rewinding is necessary.

(13) Exterior Trimmings: The trimmings of the Sonora are quiet and dignified in appearance but are extremely attractive, being entirely free from any gaudiness. This adds materially to the elegance of design which is especially noticeable in the "bulge" models.

(14) Certificate of Guaranty: A veritable insurance policy against defective materials, poor workmanship, etc., is the Guaranty which accompanies every Sonora.

(15) Patent Protection: Sonora is one of the very few instruments operating under the basic patents of the phonograph industry. When you purchase a Sonora you are assured that the foundation and future of the manufacturer are secured.

(16) Semi-Permanent Silvered Needle: This remarkable improvement saves needle changing (playing from fifty to one hundred times,) is more economical, more convenient, and adds greatly to the life and enjoyment of the records.

TELLS OF WORK FOR ARMENIAN CHILDREN.

NEW YORK WOMAN ASKS LOCAL CLUB TO ADOPT ORPHANS AND EDUCATE THEM.

That the children of Armenia must be educated in order to be self-supporting and thereby better conditions in that country is the statement of Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea, a member of the New York League of Advertising Women, who is visiting Los Angeles in the interest of the Syrian-Armenian Relief Commission. In speaking to members of the Los Angeles club at an informal luncheon yesterday, Mrs. Duryea brought out the special needs of Armenia.

"It is essentially the work of the Allies to aid Armenia and the need is so great that we are confident of the success of the movement if the actual facts are really known," she said. "The work is handled in a most systematic way and every dollar is used to advantage. One Armenian child may be fed for a year for $60, but we feel that more than this must be done to really accomplish the results we desire. About $120 a year is required to board and educate each child."

Mrs. Duryea is urging each club to adopt at least one or two Armenian orphans and already a number are making plans to carry out this idea.

The Woman's Advertising Club of Los Angeles yesterday received word from the New Orleans convention of Associated Advertising Clubs, that their trophy for the best constructive work done by a woman's advertising club in the country has been awarded the Chicago Women's Advertising Club. Miss Jane Martin of New York, who is well-known in Los Angeles, was elected member of the National Executive Committee. Miss Martin, in accepting this position, has the honor of being the first woman to be admitted to this body of men on an actual footing. The Los Angeles club was represented by Miss Florence Shindler, Miss Helen Royce and Mrs. Eleanor Germo.

NEW YORK PASTOR AT THE PRO-CATHEDRAL.

At the 11 o'clock service at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral today, the Rev. Louis T. Wood, a noted clergyman of New York City, will be the speaker. Mr. Wood is making a tour of the Pacific Coast in the interest of the nation-wide campaign of the Episcopal Church. This is a campaign not for money, but for everything that will make the church more efficient for the great work now ahead of it in the reorganization of all branches of life.

To Acquire Curly Hair In a Single Night

Hair tortured with the hot curling iron is bound to become dry, harsh and brittle, as so many know from sad experience. It's far more sensible to use plain liquid silmerine, which can do no harm and which produces a curliness much prettier and more natural in appearance. This has the peculiar property of drying in the most beautiful waves and creases imaginable. It is also a fine dressing for the hair, preserving its texture and health, keeping it delightfully soft and glossy. A few ounces from the druggist will last for weeks, so it is not at all expensive.

Liquid silmerine is not sticky or greasy and it won't stain or streak hair or scalp. A convenient way to use it is to pour a little into a saucer and then with a clean tooth brush apply evenly to the hair from root to tip. If this is done before retiring the added glory to one's "crowning glory" will be quite in evidence in the morning. The hair will be nice and fluffy when combed out.—[Advertisement.

CAMOUFLAGE IS A WAR WORD

that fits splendidly into a description of PURLETTS, the popular candy laxative. The natural and rather unpleasant tastes of the ingredients are completely camouflaged by a candy-like flavor. The pleasing deception does not interfere with the action of the tablets—they are completely efficient as a laxative.

PURLETTS contain no drastic purgatives and, therefore, restore the normal tone of the bowels and help to re-establish the normal functions. There are 36 of these candy-like tablets in the 25c boxes.

PURLETTS are featured in all stores of The Owl Drug Company.—[Advertisement.

CHICAGO, ILL., March 28.

MR. W. F. McBURNEY, Los Angeles, Cal.:

Dear Sir: It affords me pleasure to testify to the efficiency of your Kidney and Bladder Cure. I have been troubled with my kidneys and bladder for over four years. I have been treated by Dr. C. A. Purdy and Dr. Frank Wells, the latter being my son. I regret to say they did me no good. I was advised to spend the winter in Los Angeles, which I did. On the night before I left for home I got a bottle of your medicine. The first dose did me good and I was well when I reached home, and I can say in conclusion that I am grateful to you. If this letter is of any use to you, use it.

RHEUMATISM

A home cure given by one who had it.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

LOUISE KNAPPEN WOOLLETT, Principal. Telephone 57504 1749 La Brea Ave.

SECRETARIAL TRAINING

This course covers a full school year. The subjects included are Bookkeeping and Introductory Accounting, Commercial Arithmetic, Calculating, Business Law, English, Correspondence, Spelling, Stenography, typing, Office Practice, Economics and Salesmanship or Banking (optional).

R. E. BLIGHT, C. P. A., Dean.

ACCOUNTING

This institution offers a complete three-year curriculum of accounting instruction, starting with general BOOK-KEEPING. Southwestern is the oldest and most successful school on the Coast covering this subject comprehensively. The eighth successful year will begin Oct. 1st. Students may take up their work here in any class for which they are qualified by experience or previous training. The accounting faculty consists of FOUR certified public accountants under R. E. Blight, C. P. A., dean, who are qualified to give the highest type of training. Our students are successful in passing the C. P. A. examinations each year and there are scores of our graduates now practicing as C. P. A.'s and public accountants or holding positions paying from $2500 to $5000 per year. The policies of this school are conservative. Meritorious SERVICE is our motto. We do not guarantee any prodigies by "flash in the pan" or "strong-arm" methods. THERE IS A REASON for the success of our graduates.

OUR METHOD

This school employs the strict university class system of instruction in ALL its courses.

This makes it necessary for all students to enroll on or about the opening of the term, October 1st. The greater efficiency of this plan, is, of course, apparent. ALL students are here instructed during ALL of the class period. This plan limits our enrollment, but to the student it means the difference between effective and ineffective instruction. Southwestern University disapproves the so-called intensive "individual" instruction plan because it is pedagogically UNSOUND.

SALESMANSHIP

Taught by direct, practical methods. Topics treated are: Sale Analysis, Goods and Market Analysis, Character Analysis, Selling Principles, Power of Will, Value of Observation, etc., Natural Faculties, Concentration, Promotion, Selling by Mail, etc. Besides selling theory, attention is given to voice development and control as essential to the personality of the successful salesman.

Born	1888	1890	1889
Education	Finished High School.	Finished High School.	Finished High Shool.
Business Experience	Clerical Job at $10 per week to start with and in four years received $18 per week.	Clerical Job to start with at $10 per week and in four years raised to $85 per month.	Started the same as his two friends and was promoted about the same.
AND THEN	while this young man by his good fellowship, wonderful dancing, etc., made himself popular with young men and women	this young man went to school at night, investing a few hundred dollars and a few hundred hours, studying accounting.	Young Mr. Smith also went to night school, studying accounting and other commercial subjects.
Today	This young man, in a clerical position earns $30 per week, has no thought as to the future and no opportunity ahead.	Mr. Brown, now, at the age of 29, is a certified public accountant in public practice and has an income of about $3500 per year and a growing business.	Mr. Smith is now junior partner in a mercantile business and has a salary of $300 per month, besides his share of the profits.

NOTE: The only thing fictitious about the above is in the names used for the three young men.

QUESTION: Which of the three young men are you like,—which will you be like two or three years from now?

SOLUTION: Have a private confidential talk with Mr. Wm. C. Kottemann, C. P. A., at the Grosse Building, Phone Pico 251, and let him advise you. He has advised and started off hundreds of others, WHY NOT YOU?

ANGELENOS BUY FOOD AT COST.

Thousands Attend Opening of Government Store.

Laboring Class Predominate; "Pork and" is Popular.

Crowds Swamp Clerks; Close Doors at Noon.

Supplied with a stock that is expected to last for weeks the government retail store at 335-337 East Third street was opened to the public yesterday morning. From 9 a.m. to noon, and from 1 to 4:30 p.m., the clerks struggled with the crowd of customers and endless rows of canned goods and other supplies. When the closing time rolled around practically everyone was waited on and everyone perfectly happy.

Yesterday's business was confined to food products only, these being the articles already in Los Angeles. The miscellaneous supplies consigned to this city will not arrive for several days. They will be on the shelves before the end of next week, the officers in charge say. While some of the articles on the list are more distant, so far as the date of arrival is concerned, the main things, blankets, underwear and shirts, are on the way, Lieut.-Col. Joseph D. McKeany, in charge of the store, said yesterday.

The crowd that poured into the store immediately after the opening was so large that the store had to be closed at noon to allow the clerks a few minutes' time to eat their lunch. In a day or two the sales force will be working 100 per cent. efficient, it is expected, and larger amounts of goods will be sold each day. Yesterday's receipts were more than $1000, it was announced.

LIKE PORK AND BEANS.

Among the most popular articles on sale yesterday were No. 1 cans of pork and beans, 11½ ounces net weight, which sold for 4 cents each. Case after case was brought up from the storeroom and disappeared in a hurry.

The far-reaching effect of the store's business will be felt by the poorer classes, the officers in charge declare. As the closing hour approached, men in working clothes predominated, and each left the store well supplied with food for the next few weeks. As the different kinds of goods arrive they will be placed on sale.

BROKERS OPEN UP.

E. G. Gardner and E. A. Hulse, former Iowans, announce the opening of an office to conduct a general real estate business at 6654 Hollywood boulevard. Both were engaged in the realty field before coming to Los Angeles.

WANT OIL SEIZED.

Assistant United States District-Attorney Bryan yesterday filed in the United States District Court a libel involving a shipment of twelve dozen bottles of Ear Oil, sent by A. O. Leonard, of New York to a local drug company. The seizure of the goods is asked for, it being alleged that they are misbranded in violation of the Pure Food and Drug Act.

ORDER INVESTIGATION OF YOUTH'S ESCAPE.

JUVENILE OFFICERS MUST TELL HOW AND WHY YOUTHFUL PRISONER GOT AWAY.

A sweeping investigation into the escape early Friday morning, of Don Clauser, 15 years of age, automobile thief, burglar and violater of probation, was ordered yesterday at Central Police Station when it was learned that the youth had walked out of the wire cell in the Police Juvenile Bureau and made his way from the police station under the eyes of a score of officers. A second feature of the escape, as to how the youth had been allowed to remain all night in the small cell in the juvenile bureau is also under investigation.

According to information secured yesterday, at Central Police Station, the boy was locked in the small "cage" in the juvenile department by Policewoman Wells. He was taken from the cell for a short time by the police detectives, but returned to the juvenile department early Thursday evening. The boy was then forgotten and the department closed for the night leaving him alone in the cell. When a police trusty opened the cell to sweep early Friday morning the boy walked out and left the police station.

Following his escape young Clauser stole another automobile, burglarized a house and was not recaptured until late Friday night. During all the time that he was at liberty the police did not know that he had escaped, believing him locked in the juvenile hall. None of the juvenile officers learned of his escape or recapture until they read the Friday morning newspapers.

ROTHWELL RETURNS.

Enthusiastic Over Outlook for Music Season.

Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the new Philharmonic Orchestra, has returned to assume direction of the organization. Judging from his smile, which, he said, "just would not be erased," he is delighted to return to Los Angeles. While in the East he succeeded, through his personal friendship with the publishing house of Breitkoff & Hertel, in securing by purchase the nine Beethoven symphonies, only three other orchestras in America having this complete set, it is said. Importation have long since ceased.

Mr. Rothwell declares that in Vladimir Drucker, the young Russian trumpeter, the orchestra has a genuine find. Drucker came from Russia to America via Siberia, and after a trip filled with vicissitudes due to uncertain travel reached New York. He went immediately to Mr. Rothwell's home and after playing and showing his credentials—he has been with Rachmaninoff and many of the leading European orchestra conductors—he was immediately engaged.

Rothwell was keenly enthusiastic at the prospects of the season. He said he had been welcomed and congratulated on all sides in the East on the formation of the new orchestra in Los Angeles, and that with the assistance of W. A. Clark, Jr., he proposed making it one of the foremost organizations in America.

GRAIN DEALERS' WIFE WINS DIVORCE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RENO, Sept. 26.—A decree of divorce was today issued to Catherine R. Craig against Claude C. Craig, and with the decree the judge awarded an alimony charge of $50 per month to the plaintiff for the support of a minor child, Carroll C.

The child was placed in the custody of Mrs. Craig. The husband is said to have been at one time a motion-picture director and is now in the grain business in Los Angeles. The petition alleges that while the plaintiff was doing Red Cross work in San Diego in 1918 and at other times since, the defendant did many things to humiliate her and especially when he would recklessly drive an automobile in which she was riding, in Los Angeles and Alhambra.

AUTO CLEW TO BANDITS.

In an effort to capture the men who early yesterday attempted to murder Motorman W. A. T. Miller and Conductor T. R. Brewster, while operating a Stephenson avenue car at East Seventh and San Julian streets by firing several shots through the windows, Chief of Police Home yesterday ordered a special guard of potrolmen and detectives to patrol the ends of a number of the car lines and also posted men along the streets on which the bandits are believed to be operating. The would-be murders are believed to be striking motormen and conductors.

According to the report of the attempted murder given the police by the Stephenson avenue car crew, two men in a small automobile with all the curtains drawn, drove up to the street car and jerking back the blinds fired a number of shots through the windows at the motorman and conductor. The shots showered passengers with glass, but no one was injured. The automobile was driven away at high speed after half a dozen shots had been fired.

Records of all attacks made by strikers on loyal workers were searched yesterday at Central Police station and it was discovered that every time shots have been fired into street cars since the strike took effect the same mysterious small, high powered automobile has been much in evidence. The same men, the police stated yesterday, without a doubt have been implicated in all of the outrages.

TO LAUNCH SHIP TODAY.

The outhwestern Shipbuilding Company will launch its twelfth big cargo carrier at its yards at the harbor at 11:30 o'clock this morning. The sponsor will be Mrs. H. C. Bedwell, sister of James A. Talbot, general manager of the company. The name of the vessel is to be the West Niger, a name selected by the company itself and not by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, as erroneously reported. The West Niger is of the standard 8800-ton type and will be ready for service within ninety days, according to W. F. Howard, vice-president of the company.

In an item printed yesterday The Times stated that the sponsor would be Miss Helene Chadwick, a Goldwyn actress, and that the details of the launching are in charge of T. Hayes Hunter, a Goldwyn director. As a matter of fact the launching is in charge of David Hollywood, works manager for the company. The incorrect item was based upon facts from a source subsequently discovered to be irresponsible.

No formal programme will attend the launching, but the shipyard band will furnish music

SAYS PROFIT-SHARING CURES LABOR UNREST.

The relations of capital and labor, and the establishment of industrial democracy, were themes discussed yesterday, at the City Club, by Prof. Rockwell D. Hunt, of the University of Southern California. The speaker urged that an industrial democracy should be firmly established through the general adoption of profit-sharing policies in all the industries, the providing of labor with a direct share in the management of the industry to which it contributes its skill, the practice of thrift and cultivation of a mutual consideration of interests, based on the Golden Rule.

Simple Home Method Easily Erases Wrinkles

Thousands have reported great success with the famous saxolite wrinkle-removing formula. One ounce of pure powdered saxolite is dissolved in a half-pint of witch hazel and the solution used as a face wash. The effect is almost magical. The deepest wrinkles and crow's feet, as well as the finest lines—whether due to age, illness, weather or worry—are immediately affected. No one need hesitate to try this simple lotion, as it will not harm any skin. Any druggist of course can supply the ingredients.

When you have that tired, careworn look and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathing the face in the saxolite lotion will produce a wonderful transformation. You will find this more refreshing than an hour's rest.—[Advertisement.

Not until August 21 of that year, however, was he arrested.

The discovery by Bank Examiner Thompson that in the Spring of 1918 there was something wrong in the bank's affairs was due to the request of De Nelson Smith, a depositor living in Los Angeles, while on a visit to San Diego, that the book-keeper enter the interest due on Mr. Smith's savings account. The book-keeper examined the bank's books, and returning to the window told Mr. Smith, "You have no money on deposit here."

HOW IT STARTED.

"I have $20,000 on deposit here," replied Mr. Smith. "Where is Mr. Williams? I want to see him."

Mr. Williams was absent from the city, but he returned next day, told Mr. Smith that a mistake had been made by the book-keeper, entered the interest due on $20,000 on Mr. Smith's pass book, and Mr. Smith went away. The book-keeper was not satisfied to be thus made the "goat," as he considered it; and deemed it his duty to notify the government officials, which he did. Bank Examiner Thompson, after long and patient work, formulated the forty charges of violation of the national bank act set out in the Federal grand jury indictment returned against Mr. Williams on January 11, 1919, and on which Mr. Williams will be tried. These are: Embezzlement of the bank's funds to the amount of more than $75,000; misappropriation of the bank's funds to the amount of $25,000; making false entries in the books of the bank, and making false statements to the Comptroller of the Treasury.

The De Nelson Smith case is the basis of one of the embezzlement charges, as well as also one of the counts charging the making of false reports to the Comptroller of Treasury. For it is charged that on August 30, 1917, Williams, in his report, represented that the deposits of the bank had decreased to the amount of $51,285, when as a matter of fact they had decreased only the amount of $21,285, the difference of $30,000 given by Mr. Williams as a withdrawal being the $30,0000 which Mr. Smith had not withdrawn, and which the government charges Williams embezzled. Mr. Smith will be a witness at the trial.

Mrs. Charles Brown of Nashville, Tenn., will also be an important witness. Before her marriage she was Miss Anna Murphy of San Diego. She transacted business for her father, B. M. Murphy, who is an invalid. She and her father, she stated in her deposition filed before she went East to be married, went to the bank in 1916 and were greeted by Mr. Williams. The daughter said that she deposited for her father $26,500 and Mr. Williams took the money and made out a pass book, which he gave to Miss Murphy, now Mrs. Brown. She says that Mr. Williams personally wrote the deposit slip, at his own suggestion.

The daughter says that her father received the interest quarterly on the entire amount. After the investigation had begun, Mr. Williams found that Mr. Murphy and his daughter had learned of the missing $20,000 not recorded on the books of the bank, according to Mr. Murphy's testimony at the preliminary hearing, Mr. Williams sent for Mr. Murphy.

"Williams told me," testified Mr. Murphy, "that he had invested $20,000 of my money for me and if I did not like it, Williams said, he would put it back in my account. I said: 'Put it back.'" The books do not show that Mr. Williams put the money back, the government claims.

The bank examiner's investigations brought to light the original deposit slip written for her father by Mr. Williams and the figures show the deposit recorded as $6500 instead of $26,500.

The government charges that, as in the case of Mr. Murphy's account, Mr. Williams selected for accounts to juggle those he knew were inactive or "dead," the holders of which would make no inquiries if they received their interest regularly.

Among the other accounts selected by Mr. Williams for changes, as charged by the government, are those of Mrs. Agnes Gillon, M. G. Goodby and F. A. Rhodes, and these depositors will be government witnesses at the trial.

MANY WITNESSES.

The Federal government will have about thirty-four witnesses, including F. E. Belcher, president of the First National Bank; Joseph W. Sefton, Jr., president of the San Diego Savings Bank; I. I. Irwin, president of the Citizens' Savings Bank, W. H. Hampton and many others.

From the extensive preparations on both sides, it is evident that a hard legal battle will be fought. Dist.-Atty. O'Connor will be present on the opening days, but on account of the cost of living investigation will return to Los Angeles, leaving the case in the hands of Assistant District-Attorney W. Fleet Palmer, who has been in San Diego for the past several weeks preparing for the trial. During the past year Government Experts H. E. Rank and Homer Tripp have been in San Diego at work on the books, and they will be important witnesses at the trial for the government. Mr. Williams will be represented by Attorney Lewis E. Dadmun, who has been the former banker's counsel since the arrest. Mr. Williams is at liberty under $15,000 bail, his bondsmen being P. M. Johnson, T. O. Anderson and Charles Holzwasser, and the former bank official has been actively engaged with his counsel preparing for the trial.

BANKER'S CAREER.

Mr. Williams began at the bottom to learn the banking business and had climbed to the position of bank president when his arrest came. He is about 50 years old and came to San Diego in 1887 from Carrolton, Ill. He started in as janitor at the old Bank of Commerce. He later was elected City Treasurer and afterwards became bookkeeper with the American National Bank, of which Louis J. Wilde, now Mayor of San Diego, was the largest stockholder and the head. While Mr. Wilde later withdrew selling his stock and afterwards the Mayor founded the United States National Bank. Mr. Williams and he had become bitter opponents. Mr. Williams was promoted from one position to another and finally became

HIGH PRICE FOR TROUBLE-MAKING.

One to Fourteen Years in Prison is the Tax California Puts Upon Conspiracies and Propaganda for Sabotage, Terrorism and Vandalism.

A heavy tax that is meeting a wholehearted support from every decent and law-abiding element of the State has just gone into effect in California.

It is a tax upon the business of making trouble and spreading unrest. The heretofore unregulated "infant industry" of professional terrorism and chaos, of sabotage and vandalism, is at last to receive due attention in this State. These gentlemen of flowing bow ties and evil intentions are to be taxed with nothing less than a penalty of from one to fourteen years in a penitentiary. The "tax" is to be collected, the law says, upon conviction under the new "criminal syndicalism" act, signed by the Governor several weeks ago.

Anarchists, "wobblies," direct actionists, no-actionists, and the kindred gentry who heretofore have orated loudly and persistently about the coming of the dictatorship of hoodlumism, are the prospective subjects for taxation under the new act. Judging by the events of the past few months, not many of these care to resume business under new conditions. Even the signing of the peace treaty is not expected to have any stimulating effect upon their old trade. They do not seem to care to pay the tax.

WEAPON OF DEFENSE.

The Criminal Syndicalism Act, passed by the last Legislature, and now a State law, embodies the best experiences and lessons of the painful inactivity of past years. It presents a concrete, working weapon for defense against the poisonous and destructive doctrine aimed at the heart and the very existence of California's industries and prosperity, those who have helped frame it believe.

With war-time conditions removed, but with many others, some of them just as serious, now facing the civil authorities of California, the Criminal Syndicalism Act is expected to take the place previously filled by the Federal Espionage Act.

Conspiracies against the property of any individual or any industry are reached by the new law. Under its provisions, the overt act need not be committed to make the law applicable. All that is needed is proof that the accused person was a party to conspiracy against the dignity of the State, the attorneys who helped draft the law say.

PENALTY INCREASED.

Together with an amendment to the criminal conspiracy act, the criminal syndicalism law will take care of cases that heretofore have escaped the hands of justice. The amendment was passed for the purpose of assisting the enforcement of the new law.

The amendment provides that the punishment for criminal conspiracy is to be the same as though the felony which the conspiracy contemplated had been committed. In the past a criminal conspiracy that was uncovered before it was put into effect has been punishable only as a misdemeanor.

The term "criminal syndicalism" used in the act is defined as "any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage or unlawful acts of force and violence or unlawful terrorism as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership or control, or effecting any political change."

As interpreted by officials here and elsewhere, the wording of the act is broad enough to include the doings of many kinds of direct actionists and I.W.W. disciples, whose activities in fomenting labor disturbances lead to the destruction of property and to plotting against the dignity of the State.

Some of the ablest jurists in the State have been given an opportunity to go over the act, and in its final form the law is believed to embrace all the legal requirements.

An example of the working of the law is given by one of the officers charged with its enforcement. He says "If persons gather and conspire to commit a felony they will be guilty under this act, even though a felony is not committed. If the conspirators plan a riot and the rioters are not punished, the conspirators can be dealt with under the law."

The act also provides penalties for persons who under the guise of literature and legal exercise of their rights, publish and help circulate doctrines that come under the law's provisions.

The wording of the new law is as follows:

"An act defining criminal syndicalism and sabotage, prescribing certain acts and methods in connection therewith and in pursuance thereof and providing penalties and punishments therefor.

"The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

"Section 1—The term 'criminal syndicalism' as used in this act is hereby defined as any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching, or (aiding or abetting) the commission of crime, sabotage (which word is hereby defined as meaning wilful and malicious (physical) damage or injury to (physical property,) or un lawful acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership or control or effecting any political change.

"Section 2—Any person who:

"(1.) By spoken word or written word or personal conduct advocates, teaches or (aids and abets) criminal syndicalism or the duty, necessity or propriety of committing crime, sabotage, violence or any unlawful method of terrorism as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership or control, or effecting any political change; or

"Is guilty of a felony and punishable by imprisonment in the State prison not less than one nor more fourteen years.

"If for any reason any section, clause or provision of this act shall by any court be held unconstitutional, then the Legislature hereby declares that, irrespective of the unconstitutionality so determined of such section, clause or provision, it would have enacted and made law of this State all other sections, clauses and provisions of this act.

"Inasmuch as this act concerns and is necessary to the immediate preservation of the public peace and safety, for the reason that large numbers of persons are going from place to place in this State advocating, teaching anrd practicing criminal syndicalism, this act shall take effect upon approval by the Governor."

"LAW WITH TEETH."

The scope of the Criminal Syndicalism Act is so broad and is so well outlined that every pernicious activity so far devised by the plotters against public safety and peace is covered by the law, those who have familiarized themselves with it declare.

It is, indeed, a law with teeth, they say. It is a law in which every possible loophole has been plugged in advance, and the criminal hedged in so definitely that he is forced to come out into the open and receive the full consequences of his act.

The gentlemen with flowing olack ties and evil inclinations no longer will be able to sway their audiences with impassioned eulogies of mob violence and appeals to the mob spirit under guise of shouting in defense of "the rights of the oppressed."

Public officials charged with its enforcement are unanimous in the statement that the new law has had a healthy effect upon the activities of the trouble-makers. "No red-blooded, true American need fear this law, however, for it leaves the individual free to exercise his political rights and opinions and applies only to the professional conspirator," they point out.

BIG SISTERS' LEAGUE TO SELL HOUSEDRESS.

CONTEST FOR DESIGN IS OPEN; WILL BE MADE BY GIRLS AT THE TRAINING HOME.

Vocational training, with special attention given to sewing and cooking, will be taken up by the Big Sisters' League in their training home for girls at 2113 Trinity street. It is the intention of the management to manufacture and put on the market, the most practical house dress possible, and in that way, not only to teach the inmates of the home how to earn their living, but also to make the home self-sustaining.

The plan has been in mind for a long time, and the recent street carnival, at which $1500 was cleared, has made it possible to carry out the original purpose for which the home was built.

In order to get the best possible model for a house dress, to be known as the "Big Sisters' dress," a contest has been arranged and a committee will consider all designs and award a prize for the one selected. This contest is open to any one interested. All designs must be sent to Mrs. John L. Butler, 4115 Woodlawn street.

There will soon be installed additional kitchen facilities and then a fruit pudding will be placed on the market, which also will be a "Big Sister" specialty. On Tuesday the members of the Board of Education and Mrs. Susan Dorsey, assistant principal of schools, were guests of the home for luncheon, and expressed their hearty approval of the work being accomplished.

BEGIN SPANISH STUDY.

The Spanish classes for business men and women will open Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the Sawyer School for Secretaries. Conversation, business letter writing and translating and trade news will form the subject matter of the work. The class for beginners will be followed by more advanced work during the next hour. The afternoon classes are of a similar nature and are especially adapted to the needs of teachers and students.

Tobacco Hardens the Arteries, Overtaxes the Heart and Shortens Life

Says Dr. Connor, Who Suggests a Simple Test to Find if It is Hurting You. Can You Stand It?

New York.—Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Hundreds of thousands of men who smoke and chew and who believe themselves healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. They would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco and most of them would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco.

The best-known habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, but the most deadly and demoralizing is furfural. Both are deadly poison, which, when absorbed by the system slowly, but surely, affect the nerves, membranes, tissues, vital organs and vitality of the body.

The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances and the individual. In some it causes general debility, others catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, cowardice and fear, mental confusion, etc.; in others it causes heart disease, bronchial troubles, hardening of the arteries, palpitation of the heart, tuberculosis, blindness, cancer and the common affliction known as tobacco heart.

If you use tobacco in any form you easily detect its harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud a full page from a book. If your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of very serious catarrhal trouble. Next, in the morning, before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, if your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be the victim of a functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke or chew to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit and are slowly poisoning yourself with the insidious deadly drugs, nicotine and furfural. In either case, you have just two alternatives—keep on with your self-poisoning process regardless of the dangers, and suffer the consequences, or rid yourself of the habit and escape the dangers.

You can overcome the craving and stop the tobacco habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol. Take one tablet after each meal and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco. The craving will have left you. With the nicotine poisoning out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note: When asked about Nicotol, one of our leading druggists said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit. It is way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer and [illegible] would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including all the Sun, the Logan and the Chambers Drug Stores.—[Advertisement.

Calomel Today! Sick Tomorrow! I Guarantee Dodson's Liver Tone

Don't take nasty, dangerous calomel when bilious, constipated, headachy. Listen to me!

Calomel makes you sick; you lose a day's work. Calomel is quicksilver and it salivates; calomel injures your liver.

If you are bilious, feel lazy, sluggish and all knocked out, if your bowels are constipated and your head aches or stomach is sour, just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone instead of using sickening, salivating calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and bowels regular. You will feel like working. You'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal guarantee that it will clean your sluggish liver better than nasty calomel; it won't make you sick and you can eat anything you want without being salivated. Your druggist guarantees that each spoonful will start your liver, clean your bowels and streighten you up by morning or you get your money back. Children gladly take Dodson's Liver Tone because it is pleasant tasting and doesn't gripe or cramp or make them sick.

I am selling millions of bottles of Dodson's Liver Tone to people who have found that this pleasant, vegetable liver medicine takes the place of dangerous calomel. Buy one bottle on my sound, reliable guarantee. Ask your druggist about me.—[Advertisement.

STATE ATTORNEY NAMES DEPUTY.

Coveted Appointment Goes to Arthur Keetch.

He will Take Over Duties Here this Week.

Eight Years with District Attorney's Office.

Arthur Keetch, for eight years Deputy District Attorney in Los Angeles, has been appointed Deputy Attorney-General for the Southern district to succeed Joseph Lewinsohn. News of the appointment was received by Mr. Keetch yesterday afternoon in a letter from Atty.-Gen. Webb.

The matter of appointing a successor to Mr. Lewinsohn, whose resignation is to take effect October 1, was considered by the Attorney-General during his recent visit here. At that time Mr. Keetch received strong support from leading members of the bar, irrespective of politics, and his appointment was virtually decided upon then.

Arthur Keetch.

Mr. Keetch is one of the best-known members of the Los Angeles bar. He was with the District Attorney's office here for eight years, first under John D. Fredericks and later under District Attorney Woolwine. For nearly three years he has been engaged in private law practice. Mr. Keetch said last night that he will assume the duties of his office on October 1, when Mr. Lewinsohn will leave to resume law practice in Los Angeles.

POSTPONE HEARING.

Trial of George Henderson to Be Held Wednesday.

Because several attorneys associated in the defense of George Henderson, negro politician, accused of offering and giving a bribe for alleged police protection, will be busy in another court, a continuance of the trial will be asked tomorrow. The trial is set for tomorrow in Judge Houser's court, but attorneys for the defense said yesterday, they would ask the continuance because Jud Rush, LeCompte Davis and Arthur Veitch, of defense counsel, are still busy on other cases.

The trial, if the continuance is granted, will probably begin Wednesday. It will be the second trial for Henderson, who was convicted in Judge Willis's court, but was granted a new trial by the court, who held that the testimony given by accomplices did not justify a conviction. Chief Deputy District Attorney Doran and Deputy Van Cott will prosecute the case, it was said.

PLAN CELEBRATION.

Postoffice Workers Will Welcome War Veterans and Honor Chief.

The local postoffice force will hold a celebration in honor of Harrington Brown, who has just been reappointed Postmaster of Los Angeles, and to welcome back returned soldiers and sailors who went to war from the local postal service.

Long before the men had begun to come back from France the clerks and carriers of the city were planning to give them a big welcome. Now that all have returned or are en route, except Milton P. Kanode, who was killed, the plan of the postoffice workers has taken shape in the form of a big celebration to be held Saturday, October 25 at the Gamut Club. A fine programme has been arranged. Postmaster Brown will deliver an address at the gathering.

SUIT OVER THEATER.

The suit of Dorothy Millias against L. T. Mayo and Marguerite M. Mayo, lessees of the Little Theater in San Diego to recover $4465 damages was on trial before Judge Avery yesterday. The plaintiff claims she was the manager of the Liberty Players and engaged the Little Theater for performances. She alleges that the defendants refused to give her possession of the theater according to the agreement, compelling her to rent another theater.

NOT MUCH FUN.

In a suit filed yesterday, Justine F. Valse asks $10,490 for damages as the result of injuries in sliding down a chute in a Venice amusement concession. The defendants named are Frank W. Kurtin and W. E. Jenkins.

FOREST FIRES OUT, FIGHTERS GIVEN PAY.

INVESTIGATION OF ACTIONS OF SAN DIMAS CAMPERS WILL BE MADE THIS WEEK.

The soaking rain that covered the entire forest fire area, beginning at midnight on Friday, has effectually put out the flames along the entire fire front. Chief Forester Du Bois and his assistant, Don Johnston, left yesterday for San Francisco, accompanied by trained fire fighters who were summoned from up-State to assist in handling the situation here.

The only excitement around the office of Supervisor Charlton, yesterday, was caused by the hundreds of men employed in the work of fire-fighting, who were clamorous for their pay. They were accommondated by A. W. Smith and Frank Haney, fiscal officers of the San Francisco office, assisted by A. V. Lucky, of the local office.

During the week there will be an investigation of the suspicion that the fire in San Dimas Canyon was encouraged, if not started by a colony of Russians, who had camps in the canyon. They are said to have Bolshevik tendencies, and have been in trouble on that account in the fruit-growing section in the vicinity of Covina. At this time, however, there is nothing tangible upon which to base any charge against them.

STREET CARS COLLIDE.

Six Women are Treated at Hospital for Minor Injuries.

Through a misunderstanding over the right of way between a Western-avenue car of the Los Angeles Railway, and a South Pasadena car of the Pacific Electric company, the street cars collided late Friday night at First and Los Angeles streets, resulting in the injury of seven persons on the yellow car, none seriously, however. At the Receiving Hospital it was found that all were suffering from minor cuts and abrasions.

The list of injured included Mrs. Francis Pierce, 3936 Dalton street; Mrs. Josephone Kikirk, 742 Towne avenue; Mrs. Lulu Payne, 3936 Dalton street; Cora Logan, 1347 South Hill street; Paul Meuller, 3765 Oakwood street; Mrs. Anna Jones, 1110 South Grand avenue, and Mrs. Claire Lesar of 143 North Daly street

TELLS OF HUNGER.

Accused Burglar Caught When He Tried to Enter Policeman's Room.

Hunger, not poor judgment, prompted William Becker, an aged man, to pick out the residence of J. J. Officer, a policeman of 207 East Avenue 39, as a place to enter, it was disclosed yesterday, at Becker's hearing in Justice Brown's court.

Becker was arraigned and asked for an immediate hearing. This was granted. Mr. Officer said he and his wife were asleep when Becker stuck his head in a door, saw the police uniform and backed out. The policeman pulled the triger of a shot gun to stop the intruder, but the gun was not loaded. The officer called upon George J. Nopper, a neighbor, of 139 East Avenue 39, to hold the man until he could dress.

Becker spent the night in jail and was held to answer by the court yesterday, for intent to commit larceny. Bail was fixed at $1000, and the man was committed to the County Jail.

TO "LAUNCH" ARK IN THE OUTER HARBOR.

UNIQUE BEGINNING OF WORLD CRUISE OF FAMOUS MISSIONARY YACHT.

The Ark of the Living God, storied craft, which has been in course of construction at Los Angeles Harbor for nearly two years, will be "launched" this evening, if the present programme is carried out.

This is the vessel, which represents the ideas and craftsmanship of Rev. J. E. Lewis, an African minister of the gospel who founded the Church of the Living God some years ago. He undertook to build a boat 100 feet long, in which to convey a group of negro missionaries to Liberia. The boat is still unfinished.

Soon after Lewis undertook to construct the vessel on a strip of tideland on Terminal Island he was informed by J. Kohara, a Japanese machinist, that the land belonged to the Hammond Lumber Company from which the Japanese had leased it instead of the city of Los Angeles, as Lewis said he had been informed.

Work on the boat progressed slowly, owing to the failure of certain contributions to reach the negro minister and shipbuilder. After the hull frame was completed Rev. and Mrs. Lewis moved into the boat and set up housekeeping in the hatchway or cabin or whatever it is that is just beneath the quarter-deck.

The tin stovepipe sticking out of the boat's deck threw sparks over on Kohara's machine shop, and fire insurance agents raised the rate on his policies 7 per cent., so Kohara brought suit against Lewis in the Superior Court and secured an order to compel Lewis to remove the boat from his lease by the 18th of this month.

Lewis has made no move to launch the boat, but Kohara has. The Japanese has spent $50 to move his own houseboat from the water's edge at the rear of the quaint ark, and yesterday he was constructing the ways upon which he expects to skid the strange craft into the water when the tide comes in Sunday night.

The hull is only sided up for a distance of five or six feet, but Lewis is agreeable to going ahead with the launching. He declares that the boat is put together with great skill and that it will stand the strain of launching in fine style.

Kohara says the boat is worse than a monkey cage and that it is so full of big holes it wouldn't even hold monkeys. He asserts that when high tide prevails on the sabbath he is going to hook a couple of tugs onto the ark and haul it clear out beyond the breakwater.

This intention Rev. Lewis views with alarm. He insists that the boat must be left in the still water around Terminal Island, so he can finish his work. Kohara says that by taking the boat outside the harbor he can save the Harbor Commission the labor of digging it out of the mud after it sinks.

Lewis states that he will have his entire flock of eighteen faithful church members on hand tonight to witness the launching. He fervently hopes to complete the vessel and pilot it to Liberia.

A few years ago he created a great stir at the harbor. After getting some attractive letterheads printed he opened negotiations with a British steamer concern to buy one of its vessels. The company was so favorable impressed that it had one of its boats stop here while making a coast trip. Lewis called his followers together to discuss his scheme, it is said, and on a certain Sunday hundreds of negroes from Southern California cities were at the harbor to inspect the vessel, but the deal fell through, so Lewis undertook to build a boat himself.

They have already buried a man who drank mustang liniment for the sake of the kick there was in it. In passing it on he kicked the bucket himself.

SHORT VISITS.

According to present advices the King and Queen of Belgium will only be in Los Angeles five hours on the occasion of their coming visit. That is time enough to look over the City Hall and jail, but not much else.

THE WORK OF THE "Y."

The War Department is discontinuing the Y.M.C.A. work in the army, but Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the Navy Department is anxious to have it retained in his branch of service. It might be fair to specify the character and extent of the work and then let the men decide for themselves. If it be true to plans and specifications the work should be of benefit to all concerned.

STARTING THINGS.

The steel strikers are remonstrating against the violence and brutality of the police authorities and corporation officials. This must be some of Artemus Ward's "sarkasm." They don't want any violence but their own. If they remain at their homes and make no effort to beat up the men who are really willing and anxious to work they will never suffer a scratch. But when they begin shooting the prospects are good for a return fire on the part of the officers. Not much harm can happen to a man who stays closely by his own fireside and does not seek to muss up the affairs of his fellows.

WOMEN FIRST.

Life is full of tragedies. Think of the frightful sufferings in store for the heroic women who will be compelled to wear furs during the winter season in Southern California. There will be a lot of them, too. There is ample evidence of that already. Only yesterday we saw one frail little beauty who had nothing much on but a mink coat. It was only a three-quarter length, at that, and hardly covered her knees. It was pitiful! Some grasping dealer had taken her next to the last $1200 for it and she hardly knew where her next string of pearls was coming from. If something doesn't turn up pretty soon she will have to go on a strike.

RANK OUTSIDERS.

The circumstance that no member of the general committee in charge of the steel strike has any connection with a steel mill or any practical understanding of the industry indicates the easy way in which the unionites barter away their birthright. Here was a committee without any working knowledge of the steel trade demanding that the officials of the corporation deal with them as representing all the employees in the industry. It shows very plainly that the only point on which they could qualify to speak was the recognition of the federation as the ruling agency over all. They could not intelligently discuss anything relating to the steel trade. Under the circumstances they could hardly expect even a civil answer from the interests they were antagonizing. No man is going to be a very effusive reception committee for a party trying to break into his office with a bomb.

MY LADY OF THE KILTIES.

Golf enthusiasts of Southern California are anxiously awaiting the advent on local courses of the kiltie golf costume for women which is creating such a sensation in the East. If contemporaries on the other coast are correct the hosiery of this costume is the feature of it, being distinguished by brevity.

Kilties for women golfers will be more adapted to the summery winter temperatures here and, once they come, the bet is that they will stay for awhile. Gooseflesh is almost unknown here. The only gooseflesh of feminine persuasion is that of the tourist who casts aside furs the same day she tries her first winter dip in the ocean.

Kilties on women golfers will make golf still more popular. Starters at the golf clubs will have their troubles keeping players in line at the tee when My Lady of the Kilties arrives with her bag. Caddies will surge forward when she calls, and there will be a mad dash of the males to see who "follows" her.

It will be a pleasure to allow kiltie-togged women to "go through," and woe be to the twosome or foursome which tries to play up on the one just behind a pair of kilties.

But how can one keep his eye on the ball if, within the line of his vision, a fair golfer in kilties is swinging madly at the pill? The mental hazard of shapely calves, unadorned, will tell on the games of some of our best 70's. They will be glad to break an 80 when following one of the new costumes or else will not care what score they make. It will be an inspiring sight to see a kiltied woman golfer at the height of her swing on the teeing block.

Probably it is because of the threatened coming of the wonderfully-popular golf costume that golf clubs in the neighborhood of Los Angeles have decided to plant grass on all the greens. Male players will need the color to rest their eyes after a few holes in the wake of a kiltied twosome.

THE FATE OF BABYLON.

PERHAPS it is a far way to go for a lesson—back to Babylon that perished from the face of the earth thousands of years ago. And yet, the farther back one goes for a lesson, sometimes, the more one will learn.

And, Los Angeles may well go back to Babylon. And every sister city of Los Angeles, between the mountains and the sea, may well go back to Babylon. For, even as Babylon has fallen, so also may we fall.

No doubt many will laugh as they read these lines, now, at only the beginning of what is to be said. They will be those who will conclude, without waiting to hear, that we have set out to preach a sermon. But, it is not our intention to preach a sermon. It is not even our desire to rehearse the evil and the immorality wrought in Babylon.

We merely desire to point out that Babylon failed to look to its physical safety, and that, as a consequence, something happened to it—though it is not just clear what it was—which put a hush upon its clamor, and the silence of death upon its domes and towers.

It was once, by far, the greatest city in the world. As a matter of fact there was no city before its time to equal it, nor has there been a city since that can be honestly said to rival it. It was five times larger in area than London is now, and its buildings surpassed the buildings of Paris in architectural beauty. It had more skyscrapers than New York has today.

No doubt if some one in Babylon 3000 years ago had said that the time would come when the only way to find it would be to bore holes in the sand and scoop it out of the century-caked mud with steam shovels, the Babylonians would have laughed till their sides ached at so crazy a statement.

And, no doubt also, if anyone were to say that the time might easily come when Los Angeles would be buried with 10,000 yesterdays, as Babylon is buried now, the statement would be greeted with the same jeers.

Well, let us see. We know that Babylon is no more. But, what could possibly happen to Los Angeles and its sister cities to draw down upon them the fate of Babylon?

II.

IT IS A very difficult matter to make a city man understand some things, and the most difficult thing of all is to make him understand that his city is wholly dependent upon the country for its existence.

It is true that William J. Bryan didn't say many things worth remembering, but he did say one thing that must never be forgotten, and it was this: "If your cities are destroyed and you leave us our farms we can build your cities in a day, but if you destroy our farms the grass will grow in the streets of your cities."

But neither Bryan nor anyone else has gone far enough. There is a bigger thing than that which we must learn, and it is that if the mountains back of Los Angeles and her sister cities continue to be denuded by the hand of man and the still more devastating tongue of fire, why, both our cities and our farms will perish.

We shall be as Babylon is—buried in the dust of time, dead and forgotten, a mere source of entertainment to the archaeologist of future times.

During the past week fire has destroyed a vast portion of the watershed on which Los Angeles and other cities depend. Pine forests of exquisite beauty and of priceless utilitarian value and that 300 years of time were required to grow, have been swept away like so many burnt reeds. The precious chaparral of the mountains has been devoured in flame.

If this mountain holocaust were to continue throughout all the lower and upper ranges of the Sierra Madres above us, through the San Bernardinos and the Temescals, Los Angeles and her sister cities of the south would stand as helpless before the fate that overtook Babylon as a naked man before an arctic wind.

If, next winter, floods, such as we have known in the past, were to visit us from fire-denuded mountain slopes, then God help the cities that lie between those mountains and the sea.

The debris of those cities would mingle with the silt and mud that would fill our harbor so that afterward a man could walk dry foot across it.

III.

THIS is not what has happened, but it is what can happen, and it is what will be absolutely certain to come if steps be not taken now to reforest our mountains and to check-dam the great canyons.

We make a mighty busy people of ourselves, fumdiddling with city ordinances and listening to speeches about the size of hotel bed sheets and other fool things that occupy the attention of State Legislatures, yet here is a menace at our doors as sinister and as threatening as the thing that destroyed Babylon, and to which we pay no attention at all.

If hordes of Goths were up in those mountains ready to swoop down on us; if an invading army were there with its guns trained on us, we would become instantly and vastly excited, would we not?

Well, the menace of the thing is a far greater danger to us and to our future than the Goth and Vandal could possibly be, or that all the armies and navies of the world invading us could be.

Why, have we not voted bonds for that very purpose, it will be asked. Yes, we have voted bonds. We have voted a sufficient amount of bonds to about repair what the fires of the past week destroyed in ten minutes. That's what we have done, and that's all that we have done.

And if the coming winter shall bring anything like the floods of a few years ago, the bonds we have voted, if all turned into cash and put in one man's hands, would enable him to hire just about a sufficient number of men to serve as witnesses that fourteen towns were swept down into the Pacific Ocean.

That's what we have done—speaking of bonds.

IV.

THE inanity with which we handle this matter of water supply and flood control is equaled only by the inebriated idiocy with which we forget a forest fire the moment that by luck or the mercy of God it has been put out.

When these fires broke out in the mountains a week ago, there was absolutely no organization of any character whatever to cope with it.

Would you believe that? Would you believe that a sane man would live in a house without a roof on it in a country where it snowed half the year and rained the other half? Would you believe that a man wouldn't build a wall around himself when he knew that there was a pack of wolves waiting to devour him in his sleep?

Now, we have an opportunity to sit down and think it over. There are the mountains bare as a man's hand. And the city man who thought the mountains did not concern him, finds out now that they concern him more than they concern anybody else. He finds out that unless he looks after them they will spill their floods over him some day and wipe him and all that he has off the face of the earth.

When T. P. Lukens went around talking that way through the years, we wouldn't pay any attention to him. When he showed us how he could reforestate the mountains back of Pasadena and fill those vast slopes of the hills with pine trees, we said, "Yes, but what's the use?"

He couldn't get a dollar to do the things he wanted to do—the things that he wanted to do not for himself, but for us and for the generations that are to come. But every political engineer that came down the road could get money to do fool things with.

However, that's neither here nor there. Some day some one will see the hills back of us green with pines. It has to be, lest we perish. And when that day comes the trees themselves will speak the name of T. P. Lukens, never fear.

For, is it not unthinkable that we shall go the way of Babylon?

V.

THERE are three things that must be done without the slightest delay. The first of these things is to organize and to make provision for an efficient force to fight forest fires; the second is to begin the building of check-dams in the mountain canyons; the third is to plant pine trees on the mountain slopes.

Unless we do all these three things—not just one of them alone, or any two of them, but all three—we shall some day be buried as deep as Babylon was buried.

The money must be forthcoming. And, when it is in hand, if the petty jobbers that hang around courthouses and city halls attempt again, as they have done in the past, to get up a discussion as to other means of handling the situation, hire a gang of football players to kick them into the sea.

And when these things are done—the fire-fighters in their armor, the check-dams in the canyons and the trees growing on the slopes—then we shall say as the Psalmist said:

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the mountains from whence shall come my help. . . . The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. . . . The Lord shall keep thy going out and thy coming in, from this time forth and forevermore."

MENACE OF HIGHER TAXES.

President Wilson, in his public addresses in the West, dwelt upon the ideal side of the League of Nations. He pictured an era in which justice will replace armed force, in which each people shall labor for the aggrandizement of all peoples, in which social injustice shall find no place. He told of the reliance that the war-wearied populations of Europe are placing in great, free, vigorous America to lead the way to the new freedom, and said that if we were to fail them now the heart of the free peoples of other lands would be broken.

But it remained for Mr. McAdoo, former Director of the Railroads and Secretary of the Treasury, to explain at a business men's luncheon here last week the financial and economic necessity for an early ratification of the peace treaty. Mr. McAdoo said that the financial problems are the most serious ones now facing the world. He was convinced that there are enough right-thinking men and women in America to keep it safe from the radical revolutions that have wrought such havoc in a number of European countries. But he added that it would not be so easy to finance the great war debts by which every country that engaged in the great struggle on either side is burdened.

America passed through the ordeal in a better financial condition than any of the other combatant nations; yet America is burdened by a war debt of $25,000,000,000. The total war debt of the Allied countries is about $125,000,000,000. To meet the annual interest alone on that indebtedness $5,000,000,000 is necessary. Mr. McAdoo said that, if the burden of national armaments is to be added to that of the war indebtedness, it was very likely to prove more than the peoples of the Allied countries could bear.

In the discussion of the League of Nations covenant the country at large is prone to lose sight of the fact that, if the league is not created and a reduction of armaments made possible, this country will be compelled to take the position of a world power that must rely upon its own military resources. If we are to occupy a position of splendid isolation we must be prepared to pay the price.

There is a growing conviction among economists that the greatest menace to free America is the increasing burden of taxation. The sum of $2,000,000,000 a year must be set aside to meet interest and sinking fund payments on our war indebtedness. If America is going to play a lone hand among the nations of the world, then another $2,000,000,000 must be set aside each year to pay the cost of maintaining and equipping an adequate army and navy. Add to this an expense of $4,000,000,000 for government departments and we are confronted by the colossal figure of $8,000,000,000 a year that must be raised in taxes to support the Federal government alone.

Protests pour into Washington from all parts of the country against the present war taxes. But, as the period of national borrowing has passed, TAXES MUST GO STILL HIGHER before all the demands upon the Federal treasury can be met. There has been a hue and cry about income taxes, surtaxes, amusement taxes, so-called luxury taxes, excess-profit taxes and inheritance taxes. The country had been looking to the Republican majority in Congress to reduce the tax burden; but Republican leaders have pointed out that there must be something done to decrease materially the cost of Federal government before any tax reduction is possible. The taxes levied by the last Congress have produced $1,000,000,000 less revenue than the estimates. Something must be done to raise additional revenue sufficient to defray the present expenses of the Federal government and to make up that $1,000,000,000 deficit. But where is the extra $2,000,000,000 to come from? The sum must be raised through increased taxation. Unless there is an early ratification of the peace treaty Congress will be forced to increase Federal taxes in place of lowering them.

If the peace treaties were all signed and out of the way the reduction of national armaments might begin. But so long as they are hanging fire the five Allied nations must keep themselves in position to renew hostilities at short notice. Herbert Hoover, head of the United States Food Administration, has sounded a warning that the reduction of armaments must begin shortly or some of the Allied countries will be forced to default on payment of their war debts. Austria and Turkey are already regarded as bankrupt countries. Their war debts may never be paid. The finances of Italy and Germany are in a deplorable state. In fact, Germany is in a better position to meet her financial obligations than some of the Allied countries, because practical disarmament was forced upon her by the provisions of the peace treaty. Germany has ceased to be a great military power. This may be humiliating to German pride, but it will give a stimulus to German industry. Many financiers are regretting that a similar reduction in armaments was not made to apply to Allied countries as well.

Reduction of armaments has been promised by the British, French and Italian governments AS SOON AS THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS has demonstrated its ability to prevent future world wars. But that reduction depends largely on whether the five powers that drove Germany to her knees unite to preserve the peace of the world. America must either join her Allies in a general plan of disarmament or she must be converted into a military state armed to meet all comers. The voice of the Senate must be for peace or for war. There is no middle ground. If the free peoples of the world are united under the League of Nations a reduction of armaments will be made compulsory through the force of public opinion. The peoples will refuse to pay taxes longer for great armies and navies. Political parties favoring them will be overthrown. THE LEAGUE IS THE SOLE REFUGE from the crushing taxation that has oppressed the labor and industry of Europe for more than 200 years and that will oppress equally our own country if we choose to become a great military power.

POLITICS IN ARKANSAW.

We understand that Tom Terrill, the incumbent of Secretary of State, has entered the race for gubernatorial honors of Arkansas. Take it from ye Pastor of the Thomas Cat—Tom won't do. In the language of the old-time southerner, Tom "won't stand hitched." Tom has been in politics too long. He has learned all the slippery tricks of the adroit politician. Tom Terrill in the Governor's chair is likened to a pewter handle stuck onto a golden mug. Comparing Tom Terrill to the weakest man in the race is like comparing a mewing kitten or a whining puppy to a roaring lion. Dear Peepul: He won't do; pass him to the discard.—[Arkansaw Thomas Cat.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

BACK TO WORK.

I am back from my vacation, rested up and full of vim, back from weeks of recreation in the forest vast and dim; towering mountains I've ascended, hunting cougars to their lairs, and I found the fishing splendid and I shot some grizzly bears. You poor dreary humdrum critter, never moving from the grad, just sit down and hear me twitter of the bully time I had. Where the mountain brooks go sailing down the gorges to the sea, I caught perch and trout and grayling two feet long—some even three. And I shot a golden eagle that was roosting on a hill; such a bird is truly regal and the shooting takes some skill. Here's its beak I hold before you—I detached it from its map; what, you say my stories bore you, and you wish I'd close my trap? That's the way I'm always treated when I try to entertain; that's the way I'm always greeted by you stay-at-homes insane. When I come back full of stories of the wondrous things I saw, of the forest and its glories, I am asked to reef my jaw. What's the good of a vacation if a man, when he comes back, cannot hand the population all the fables in his pack? WALT MASON.

THE LANCER.

Sam Gompers waxed fearfully sarcastic and bitter before the Senate committee the other day over the outrages committed by the steel magnates in having imported "foreign labor" to take the place of Americans.

Inasmuch as Gompers is himself a foreign-born immigrant, he must feel very keenly this poaching upon the preserves of the native-born.

It is like the "spirit of the American revolution" that President Wilson says he is filled with, his father and both his grandfathers having been immigrants from England.

After all, the late Baron Munchausen was a pretty poor sort of liar compared with some of the modern crop. Of the later school the one I admire most is the theatrical manager who sends out a collection of hams and has the nerve to tell the public that it is the "original New York company."

I saw one such last week. The "original New York tenor" was a pimply lad with a mouth like an invalid duck. He sang all his lower notes off the key and his high notes were to be classed not as sounds, but as demonstrations. He screwed up his face into an agonized knot; the cords of his neck stood out in big whips, but all the sounds emitted were a sort of raspy screech.

There wasn't one voice in the entire company that could stick on the key. The chorus girls were raw amateurs. The ingenue was a mild, elderly lady who heroically contorted her rheumatic limbs in a perfectly amazing effort at dancing.

Finally two of the conspirators came out and sang a duet. Oh, boy, they sang it without mercy! They were both off the tune and not on speaking terms with the key and the sounds that resulted would curdle the fluids in your spinal column.

The local management was not to blame. No doubt they also suffered; but the burglar who had the nerve to bill this as the original New York company and charge folks $2 a seat to suffer through it should have been arrested.

Japan's suggestion that she would like to have a conference with China about returning the Shantung loot reminds me of a financially-irresponsible Los Angeles man who looked at the enormous and aged bill his butcher handed him and remarked pleasantly, "Why not let bygones be bygones?"

I don't see what else could happen at the conference except for China to say, "Gimme back my property," and for Japan to answer, "Go to."

I understand that a "searching investigation" is to be made into the management of the recent forest fire by Mr. Supervisor Charlton.

This is a good idea. There hasn't been an investigation of anybody around here for a long time. Somebody's got to be the goat and it might as well be Charlton.

Someone has suggested that the patrolling of these big forest areas should be turned over to the army. I think this is also a good idea. The War Department has blundered in everything else it ever tried to manage. It would be interesting to see how badly it could do with the forests.

These details having been disposed of, it might as well be admitted that forest fires in dry years appear to be absolutely inevitable. As long as something more than 300,000 persons each year wander through the forest reserve it is a cinch that some of them are going to misbehave with matches. And one match and one fool are sufficient.

It really seems as though the cavalry might help out a little, however. At the present time sixteen mounted rangers are trying to patrol a mountain area 100 miles long and forty miles wide.

What I am afraid of is that, while the King of Belgium is here, some secret agent of Holland may persuade him to take an automobile ride through Los Angeles with the conspiracy of jolting him to death over the bumps.

The idea that a street can be repaired is a thought that seems never to have occurred to the city street department.

People put in water pipes through the asphalt and the ditch remains for weeks, cracking springs and ribs. There are streets which resemble washboards. Finally, after the traffic has worn the riffles into canyons the street department rips up the whole street—stops traffic for a week and retires in triumph, leaving disaster and assessments in their wake.

There seems to be absolutely no provision whatever for making temporary patches in nicked pavements.

Just what the burning reason is for turning beautiful city parks into dirty-looking gypsy camps for wandering Fords does not seem apparent to the naked eye.

I forget who started it; but some agitated philanthropist in the park department got himself into a cold perspiration over the discovery that the city had no place where visiting autoists can camp here; so one of the beauty spots of Los Angeles was chosen. One of the most attractive parts of Sycamore Grove was set aside; the result is an outfit that presents the appearance of the back yard of a tenement-house.

I am trying to remember the reason why the visiting autoist should have to have a place to camp in instead of going to a hostelry when he visits our fair city.

I know it was a bird of a reason all right, although nobody but the proud author thereof can remember it. THE LANCER.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

As a little incident tending to confirm the bromide that times and men do change, the President, in his recent addresses here, carefully refrained from using his famous expression, "May I not," but, in its stead, right in the midst of a speech, caused his hearers to recall the well-known phrase when he said: "If I may tell a rather trivial story," and then proceeded with the tale.

I am reminded, in speaking of the President, of another indication that men change. Time was when President Wilson and William G. McAdoo were closer together than the ordinary father-in-law and son-in-law, to say the least. However, it was noticeable that Mr. McAdoo was conspicuous by his absence during the President's visit in Los Angeles, although he could and did find it convenient to come here immediately thereafter.

President Wilson has not seen the latest offspring of the house of McAdoo, and one would naturally suppose that ties of kinship would have induced the President's daughter and son-in-law to join the Presidential party here for a family reunion; but not so. The situation, or lack of it, has caused more or less comment.

It All Depends.

Down from the Bay City drifts the report that Mayor Rolph's decision as to whether he will become a candidate for the United States Senatorship depends, to a great extent, on the outcome of the next municipal election in San Francisco. Should such a thing happen as Eugene Schmitz beating Rolph for the Mayoralty, Rolph may decide that it would be wise to restrain his Senatorial ambitions.

Mrs. Wilson a Candidate.

A new element has been injected in the activities of those who would be willing to accept an appointment from Gov. Stephens to the vacancy crated on the State Board of Equalization by the death of Phil D. Wilson. Friends of Mrs. Wilson, the widow, have started a movement on her behalf, and will urge the Governor to appoint her to this position. They have undertaken, it is said, to secure the withdrawal of other candidates, but I understand this attempt was a failure. Dr. Frederick C. Langdon and former Mayor Woodman are not inclined to forego their chances unless the Governor himself indicates that he wishes to appoint a woman on this State commission. Rumor also has it that John P. Steele would be willing to grace the commission with his presence.

As a matter of fact, if the Governor should refuse to fill the vacancy it would be a move for economy and no particular harm could come to the State. There was serious talk at the session of the last Legislature of abolishing the commission altogether.

About Gubernatorial Material.

While it is generally conceded that Gov. Stephens intends to ask for re-election to the chief executive's chair in 1922, already there are other names discussed as gubernatorial material. Namely, John F. Chambers, State Controller, who has been outspoken and persistent in denouncing the extravagance of the State government, and who would make a hit should he run on the one plank of rigid economy and abolition of the useless State commissions; and Friend Richardson, State Treasurer. Plenty of time for others to be considered, but it is certain that economy in State government will be the serious issue in the next campaign for Governor.

For Suffrage Amendment.

Mrs. Abbey Scott Baker, political chairman of the National Woman's party, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., has been visiting California cities in a tour of the West in the interest of the woman's suffrage amendment to the Constitution. The amendment will require the ratification of thirty-six States, and special sessions of the legislatures will have to be called in many cases if the amendment becomes effective in time to give the women of the United States the franchise for the next Presidential election.

Mrs. Baker's mission here is to urge the women to insist that Gov. Stephens call a special session of the Legislature to consider the question of this State's indorsement. With the women of California enfranchised and active in politics, there's no question as to the attitude of our lawmakers when the question is formally put up to them.

At the Bay City.

San Francisco is starting out with a spirited municipal campaign, and, as usual, there is a scramble of might and main to secure the union labor indorsements. I not that Grover O'Connell has withdrawn from the race for District Attorney afer failing to secure the "okeh" of the union labor nominating committee. Dist.-Atty. Fickert has been seriously ill in a northern sanatorium, but has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home. It is possible that he may not make the race for re-election. Milton T. U'Ren has announced his candidacy for District Attorney.

Mrs. Edward Harrington, wife of the former Registrar of Voters of San Francisco city and county, will make the race for member of the Board of Supervisors. At the last election she received 36,000 votes for justice of the peace. Nearly two dozen candidates for Supervisor are in the running.

The latest entrant in the contest for the Mayoralty is William T. Valentine, a tailor, who has been a candidate before—in fact, it is said he has the candidate habit. He announces his qualifications as "a thorough business training honesty of purpose, up-to-the-minute aggressiveness and a method of getting at the truth with an eye single to the progress and prosperity and redemption of San Francisco." His opponents are Mayor Rolph and former Mayor Eugene Schmitz.

Clubwomen in Politics?

In all the years gone by women's clubs of California have generally kept out of politics, even though at times they have skirted—the word is used advisebly so—near to political action that it looked as though they would be swept into the vortex. But now the Twentieth Century Club of Berkeley, one of the well-known woman's clubs of California, boldly plunges in. Its members, in conference assembled, have adopted resolutions asking Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, of the university city, to stand as a candidate for re-election to the State Legislature. Mrs. Saylor was one of the four women elected to the Legislature in the last general election, and she received an overwhelming vote from the Forty-first Assembly District comprising Berkeley and Claremont.

Rowell Forninst Johnson.

A week ago I called attention to the fact that Francis J. Heney was planning to start on a speaking tour in opposition to Hiram Johnson and in direct support of the League of Nations, and said that it would not be surprising to see Chester Rowell line up in the Anti-Johnson camp. Right on the heels of this came the news that Rowell, who is chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and who formerly was a warm adherent of Hiram's, presided at the San Francisco meeting addressed by President Wilson, and that he took an attitude directly opposed to Johnsonism.

Names Former Angeleno.

Capt. Charles H. Lee, is to be the new member of the State Water Commission, to succeed A. E. Chandler, resigned. Gov. Stephens announces that the appointment of Capt. Lee will be made on October 1. The prospective appointee was formerly a Los Angeles man, and was attached to the public service department for a long period. He went from here to Berkeley to engage in his profession as an engineer.

Mr. Chandler resigns to resume the practice of law in the new firm of Haven, Athearn, Hall and Chandler, at San Francisco—all bright lights in the legal firmament. The head of this firm recently resigned as associate justice of the District Court of Appeals for the First Appellate District, and Mr. Hall for the past eight years has been special assistant to the United States Attorney-General, representing the government in litigation over oil lands and other public lands. Mr. Chandler was admitted to the bar while State Engineer of Nevada, and later was in charge of land and legal matters in the field for the United States reclamation service. He has been a member of the State Water Commission of California since its reorganization in 1915.

SEEING FASHIONS BY SCREEN STAR'S EYES.

MISS YOUNG GIVES COMMENTS ON COLLINS MODELS FROM STAGE VIEWPOINT.

By Olive Gray.

It was my privilege, during one session of the private views given by the Unique, to see the display through the eyes of Miss Clara Kimball Young, as I sat beside this well-known star and listened to her comments, as model after model passed before us in glorious array.

It was that fashion show, given by Mrs. Harry Collins, who brought from New York to the Unique her own beautiful mannequins, to display the creations of Harry Collins, one of the foremost of American makers.

"That," said Miss Young, her lovely eyes fastened upon a rich jet evening gown, 'is very similar to one of the gowns worn in 'The Eyes of Youth.' "

Of course, I was interested, at once, and by inquiries deftly put, I elicited considerable information in relation to the toilettes worn by Miss Young in the forthcoming picture, and was promised a glimpse of them, upon a visit to her new bungalow studio. Miss Young has very definite ideas in relation to dres for the screen.

"I believe one should more carefully observe the gradations of attire for this work than for any other," she remarked. "For example, in the beginning of the play, 'The Eyes of Youth,' I am the daughter of a man of moderate wealth, one who would expend, probably, about $4000, at most, upon her yearly wardrobe; therefore, I then wear rather simple, but good clothes, dainty chiffons, organdies, etc., but nothing very elaborate. Later, when I blossom out as the opera singer, with uncounted wealth to expend upon my clothing, my array is unrestrainedly gorgeous. In the last analysis, when I have wedded the banker I am shown to be most conservative, although very elegant, in my attire."

"I believe," continued Miss Young "that too little attention has been given, as a rule, to the possibilities of dress in bringing out character on the screen."

Just here, attention was fastened upon a wonderful Collins creation, a three-piece evening gown, of Rodier velvet in tangerine color, with broad bands of Japanese fox, confining the fullness of coat and dress skirt. "I shall come down tomorrow and try that on!" exclaimed Miss Young. "I love that color! I like the fur, too, so soft, so rich, so harmoniously blended, the touch of gold lace lending a cachet and the low decolletege rendering the costume most fitting for evening wear at theater or opera."

Another creation which gained more than passing attention from Miss Young was the afternoon dress of black velvet, with accordion-plainted puffings of black taffeta.

To a suit of burnt cherry peachbloom she vowed eternal fidelity, declaring that she would also try that on, the following day. A hat of leather, by Mme. Collins of Los Angeles, met with Miss Young's unqualified approval, while a stunning upturned shape of marron velvet, faced with blondine feathers, she declared should be her very own. That superb opera cloak of tail-less ermine, patterned in a design, by thep lacing of the pelts, the star pronounced most regal.

Miss Young has been declared, undisputedly, to be the best dressed woman on the screen, wherefore her opinion is worthy of consideration.

The audience, filling the salons upon several floors, at the Unique, was representative of the leading stars from the photoplay world, as well as of Los Angeles formal society. Views were given on Thursday evening, and on Friday morning and afternoon, appreciative spectators thronging the house, upon each occasion.

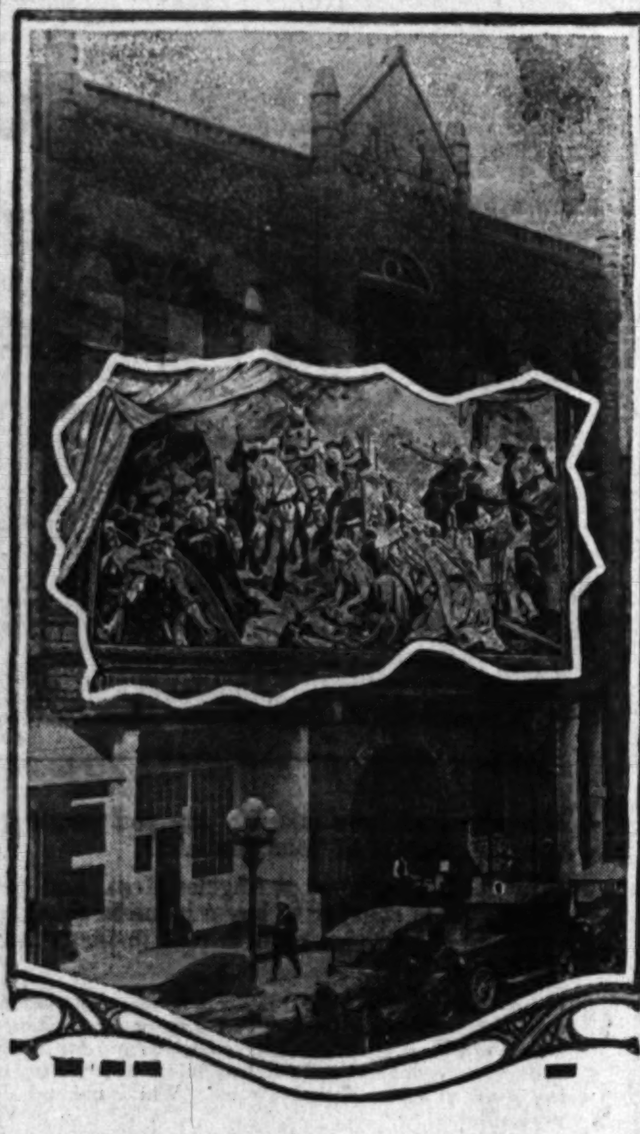
War Victim Commandeered by Yanks.



Turner Hall, Long Home of the Turnverein,
Now being converted into a Municipal Men's Club (American.) The inset is of the old German war-victory curtain on the auditorium stage.

STRONGHOLD OF GERMANS TAKEN

Turner Hall Converted Into Municipal Men's Club.

Old Building De-Teutonized, Refitted Throughout.

Gym, Pool, Baths, Canteen and Auditorium Features.

The Los Angeles Men's Club, the first organization of this kind to be conducted by a municipality, will open its doors to the public on October 1. Alterations on the building, Turner Hall at 231 South Main street, are being rushed to completion, and part of the furnishings and equipment have already arrived. The rooms will be opened next Wednesday evening, but the formal opening of the club is planned for Saturday, when a programme featuring some of the leading theatrical and athletic stars of the city will be given in the auditorium of the building. Through the co-operation which has been given by civic organizations, the Los Angeles Public Library, the Board of Education, and the City Council. C. B. Raitt, superintendent of playgrounds, under whose supervision the club will be conducted, feels assured that the experiment will prove highly successful.

The building which will be occupied by the club was formerly the home of the Turn Verein, a German organization which built and occupied the building for many years. During the war the activities of the Turn Verein, as a German club, ceased and the upper floors of the building have been unoccupied for many months. The German inscriptions on the walls, and the stage curtain, which depicts a German victory at arms are being removed, and the building prepared for occupation by a club which Supt. Raitt declares will be wholly American in its ideals.

AS CLUB BUILDING.

The basement of the building will contain a large pool hall, with seven modern tables, and shower baths. On the first floor there will be a lunch room and canteen, and a circulating library, the books for which will be supplied by the Los Angeles Public Library. The Municipal Club has given $150 for writing desks for the library, and stationery will be furnished by the club management. Gymnastic apparatus will be installed in the large auditorium on the second floor of the building for use of the patrons of the club. The auditorium will also be used for shows, concerts, lectures, and athletic exhibitions, and local organizations can rent the auditorium for dances and entertainments. The rooms on the second floor will be comfortably furnished as rest and lounging rooms, where club members can meet to read, talk or use the cards and card tables which will be furnished. On the third floor there will be committee rooms, where local societies and clubs can meet, and where the Board of Education will conduct courses in vocational training, Americanization, and business training.

While only a nominal fee will be charged for the use of the showers, committee rooms, auditorium and pool tables, it is hoped that within a year's time the club can be made self-supporting. The lunchroom and canteen, it is believed, will help considerably to defray expenses. There will be no membership fees charged, however, and the use of the clubrooms and library will be entirely free.

SOLDIER-MANAGER.

J. E. Hoch, who has just returned from a year's service with the Y.M.C.A. in France, Dalmatia and Italy, where he received the Italian war cross for his services with American and Italian troops, has been appointed manager of the club. Both Supt. Raitt and Mr. Hoch emphasized the fact that the club is not to be a charitable organization or a reform movement. "Men who avail themselves of the use of the club," said Supt. Raitt, "are to consider everything in the building as their own. It is to be a place where they can come for rest or entertainment, to meet friends, read, smoke and play cards or pool. There will be no restrictions, there will be no demands made upon them and there will be no preaching or lecturing. The building and all it contains is theirs."

WHEN YOU KNOW you've accomplished something really worth while—something that will make life more enjoyable for other people—it's mighty hard to beat that good old feeling of satisfaction that "comes over you." The man who writes a good book must feel it—or the artist who paints a beautiful picture—a satisfaction that is so much finer than mere money.

That's the way we feel about our chocolates. We know that to us at least they're more than chocolates. We've had an ambition—an ideal—to make chocolates just a little bit better than anyone else could make them. And now we've achieved this ideal. People are saying they're wonderful—that they've never tasted any that were quite so good.

GOOD ROADS FOR NORTH.

Admitting that the northern part of the State always has been and is still far behind Southern California in the development of good roads, declaring that within two years it will be on a par with this section, Ben Blow, manager of the good roads bureau of the California State Automobile Association and the man who successfully won ten good road bond issues is at the Rosslyn. Mr. Blow is here to get data relative to good roads in the State. He is preparing a history of the highway system and expects to have it ready for distribution by December 1.

Mr. Blow stated that through the efforts of the Northern Club, the people of that section are gradually awakening to the necessity of paved highways. They have heard a great deal about the Southland roads and are endevoring to approach if not exceed this part of the State.

He says that since May 6, seven bond issues have carried. These were held by the northern counties to supplement the work done by the State. Mr. Blow gave issues as follows: Fresno county May 6, $4,800,000; Sonoma county, May 24, $1,640,000; Napa county, May 28, $500,000; Santa Cruz county, June 10, $924,000; Contra Costa county, July 21, $2,600,000; Yolo county, August 26, $1,000,000, and Sutter county, August 28, $810,000. Four more issues are pending, he says, and will undoubtedly carry.

Through the efforts of the northern organization, which works in harmony with the Southern California Auto Club, a new ferry service is to be operated across the Golden Gate. This, says Mr. Blow, will tend to build up the northern peninsula. Mr. Blow will remain here a few days and will then go to Imperial county to view the progress made in road development in the valley.

RED NOSE IS NO WORRY TO HER.

WOMAN HIKING OVER UNITED STATES SAYS NEVER AGAIN TO FEMININE VANTIES.

"Never again," says Mrs. Mrya R. Collins of Pasadena referring to powder, paint and false hair. Mrs. Collins is bound East on a walking tour around the United States and, according to word received here yesterday, has just passed Des Moines, Iowa. Her only worry, she said on reaching that city, was how to dispose of the false hair.

"I'll never bother again with paint, powder or false hair," she said, "but right now I have $42 worth of false hair that I can't sell for even $2 and I just hate to throw it away."

With a thirty pound pack strapped to her shoulders Mrs. Collins left Pasadena on May 16, walked to Portland and Seattle, through the British Rockies, Yellowstone and Estes parks and thence to Omaha, from which city she went to Des Moines. She is now hiking east toward the New England States and expects to walk back to Pasadena next year by way of the Southern States. When she left Mrs. Collins had her hair cut short and wore a khaki suit and regulation army leggings and shoes.

ROW BETWEEN WOMEN.

"You have my husband and I'm going to kill you," Mrs. Rosa Perez is alleged to have said when she met Emelia Eliseida of 477 Ducommon street, at Wilmington. Mrs. Perez is accused of slashing the other woman's left arm several times. Her hearing before Justice Forbes was continued yesterday until October 4 upon request of Deputy District Attorney Heinecke.

WILLIAMS EMBEZZLEMENT CASE IS ON THIS WEEK

Trial of Noted San Diegan as Thief from His Own Bank to Begin Probably on Wednesday.

vice-president and practically general manager of the American National Bank, with which he was connected for seventeen years.

He had in the meantime become a leading business man. He was a member of the exclusive Cuyamaca Club, was secretary of the Panama-California Exposition and treasurer of the Cabrillo Club. In all civic movements in the city he was prominent.

A few years ago he married Mrs. Mina W. Colton, a widow. For many years he had made his home there when she and her mother had a boarding-house. Since his marriage, three years ago, he and his wife, and his mother, Mrs. Williams, have occupied a residence on Walnut street. His wife and mother, as well as many friends, are loyal to him and believe he will be vindicated.

Mr. Williams held $110,000 worth of the bank stock of the American National Bank, and his friends declare that this personal property was used to make the restitution voted by the directors of the bank.

CASHIER DROWNED.

Already tragedy has come into the case with the death by drowning, last summer, at Mission Beach, of L. J. Rice, who was cashier of the American National Bank when Mr. Williams was its vice-president and practically its manager. Rice had resigned from the bank before the merger. Following Mr. Williams's arrest, the testimony of Rice was taken by the government at preliminary hearings, and it was to the effect that he had carried out certain transactions at the direction of Mr. Williams. Were he alive, Rice would be an important government witness, Dist.-Atty. O'Connor said yesterday.

The Williams case naturally brings to the minds of San Diego people the arrest in 1916 of E. Milton Barber, cashier of the San Diego Savings Bank. He was a friend of Mr. Williams, who was a director of the savings bank. Throughout Barber's trial, Mr. Williams staunchly stood by Barber, who was convicted and is now serving in San Quentin prison the third year of his sentence of eight years. According to the government, it was in the year 1916 that Mr. Williams, like Barber, began juggling inactive or "dead" accounts of the American National Bank, escaping detection for two years.

When Deputy United States Marshal W. C. Carse received the warrant he failed to find Mr. Williams at his home on Walnut street. Newspapers had piled upon the porch and the family had evidently been away several days. Deputy Carse then started on the hunt and located Mr. and Mrs. Williams and their little grandson fishing just beyond Del Mar on the coast. Mr. Williams was fishing and Mrs. Williams was sitting in the car, which was packed with camping things for a long trip apparently. Mr. Williams took the arrest quietly and was permitted by Mr. Carse, an old acquaintance of his, to drive back to the city with his wife. Mr. Williams said, "We will just let things take their course now. I have learned it is wise to hear both sides of a story before passing judgment. I am sure my friends will adopt the same course in my case now."

RECIPE FOR CORNS

Here Is a Simple Recipe That Will Take off Corns Without Pain or Danger

It is not only useless but painful and dangerous to cut off a corn. It is just like the hair on your face. The more you shave it off, the faster it grows out.

You can remove them in the privacy of your own home without pain or danger. Simply get a small bottle of Cactus Corn Compound, at any drug store and paint the corn with it. In a few days the corn will come off, without any pain, and no sore feet to interfere with your work.

A bottle of Cactus Compound costs only a few cents and is enough to take off dozens of corns. Full directions come with each bottle. Any druggist will refund your money if you are not satisfied.—[Advertisement.

TO SENTENCE THREE.

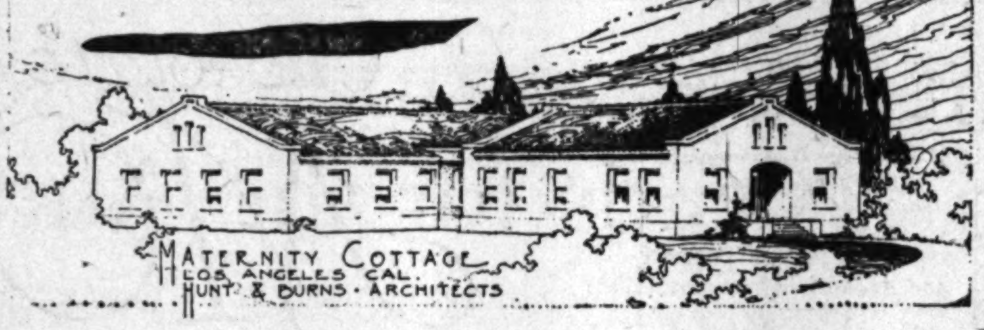
Prisoner Who Impersonated Canadian Officer in Court Tomorrow.

In Judge Trippet's court tomorrow three men will be up for sentence—Ernest P. Freeman, O. B. Cook and Mike Blaich. Freeman has pleaded guilty to wearing the uniform of a Canadian officer without authority and he also is wanted in Boston, Mass., on a criminal charge. If the eastern officials do not insist upon Freeman being sent back there Judge Trippet will sentence him on the local charge.

Cook was convicted some months ago for soliciting a bribe from an army officer in connection with the running of a ferry to the army camp at San Pedro, across the channel. The case has been hanging for some time in the consideration of motions in arrest of judgment.

Blaich was convicted of carrying on a distilling establishment in a house in Upland without first getting an internal revenue license. Joe Blaich, said to be his brother, who also was indicted, has never been located.

For Poor Women Who Cannot Pay Big Hospital Bills.



Proposed New Unit of Maternity Cottage.
To be built just west of the present quarters, giving an entrance on both Utah and Second streets. It is planned to build, later, another and larger unit on the present site of the old structure. Hunt & Burns, architects.

ASKS MOTHERS FOR FUND.

Maternity Cottage Seeks Their Aid to Build Baby Hospital.

That construction will be started soon on the first unit of a maternity hospital, to cost approximately $15,000 and to be erected on the lot adjoining Maternity Cottage, 127 South Utah street, was the information given out yesterday by Mrs. William Baurhyte, president of the executive board of Maternity Cottage, who is now engaged in an effort to have the mothers of Los Angeles contribute toward the building and equipment of the new structure. The executive board has long realized the need for an extension to Maternity Cottage, a place to which expectant mothers, unable to pay for proper treatment, may be cared for.

According to a statement recently issued by the State Board of Charities and Corrections, there are now in California thirteen rescue homes for unfortunate girls, but there is not a hospital in the State, excepting Maternity Cottage, that holds its doors open to married women who are in need of assistance.

Maternity Cottage had its inception in 1907, the work having been organized by Mrs. Baurhyte at a meeting held at the First Unitarian Church. The cottage first occupied a small lot, at 156 North Rio street, having only three rooms. In 1909 the cottage was removed to its present location and since that time it has been possible to care for ten patients. It is now proposed to build, on the same lot, a sixteen-room, one-story, fire-proof hospital to be constructed of hollow tile, giving the entire cottage a capacity of twenty-six patients. The trustees of the cottage are already in possession of the lot, 100x160 feet, although there is still an indebtedness of about $700 on the property.

Twenty years ago a patient who had been treated by the homeopathic doctors, left a legacy of $6000 as a nucleus of a fund toward the erection of a homeopathic hospital. The homeopathic physicians who were trustees of this sum met, two years ago, with the Woman's Alliance Maternity Cottage Association and offered to donate the money to the latter organization. The money was gladly accepted, and is being used to care for patients at Maternity Cottage.

FUNDS ARE NEEDED.

"Maternity Cottage is still in need of funds, however," said Mrs. Baurhyte, yesterday, "for, while we are in possession of a portion of the building fund for the new hospital, we have no money for equipment. I think it is up to the fortunate, well-cared-for women of Los Angeles to support this movement for the protection of the poorer married women. The last word from our physicians is that the safest and best place for confinement is a good hospital. If this be true for mothers from comfortable homes, who can afford every luxury at expensive hospitals, it is much more true for mothers who live in lonely ranch houses, in one-room apartments or in small, ill-furnished houses, especially for those women who already have three or four children.

"These wives are entitled to a physician's care and good nursing in a clean, comfortable homelike place, which their babies, in after years, will not be ashamed to claim as their birthplace. The work of the whole world in the future depends upon the babies that are being born now, not upon a few of them, but upon all of them, and it is therefore wise and our duty to give them a good start. Wives from all ranks of life come to the cottage, and they all receive the same attention.

"Every effort is made to eliminate the idea of dispensing charity. The cottage aims to help these families over a hard place in their lives and expects them to pay whatever they can afford. If they can pay nothing or only a small amount at the time, it is hoped that they will remember the cottage later. About $12.50 will cover the expense of a normal case, including room, board, medical supplies, laundry and nursing for mother and baby. Repairs, improvements, furnishings, expense of free patients and of those who pay less than $12 a week, together with the regular pay roll of employees are met by donations, subscriptions, memberships and the proceeds of our second-hand store, which, although often run at an actual loss, has proved a great blessing to the people of the neighborhood.

"Anything which kind-hearted people send to us for this store will be greatly appreciated. The question is sometimes asked by well-meaning people, 'Why do not these poor mothers go to the County Hospital?' The reason should be apparent. The County Hospital, however efficiently it is conducted, and regardless of the undoubted good it does, is still a political institution, a sort of necessary charity.

COTTAGE OVERCROWDED.

"What is needed is a home to which poor mothers, whose husbands can't or won't provide for them, may go and be made comfortable. Our rooms at the cottage at present are overcrowded; we need more space, more rooms, more beds and equipment. I realize the great good that is being done in the rescue homes and do not for a moment minimize the importance of such work, but surely the woman who has conducted herself virtuously and who would rather die than sell herself is entitled to as much care and consideration on the part of society as is the woman who, through temptation, temporarily forgets her womanhood and takes a step which brings sorrow and distress not only to herself, but to her child and to all who love her. The girl who wanders from the straight path should be cared for, should have our sympathy, but in my opinion society should not place a premium on vice at the expense of virtue."

Speaking of contributions to the cause, Mrs. Baurhyte said: "I would rather see ten mothers give $10 each toward building and maintenance of this home than to see one woman give $100. Motherhood is too often selfish until women are awakened to their responsibility to all children of earth who need their help. What the average mother needs is to become interested in other mothers and in other children.

"Selfishness is selfishness, no matter under what name it goes, no matter under what phase it manifests itself. The ideal condition of society will be reached when all mothers become interested in the welfare of all the babies in the world."

Contributions toward the new hospital will be received by R. Morgan Galbreth at the Citizens' National Bank Building.

Morgan Galbreth, treasurer; Mrs. Kenneth Bissell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. S. McKevett, auditor, and Drs. S. S. Barnard, H. L. Sheperd, Anna D. Chapin, Charles S. Salisbury and G. A. Cortelyou, directors. Dr. Salisbury is in charge of the free patients, giving his services to the cottage without remuneration.

He edits a trade journal printed in three languages, English, French and Spanish, in parallel columns, supervises the Canadian fisheries and looks after the development of trade with Europe and South America for the Canadian government.

Living Rooms that Breathe Contentment

HE well-chosen pieces of this living-room will help you to visualize the living- in your home. Each article of furniture has a distinct part to play in able scheme of your rooms—and what charming hospitality this davenport

A floor or stand lamp with its silken or parchment shade, invariably adds subtle finish to a room of refinement, and in most instances more than one stand lamp is permissible, enhancing the charm of the room by the soft and shadows.

THERE'S always an emptiness about a living-room if it doesn't possess a davenport, and there are so many different and beautiful creations in this line of furniture that there really is no reason why every home should not have one, and who could resist the soft blue velours with silver tones, adaptable to most any color scheme?

Then don't forget that you may have a comfortable full-sized bed as well as beauty if you buy a Bed-Davenport.

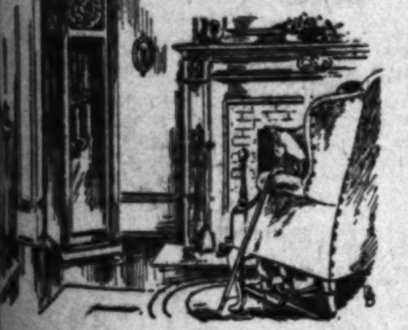
PICTURESQUE WRITING DESKS hold an instant charm to the feminine heart. No matter where it is placed, living-room, sun parlor or boudoir, a writing desk is an adornment.

There is a pleasure in store for you in our store akin to adventure in seeking out the different designs—many that conjure up visions of art of decades gone by.

A writing desk for the daughter in her own room would be one of her cherished possessions—has she one?

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK.

My Grandfather's Clock was too large for the shelf
So it stood ninety years on the floor,
It was taller by half than the old man himself,
But it weighed not a penny-weight more;
It was bought on the morn of the day that he was born,
It was always his pleasure and pride,
But stopped short—never to go again—when the Old Man died.



As we gaze on the grand old hall clocks in our homes the beloved little song hums itself into our hearts, for truly there is scarcely any object in the home which seems more "human" than does the clock!

There are many sizes of these sociable little tickers which are faithfully abiding their time to become a part of some home, and if you haven't a worthy clock in yours you should see these.

ALL MIRRORS are enchanting uisitions to shadowy corners with a hall table arrangement a pleasing picture upon enter- the hallway of a home. Mirrors, and artfully placed render more beautiful and tasty.

BOOK-ENDS, CANDLESTICKS and BRIC-A-BRAC when chosen to harmonize in balance and proportion with their surroundings as well as from focal points of interest have a distinct place in making the home alluring.

IF MANY of you haven't noted that a new department in our store is rising rapidly to popularity it will interest you to know that we are now carrying a line of dainty white goods at very interesting values. There are dimities, nainsooks, linens and ever so many, too numerous to name—but you may find detailed information in our household ad. in another section of this paper, which you mustn't fail to read.

Among these suggestions there is A WORTHY IDEA FOR EVERY HOME and the call of the season to you to hasten your plans toward this end, imbues your efforts with incentive for the transformation of your home into one of beauty and comfort.

It is a time of year when every member of the family is settling down—in a happy way—to the seriousness of living, from the young school lad or miss to the head of the family,—each with a purpose ahead and a will to accomplish it.

That these high aims may be fostered with the tenderest care an inspiring home environment is essential.

We have become familiar with the frequent epitomizing of the word "service," particularly during the last few years of strenuousness and it is a word we may call upon and continue to employ with practical application.

Through its broadcast application among associates and fellow-beings—Nations, States, Cities, Institutions and even Individuals have made the greatest progress.

That it should have been an integrant part of the founding principles of this establishment is the good fortune of the house of Barker Bros. for through the expansion of this firm perfection of service has been the goal which near forty years has striven for.

In the inauguration of this new department the carrying out of this idea has taken one step farther as outlined in the announcement at the right of this editorial, bearing out our intentions.

The Conspiracy of Charm and Art

make you happy in the companionship of this beautiful bed-room suite—so distinctive in design and rich in its walnut finish.

If you are attracted by the beauty of this design then you have only to see our many others to lose yourself in admiration.

VANITY DRESSING TABLES for the daughter's room will give an air of dignity and refinement—attributable to the exquisite contour and design, or if it's a dainty dressing table she prefers, there are many in this interesting store which she would be proud of.

Into this same atmosphere is the lovely Chaise Longue, acceptable and irresistibly pleasing.

PILLOWS and DRAPERIES in their association with a room find a simile in photographs with natural tints—a room without its array of fluffy silken pillows and colorful drapes would be a colorless monotony the same as in the photographing of a scene much of its natural beauty is lost until tinting brings it to life.

AS damp, cool evenings bring the thermometer down heaters and gas logs will be cheerful little chill dispensers, and persuasion will not be necessary for you to hasten your purchase of these if your home is not equipped—again we refer you to our household ad. in another section of this paper to enlighten you regarding prices and descriptions.

WHERE sisters share the same boudoir, twin beds are not only practical and delightfully pretty, but far more adaptable to the arrangement of a room than the double bed. Ivory finishes in either popular Simmons Metal Beds or wooden beds of any suite make attractive rooms, particularly with a bewitching play of colors in drapes and decorations.

QUALITY REED FURNITURE is probably more adaptable throughout the home than any other type of furniture, and finds happiest accord in living-room, sun parlor, breakfast-room and bedroom. Adding cheerful tone to the room which adopts it and is most livable and lovable.

TEA-WAGONS!—Symbolical of dainty service and graceful hospitality.

A modern substitute for the old "after theater raid on the pantry."

A necessity to the hostess in dinner table service, or informal afternoon tea.

Progression in the Home has a natural tendency where home-interests thrive, albeit, in most instances, its stimulation is in the untiring efforts of the Woman in the home to make the atmosphere one of cheerfulness and congeniality.

Constantly alert to the welfare of those she loves, she has but to look to the INDIVIDUAL needs of her family for the achievement of her happy scheme of home betterment—

Has the daughter, who has just entered high school, the opportunity to develop her individuality? Her own bed room wherein she may be allowed to work out her ideas, thereby reflecting her own personality?

Does the Library or Living Room offer to the son the comfort and quiet so important to concentration while arduous lessons are being pored over—saying nothing of father's keen desire to digest the daily happenings?

The coming of long evenings impels longings for cheerful and comfortable firesides and it is our want to assist you in this momentous undertaking of furnishing or rejuvenating your home so that it may successfully become a beautiful and tranquil abode, giving new joy and interest unto those it shelters.

Service Department

In the handling of such an immense volume of trade as this great store is favored with; sometimes a delivery may be a little late; or there may occur an error; or an article may unintentionally slip through with some little imperfection; or after the goods leave our warehouse where careful inspection is always given occasionally a mishap in delivery may occur unnoticed, such as a scratch or mar.

—while we endeavor to guard against all these things, now and then they will happen;

—so, to carry out even more completely, the

Stock Pens Now Ready for Live-Stock Show at Exposition Park, October 18 to 26.

READY FOR STOCK SHOW.

Entries Enough to Take All Space at Exposition Park Building.

With more than enough entries from all classes to crowd to overflowing the forty acres of stables, stalls and poultry pens that have been erected, there is every indication that the Los Angeles Live Stock Show, which will be held at Exposition Park from October 18 to 26, will be the most popular and pretentious event of its kind that has ever been held in the Southwest.

Construction of the buildings to house the animals and fowls is almost completed, and, according to Charles R. Thomas, secretary and manager, no expense has been spared to make them the most modern and commodious quarters possible. The ventilation and sanitary conditions are ideal, and the comforts of the owners and spectators have been taken into consideration, as well as the needs of the animals to be exhibited. Even if the rainy season should begin weeks earlier than usual, which is extremely unlikely, every provision has been made to keep the show barns high and dry and visitors will encounter no disagreeable inconveniences.

Mr. Thomas stated yesterday that he wished to advise breeders and fanciers that the entries in the live stock classes are now closed, although the horse show and racing lists will remain open until October 1, and dog show entries will be received until October 11. Dog lovers throughout the country will feel confident of the success of this feature when they are informed that arrangements have been made with John Bradshaw, the noted showman, to direct this event. Mr. Bradshaw has conducted some of the largest dog exhibits in the country.

Judge Edward R. Smith, the veteran turf official, who is arranging the race meeting and horse show details, has announced that he has received hundreds of entries representing stables in almost every section in the United States. California will be especially well represented, with stables coming from San Francisco, Santa Barbara and San Diego. The famous Diamond Bar, Santa Anita and Sierra Vista ranches of Los Angeles will also send fancy saddle and driving steeds as well as racing animals. Other horse entries are already in from Lexington, Ky.; Gresham, Or.; Butte, Mont.; Salem, Or.; Walla Walla, Wash., and Eastern and Middle-Western points.

DAIRYMEN'S DAY.

It was announced by Farm Advisor Hodgson, yesterday, that arrangements had been made to have Thursday, October 23, set aside as Dairymen's Day at the show. A programme for the day has been prepared by the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau. It will begin with a mass meeting of the dairymen in the morning, at which Vice-President J. B. Valle will preside. The speakers will be Secretary W. S. Rosecrans, S. H. Greene, secretary and manager of the California Dairy Council; N A. Negley, dairy expert from the Department of Agriculture; F. J. Cummings, William R. Harriman, superintendent of the Los Angeles County Farm, and Assistant Farm Advisor Gordon

In the afternoon there will be judging of dairy cows conducted by Assistant Farm Advisor Scribner, who owned and exhibited the national champion Jersey at the world's fair in St. Louis. In the evening the California Dairy Council will hold a get-together meeting.

The Farm Bureau also will conduct a cow-testing exhibit during the five days of the fair.

LISTS DEBTS AS "POSSIBLY DUE."

Bankruptcy Petitioner Only Sure He Owes One, but Takes no Chances.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States District Court yesterday by Soren Hanson of this city, who says he has no occupation. His debts are scheduled at $34,482.96, all unsecured, and his assets at $2140, for the most part exempt under the law, being life insurance policies and personal belongings.

Among the liabilities are $17,500 "possibly due" on a contract to purchase two lots in Idaho Falls, Idaho; $12,777.48, a "possible claim" of the Willard Storage Battery Company, New York, a "possible claim" for $675 by the East Idaho Loan and Trust Company and $500 on a "possible claim" for a check of that amount, payment of which was stopped. The only claim the petitioner does not hedge about with probability is one for $3030.48 acknowledged to be due Salih Brothers, Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Tired Housekeepers

SEES NEW RECORD IN TOURIST TRAVEL.

ADVERTISING MAN IS OPTIMISTIC OVER PROSPECTS FOR WINTER.

Returning from a trip to the North, where he visited many of the larger hotels, J. Russell Miller, president of the Read-Miller Company, Inc., declared yesterday, that he is most optimistic over the splendid outlook for the tourist travel to California this winter.

Mr. Miller declares that the mid-season travel to the Coast is the largest ever enjoyed by California hotels, and that the managements of the numerous hotels and resorts all along the Pacific Coast are entertaining great hopes of the biggest tourist season, notwithstanding the high cost of travel.

"We have made arrangements to place large announcements of California hotels and resorts in newspapers having a large circulation throughout Canada from Toronto west, the Northwest and the Middle West. Thousands of dollars will be expended in advertising California's salubrious climate and great inducements to the winter traveler. The advertising will appear under a special recreation heading, 'California, Where To Winter. The Tourist's Winter Itinerary,' and the warm winter temperatures of all the leading points of California will be published in the different newspapers, which in the past has proven of invaluable publicity for California, as the temperatures appear at the time of the year, especially in Canada, when the thermometer registers from ten above to thirty-five below zero.

"We have made a thorough study of traveling conditions. The high prices obtained for grain and live stock have made the farmers and stockmen of the Western States and Canada very prosperous; incidentally, the merchant and business man likewise have had a good year. While it costs more to travel now than before, this is expected by the tourist in proportion to the great increase in price of all commodities. Reports from all points of Western Canada are to the effect that the Dominion has had one of the most valuable crops in her history, and this, together with the fact that travel has been more or less restricted for several winters, due to war conditions, will result in a large exodus to California resorts. A large number of returned Canadian officers and men will doubtless wish to escape the rigorous winter climate of Canada after becoming accustomed to the milder climate of France.

"The farmers of Western Canada will be enabled to dispose of their wheat earlier this year, because of the action of the government, which has agreed to take over their wheat at once, paying them on delivery a large proportion of its value. This will mean that the farmers will ship their wheat as soon as it is threshed instead of waiting to sell when prices are highest."

BUILDERS COMMEND STEEL HEAD'S STAND.

The Masters Builders Association of Los Angeles sent a telegram to Judge E. H. Gary, president of the United States Steel Corporation, yesterday, congratulating him upon his "patriotic and businesslike refusal to acknowledge the unfair demands of those who are agitating for a closed shop."

"At this time when every business enterprise is working for the best interests of reconstruction," the telegram says, "It is necessary for all employers to stand firm and uphold the principles of the open show so that every legitimate and honest worker shall have the right to earn a living without the permission of the labor unions."

She Was Optimistic.

"My dear," moaned the patient, as he tossed restlessly on his bed, "it's the doctor I'm thinking of. His bill will be terrible!"

"Never mind, Joseph," said his wife consolingly. "You know there's the insurance money."—[Answers.

REMAKE SERBIA INTO NATION.

Red Cross Worker Says Country Has Made Quick Recovery from War Wreckage; Americans Aided People in Fighting the Terrible Conditions.

How the kingdom of Serbia, after undergoing suffering such as no country except Belgium has had to endure in the great war, has set herself bravely to the work of reconstructing a nation out of the wreck left by the Bulgarians and Austrians, what is left of her people back on their farms or building up their homes again and everybody looking forward hopefully to years of prosperity was told yesterday by Lieut. Rad A. Parubavich, formerly of Los Angeles, and recently returned after serving with the American Red Cross in Belgrade.

To the work of the American Red Cross Lieut. Parubavich gives the credit of Serbia's quick recovery from war conditions, with food in plenty and clothing to carry her people over the winter months, the dread typhus epidemic practically over and the nation getting down to the work of reconstruction with a will that is bound to make a success out of a terribly difficult task.

Of the gratitude of the Serbians to the American people for the assistance given them Lieut. Parubavich had much to say. The coming of the first Red Cross units was the signal for the people to take heart and the free distribution of clothing and food, the quick organization of hospital work to fight the sickness that was all over the country put new life into the remnants of the Serbian people, he said. He added that before he left Belgrade he found the new Serbian army, reorganized before the final advance against Bulgaria, wearing the uniforms of the American army. About 400,000 of these uniforms were obtained by the Serbian army command, he said, and when he left Serbia soldiers were dressed as American doughboys even to the dark bronze buttons bearing the American eagle.

Lieut. Parubavich left Los Angeles in April 1918, having been asked by the Serbian government to accept an appointment as an official photographer and motion picture camera man with the Serbian army. He went to Paris and was sent from there to the island of Corfu, which the Serbian army was using as a base for its reorganization. He afterwards went to Saloniki. He went with the Serbians when they drove forward with the Allies after the collapse of Bulgaria and afterwards joined the American Red Cross in Belgrade. He saw the country as the conquerers left it in all the horrors of their destructiveness. When he left Belgrade to return to Los Angeles, he said, it was an entirely different country.

COUNTRY DEVASTATED.

"When we followed the Bulgarians and Austrians into Serbia we found the country in a terrible condition," he said. "Every town was in ruins. Villages had been wiped out. There were practically no farms under cultivation. The larger towns had lost most of their population in some way or other. There was suffering everywhere. There was little food, in some places none at all. There was hardly any clothing. Everybody was going barefoot, except a few who had wooden shoes sent some months before from Germany. The entire nation was suffering from disease and sickness of all kinds, particularly typhus and influenza.

"I was in north Serbia most of the time and the American Red Cross workers who had followed the army right in went to work immediately. In a short time they had organized five hospitals and about 120 physicians. In Belgrade we found only about 25,000 population and only one store in the city was open for business. Food and small supplies of clothing followed the Red Cross almost immediately and soon distributing centers were organized.

"It did not take long for the word to pass around the country that the Americans had come and had plenty of food and clothing to give away free of charge. Soon the headquarters of the units were crowded with people seeking aid of all kinds. They began to flock into Belgrade particularly, most of them people who had lived in the city before the enemy came.

"The Red Cross had to use any kind of clothing available for the people and in one shipment we managed to get hold of about 100,000 pajamas, heavy winter flannel kind. These were given out to the needy and they were soon being worn as outer garments. It was nothing uncommon to see men going around with pajamas worn as trousers. At a church in one town I saw a large number of men wearing the pajamas for their outer clothing.

"We had good supplies of underwear, socks and shoes for the children and managed to get a number of sewing machines into the country and a large shipment of cloth. Sewing machine schools were established in various towns and girls and women taught how to make dresses and clothing for the youngsters.

"Soon we were getting large shipments of food. It seemed that it began to flow in almost as soon as the armistice was signed and the Serbian people were greatly surprised at the quantities that came along. I heard one woman remark 'The Americans, they think of everything. They bring sugar and flour and everything else and they don't forget the Slatko.' Slatko is jam and the Serbian people liked the brand that the American Red Cross workers brought to them.

"There were practically no crops that year and the food brought into the country had to be doled out to everybody. Now, however, the people are back on the farms and the crops this year have been splendid so that as far as food goes Serbia is nearly able to take care of herself. The people went right back to the farms and the army authorities released large numbers of soldiers for the farming season until a good crop had been assured.

"Of course, the industries are not yet re-established, but everyone is working hopefully and looking forward to prosperity again in a few years. At present the relief work and reconstruction work for the country that can be done with outside help is almost completed and only the medical details of the Red Cross are left there. Physicians and nurses to care for the sick are still busy in the hospitals, but the epidemics are under control and Lieut.-Col. Edgar E. Hume of the United States Army Medical Corps, who is in command of the Red Cross work, is confident that they will not break out again.

"As regards the government everybody is enthusiastic over Crown Prince Alexander, who has been acting as regent. You don't find very much radicalism and no trace of Bolshevik doctrines among the people. They are too busy with the work of building up the country again and are enthusiastic over the Crown Prince. You can see him any day in Belgrade walking about the streets with one attendant visiting the hospitals and helping in the work himself. Very few people in Serbia think of any form of government but the monarchy.

"In Montenegro, which has been joined to Serbia, there is still a party opposed to the union of the two nations, but they are not representative and we are confident that the union of races in the new Serbian territory will be for the best interests of all."

Lieut. Parubavich brought back with him a large number of photographs and motion-picture films which he is going to show on a lecture tour to start here soon. He had a number of photographs which he said were taken from Bulgarian and Austrian officers captured in the last part of the fighting. These showed many of the atrocities practiced by the conquerers on the Serbian people, particularly wholesale executions of peasants, sometimes by hanging in groups, sometimes by the victims being lined up against a wall and mowed down with a machine gun. One of these massacres took place, he said, at the village of Shabatz in October, 1918, when the Allies were already advancing into Serbia. More than 160 men, women and children were killed with a machine gun there almost within view of the Allied advance.

Investigation after the reoccupation of the country showed, he said, that nearly all the Serbian priests who remained in the country were executed. The Bulgarians alone, it was found, had murdered 260 priests. Women, children and old men were executed by the hundreds, he said.

The Serbian army after its rehabilitation following the disastrous retreat when the country was finally occupied by the enemy had many young boys, homeless and orphans, attached to various units. Among them were two brothers named Milovich.

Their father was killed in one of the early battles of the war. Their mother had taken them with the thousands of other Serbian women and children who fled before the advance of the Bulgarians and Austrians, and she had died somewhere in the terrible country over which the exodus had taken place. Somehow the boys found their way to Saloniki, where they were adopted by a company. The older brother was 14 and was a messenger in his regiment. The younger, called the youngest soldier in the Serbian army, was only 7 and was the pet of the men of his company. Both advanced with the Serbian army to Belgrade, the youngster was often carried through the night marches by husky soldiers of his company.

Lieut. Parubavich wears two decorations given him by the Serbian government for war service. One is the army cross of the Order of St. Sava and the other is the Serbian Red Cross decoration.

DROP A PENNY; WE NEED MANY.

City may Adopt a Well-known Slogan to Get Money for Babies at Camp.

President Boyle Workman of the City Council, while acquiescing in the recent action of the City Council, denying the application for an additional appropriation of $425 for milk for the babies in the anti-tuberculosis camp, after the original appropriation of $500 had been exhausted, has become the advocate of a new plan to provide funds for the milk required.

Mr. Workman proposes that the bottles for pennies that have been used for Belgian and other funds, be used now for contributions for the milk fund for local babies in need. Mrs. J. T. Anderson, head of the Woman's Council of Community Interests, which has all precincts in the city thoroughly organized, has agreed to take general charge of proposed milk fund if Mr. Workman's plan is adopted.

why Hale's sells the same kind of goods and better for less money than goods found at other stores. No greater service could we perform for the women of Los Angeles than that of "lower prices." To this end our operating expenses are kept at the lowest point possible, every particle of waste energy is eliminated—every unit in this organization must count vitally in our scheme of superior values. Furthermore our buying organization is so near perfect that we are put to small expense in finding and placing before our patrons bargains in goods of intrinsic merit from far and wide. Some of these goods are of the rarest quality and design and are seldom if ever seen elsewhere at our prices. And so, for the least possible outlay of money you find the goods you want at Hale's

"THE OLD MADHOUSE."

A Posthumous Novel by William De Morgan Which He Left Unfinished, the Final Chapter Being Written by His Wife.

"The Old Madhouse."

In "The Old Madhouse," the posthumous work of William De Morgan (Henry Holt & Co.,) we find again the racy humor, the faculty of vivid characterization, the deep interest in human life as all and sundry live it, and the rare geniality of spirit which will make this author long remembered.

Nor will the judicious reader grieve at the ordered leisureliness with which the story is developed. De Morgan's literary miles are assuredly Irish ones. Yet we cannot begrudge him the distances which he makes us traverse, since our guide is at once so wise, so witty, and so pre-eminently companionable.

De Morgan had not finished this work when death overtook him, but Mrs. De Morgan was able to supply the closing chapter. In the explanatory note Mrs. De Morgan appends to the book she gives some interesting side-lights on De Morgan's literary methods. She says, in part: "As the story was always read to me while in progress I too got to believe in the reality of the characters, and found myself thinking of them as real, live people, and I have frequently asked him when he came down to lunch, or had finished writing for the day, such a question as, for instance, 'Well, have they quarreled yet?' and he would reply, as the case might be, 'No, I don't know if they will come to a quarrel; after, all, I must wait and see what they do.' However, toward the end of the book, when an intelligible winding-up of the story became imperative, the plot was taken up and carefully considered, all the straggling threads gathered together and finalities decided upon, though latitude was always allowed for details to shape themselves after their own fashion.

"Thus it happened on that last Friday night in December, when my husband laid down his pen in the middle of a sentence never to be completed, he had told me as much as he knew himself of what the ending of the book was to be. I am therefore able to give a short synopsis of his ideas, and furthermore to assure the reader that not one word has been altered in the manuscript."

In its inimitable style, its thoroughly delightful delineation of character, and its pleasing whimsicality this is on a par with other works of De Morgan. But the plot of "The Old Madhouse" is more in need of rebuilding or rebuttressing than was the house itself, for a more shaky edifice than this was surely never insecurely pinned together. But with lovers of De Morgan the plot's not the thing; it is the author's interpretation of life, his kindly but pointed analysis of character, his drollery, and his thousand whimsicalities that endear him to a host of readers. The plot may or may not be plausible; the book will nevertheless delight its thousands of readers.

That part of the tale treating of the beautiful Lucy Snaith, who, instead of keeping her beaux yeux for her lawful lord, persisted in using them for the total subjugation of her husband's friend, whom she finally eloped with—or rather to—is sufficiently plausible. That after being divorced and married once more she should tire of her victim, and again bolt, this time with an amorous Russian nobleman, is also reasonable. To what other end did Russian noblemen so long exist but to be at once a bait and a goal for charming but skittish specimens of femininity?

That the cast-off lover should return to the arms of his affectionate mother, and that the first husband, the worthy "Nosey" Snaith, should obtain surcease of sorrow and a faithful nurse for his infant heir by wedding the angular but clever "Elbows," is a highly satisfactory settlement of affairs.

But surely there never was so unnecessary and unsatisfactory a ghost as that which haunts the pages of this book. Why should a sensible ghost persist in shouting to his nephew, "Come back, Fred," when the latter walked through the hall, and yet refuse to say more? Why should he—with a ghost's well-known power of looking through space at will—have taken the trouble to appear and talk with the wronged nephew too late to accomplish any good end?

May the kindly soul of De Morgan forgive the expression of the deliberate opinion that though as a cheerer and purifier of men's hearts he was a shining success, yet as a spook creator and exhibitor he was a distinct failure.

What Literature Lives.

What survives from the past is not the prose, but the poetic fiction, not the novel, but the epic, which abounded from the Iliad and the Odyssey, and the Aeneid through all the rhyming train of Italian romantic and heroic and burlesque stories, not to name in such company the Lusiad, the Portuguese epic of Camoens. The Spaniards had their great national ballad of the Cid which nobody has probably read through to this day, though many had partially sung it in its own day. In England Milton followed the epical tradition with "Paradise Lost," going to a much mythologized heaven for his plot. The poets everywhere had the pattern of the epic from antiquity and they varied it at their pleasure so long as they did not depart from the metrical form. It was not till we came to Cervantes that the true modern ideal of prose fiction affirmed itself as the supreme literary form, through Shakespeare, who shares the dominion of time with him, is mainly metrical in his drama. It is the curious fate of the wholly metrical Milton, indeed, to survive in spite of his verse as the favorite author of the childlike Russian people, who, perhaps because they have him in a prose translation, now love him beyond any other novelist, alive or dead.—[W. D. Howells, in Harper's Magazine for September.

Bedtime

—Is story time—when playthings have been left where they have fallen—when the "Little Tin Soldier" prepares to keep his lonely midnight vigil—while his tired little companions cluster about Mother's knee—hungry to hear how the brave knight in clanging armor rescues his fair lady from the enchanted castle—

—And if Mother doesn't know lots of stories about knights and kings and queens and ladies and dogs and horses and fairies and other little girls and boys and everything—it doesn't seem as if the day has ended well at all—

—And so many, many books have been written instructing Mother how to tell children's stories—including good stories to tell—and that Different Book Store of Bullock's has a corner just crowded with them—as well as books for the children themselves to read—where Mothers and children may find just the kind they like—

—P.S.—If a beautiful gift book interests you—it might be helpful to look over those lovely Mosher Books in their own corner of that Different Book Store of Bullock's.

WHITE HOUSE.
WASHINGTON. June 22d 1904

Darling Ethel,
Here goes for the picture letter!

Ethel administers necessary discipline to Archie and Quentin.

ROOSEVELT TO HIS CHILDREN.

Theodore Roosevelt was a many-sided genius. As President he stamped the impress of his personality on the country; as a writer he produced a formidable array of volumes; as a traveler, explorer and big game hunter he won world-wide repute, but unless the world loses its love for the simple and sincere things of life Roosevelt will be longest read and remembered through his letters to his children.

That this posthumous volume, "Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to His Children," edited by Joseph Bucklin Bishop (Charles Scribner's Sons,) with its wealth of fatherly affection, illuminated by a whimsical humor that is the delight of the child heart, will form the keystone to the arch of Roosevelt's literary fame, no one who reads these delightfully simple and sincere epistles can for one moment doubt.

The letters cover a period of twenty years. The first letter is dated at Camp at Tampa, May 6, 1898, and is inscribed to "Blessed Bunnies." All through the letters are addressed to "Darling Little Ethel," "Blessed Ted," "Blessed Archie," "Blessed Kermit," and when finally Quentin came to the age where he was able to appreciate a letter we find "Blessed Quenty-Quee."

The heart of the boy concealed in the robust body of the President of a great nation is revealed when in January, 1905, he consented to accompany nine boys, including three of his own, for what he called a "scramble" through Rock Creek Park, in Washington. Regardless of the demands made upon his time and energies by the great press of public duties, this devoted father always found time to give himself in the spirit of a "pal" to his family of robust boys and their lively sister Ethel. Their simplest games or most strenuous romps were shared with equal enthusiasm.

We find in these letters all the quaint sayings of Quentin, the gallant young aviator who now sleeps "in Flanders fields where poppies blow," for Quentin was a quaint and curious child who was eternally getting into some sort of boyish mischief. On April 30, 1906, he writes this in a letter to Dear Kermit: "Quentin is the funniest mite you ever saw and certainly a very original little fellow. He left at Mademoiselle's plate yesterday a large bunch of flowers with the inscription that they were from the fairies to her to reward her for taking care of 'two good, good boys.'"

The letters are remarkable in that they mark the advance of the age of the children. They are written as from one equal to another and as the children grew and approached manhood and womanhood the tone of the letters changed to meet the advancing intelligence of each and were rich in kindly suggestion and sound advice through all of which the father's great affection beamed.

His references to their mother are models of that perfect love that a great and good man is capable of bestowing on his wife and the mother of his children.

That Roosevelt loved animals, though some people will find it difficult to recognize love in the heart of a great hunter, is shown in a letter dated at the White House, April 1, 1906. It reads: "Darling Archie: Poor Skip is a very, very lonely little dog without his family. Each morning he comes up to see me at breakfast time and during most of breakfast (which I take in the hall just outside my room) Skip stands with his little paws on my lap. Then when I get through and sit down in the rocking chair to read for fifteen or twenty minutes, Skip hops into my lap and stays there, just bathing himself in the companionship of the only one of his family he has left. The rest of the day he spends with the ushers, as I am so frightfully busy that I am nowhere long enough for Skip to have any real satisfaction in my companionship."

All through the letters runs a continuous reference to birds of the air, beasts of the field, forest and jungle and even to the fishes of the sea. He seems especially to have delighted in recounting the antics of the various animals with which he came in contact in his wanderings over the far and near places of the world and his great child heart made it possible for him to appreciate how his children would love to read his quaint tales of the doings of these animals.

The picture letters are among the most interesting of the series, particularly one which is reproduced in part herewith, dated at the White House, June 22, 1904, and addressed to his daughter, "Darling Ethel." Roosevelt was not an artist, but in a crude way he succeeded in visualizing for his child playmates and pals the thought which he wished to convey and in this picture, "Ethel administering necessary discipline to Archie and Quentin," he certainly, in the language of the street, "gets it over."

The introduction is written by the editor, Joseph Bucklin Bishop. That Mr. Bishop fully appreciates the man whose letters he is giving to the public is shown by the keen sympathy with which he handles the work. In closing the introduction the editor quotes Roosevelt as having said to him a short time before he died: "I would rather have this book published than anything that has ever been written about me."

CURRENT REVIEWS.

"The Story of a Lover."

Here is a book that would have caused Anthony Comstock to throw a series of cataleptic fits before high heaven. "The Story of a Lover," anonymous (Boni & Liveright,) will, even though the late lamented custodian of purity in art and literature is no more, cause a merry little row in literary circles unless I miss my guess.

To avoid possible misinterpretation this book should have been entitled "The Story of a Self Lover," for surely no crasser expression of absolute egoism could possibly have been written.

The creature who could subject his wife—to whom through the involuntary obedience to the law of attraction he was naturally drawn, because she possessed an ampler and deeper nature than his own—to such a course of prying, grilling, lacerating vivisection, knew as little of true love as God's cherubim do of hatred. One is reminded of a sentence pronounced by Maurice Hewlett's "Artemis" on a similar individual: "He wants me only that he may mangle me."

It seems scarcely worth while to remind such beings of the age-old truth embodied by Clement of Alexandria in this brief but pregnant sentence: "Love is the true hierophant of all the mysteries of the universe." In order to comprehend aught of nature, art, the eternal feminine, or anything else worth while, one must bring to the task earnest love. Naturally a contemptible Peeping Tom, like the author of this book, could never become really acquainted with the woman he had wedded, spiritually violated and physically betrayed.

One thing remains to be said of this erotic autobiography. If this man's utter lack of pure love which "vaunteth not itself" shut the door of his wife's soul in his face his rank sensuality double-locked and barred it. The revelation of the divinity enshrined in unspoiled specimens of humanity comes only "to the pure and simple soul in a clean and chaste body."

That the picture he has drawn of his amorous imaginings will appeal to a wide circle of readers is highly problematical. It will, nevertheless, be interesting to watch the sale of this book.

The story is shot through with purple patches. It is evidently the work of a man suffering from a bad case of brain storm in which passion is the predominating element. The way in which this so-called lover describes his passion reminds one of Huxley's famous comment on Swinburne's poetry: "He mistakes his caterwauling for the music of the spheres."

"The Promises of Alice."

Margaret Deland's new book, a novelette entitled "The Promises of Alice" (Harper & Bros.,) is a psychological study of the New England conscience as revealed in the character of Alice Alden, the primly serious daughter of the clergyman of West Meadows.

This timid, gentle creature had been from her earliest babyhood "vowed to the Lord" by her mother as a missionary to China. At the age of 16 she solemnly repeated the vow on her knees at her mother's side, though inwardly quaking at the prospect of the martyrdom that awaited her. How one obstacle after another was overcome with the aid of Cousin Mary and the way made clear for Alice to keep her vow, though in her heart of hearts it was the last thing she wanted to do, makes a plot that develops naturally to the final denouement.

Upon the death of Alice's mother the girl solemnly takes up the duty that lies nearest her, that of making a home for her father, postponing into the indefinite future the missionary life in China. Her relief, her qualms of conscience over that feeling of respite, her repeated declaration to herself that she would have gone if she could, give a remarkably clear delineation of the character. Believing that her duty at home makes it impossible for her to keep her vow, she follows the dictates of her heart and promises herself to her lover, Neely Henderson. Then Cousin Mary offers to take Alice's place as her father's companion and housekeeper, and Alice finds herself bound by two incompatible vows.

The solution of the difficulty, in which Alice escapes from her morbidity and comes to a realization of the paragon of a lover she has won in Neely, is handled with the masterly skill that belongs to Mrs. Deland.

While this is a simple story simply told that will do little to add to the author's fame, it is eminently worth while for the keen character delineation and the quiet humor that prevails throughout.

"Curly of Circle Bar."

This story, which opens amid a hail of bullets, one of which ends the career of Jim Harden, rancher and cattle rustler, is heralded by the publishers as ideal reading for boys. As a matter of fact "Curly of Circle Bar," by Joseph Bushnell Ames (The Century Company,) makes mighty poor reading for man or boy.

The plot is a fizzle, the characters are loosely drawn and unconvincing. The one possible feature of the book that deserves commendation is the picture of how cattle ranching is conducted these days on the big fenced ranges of the Southwest. Even this picture is blurred and hazy at times.

Curly and his chum Homer play a leading role. Dorothy is one of those insipid females whom the author tries to float through his pages on her looks. The villain and his tricks are too absurdly patent and the end of the story is as flat as the contents of a long-uncorked bottle of soda pop.

"The Hand of the Potter."

"The Hand of the Potter," a tragedy in four acts, by Theodore Dreiser, has just come from the publishers, Boni & Liveright, though the work was produced last year. It is a powerful plea for enlightened treatment of moral defectives, who come from the hand of the potter unfit and unable to withstand the temptations with which they are surrounded.

The tragic family of the poor old Jewish peddler, Aaron Berchansky, and their pitiable attempt to conceal the guilt of the defective son and brother, Isadore, so that they may remain respectable in the eyes of their tenement neighbors, is depicted with a realism that is as depressing as it is convincing.

The character of Isadore, with his jerking shoulder, possessed by a black passion that makes a fiend of him, is depicted in all his dreadful deformity of body and soul, proclaiming the age-old truth that each of us is his brother's keeper, whether we will or no.

As for the remedy, Dreiser leaves us in doubt. How society can best deal with the criminally defective is a problem too intricate to be solved in a four-act play and it may well be said that there are more fitting vehicles for the discussion of such problems than plays, whether in four acts or less.

"Yellow Men Sleep."

Those who enjoy a story packed full of dramatic episodes and tense situations will find in "Yellow Men Sleep," by Jeremy Lane (The Century Company,) a yarn to their liking.

The human interest element of the tale centers around the rescue of an American girl held prisoner since babyhood in a mysterious empire in the midst of the great Gobi desert of Mongolia.

Running through the story is a sub-plot dealing with the activities of the United States secret service in its efforts to locate the source of a mysterious drug known as koresh. Con Levington, who is the hero of the tale, undertakes a mission, agreeing not to read his final sealed instructions until he reaches a certain city on the edge of the great desert.

The ramifications of the story are far-reaching and complicated. The reader is carried into the mysterious innerland of China, across limitless desert reaches and over the graves of cities long dead and forgotten.

In the words of the slip cover the story "is a thriller, but not a thriller of the conventional type. It is romance, but not of the stereotyped plot and style. It is an amazing achievement that the reader will not soon forget."

"THE LIFE OF JOHN REDMOND."

In his remarkably readable biographical story, "The Life of John Redmond" (George H. Doran Company,) Warren B. Wells has, consciously or unconsciously, given to the world a history of Ireland that will do much to clarify in the minds of many people a number of moot points in one of the most tragic and dramatic periods in the annals of modern times.

In John Redmond we find "the fine figure of a great Irish gentleman who played for high stakes gallantly and lost without dishonor." Wells has painted a picture of this great Irish parliamentarian that will live. We see him taking up the reins of leadership upon the retirement of Parnell and with matchless skill and unexampled vigor piloting the ship of Ireland's hopes through the rough seas of religious prejudice, political animosity and personal antagonism.

So ably did he carry on his great work that he brought British democracy to a point where, were it not for the outbreak of the great war and the unreasoning radicalism of the Sinn Fein, home rule would undoubtedly have become an accomplished fact.

That he was called to the beyond on the eve of what promised to be the success of his life work is nothing short of a tragedy. For when that mighty brain ceased to function and that silver tongue was stilled, Ireland lost the one man whose powers of sane leadership had always steadied the cause and who was capable, it seems sometimes almost by a miracle, to snatch from what looked like ignominious defeat the very essence of future victory.

That Redmond was opposed to the separatist policy advocated by the Sinn Fein at present and by other Irish leaders in the past is clearly shown in all his efforts to gain home rule. Speaking at Manchester to a great audience representing the best in British democracy he said: "To talk about Ireland separating from the empire is the most utter nonsense." On another occasion, speaking in the House, he flatly asserted that "separation was not possible, but if possible, was not desirable."

The book will appeal to all who desire to approach the Irish question with open minds. The author deals sympathetically with Redmond, but in setting forth the facts of his life, his great achievements and his manifest shortcomings—for he made mistakes—the author has treated his subject without heat and with strict impartiality.

Redmond's loyalty to the empire when the war broke out is a fine exhibition of patriotism. While he still continued to oppose the government in matters purely Irish, he scorned to use his position to in any way embarrass the nation's war programme even though his actions brought down upon him the bitterest criticism and most unwarranted charges of treason to Ireland from the radicals at home.

"Ireland and England."

To write a dispassionate history in the light of perspective is comparatively easy, but to write the history of an age-old and still continuing struggle such as that being waged between Ireland and England, is a task for the genius of the most astute historian.

Such a task has, however, been accomplished by Edward Raymond Turner in his "Ireland and England" (The Century Company.) This history, encompassed in one volume, is a sane, impartial presentation of a subject that has been the theme of untold volumes, but unfortunately with few exceptions those who have attempted to picture the tragic chronicle of the relations of the Emerald Isle and England have colored their pages with prejudice on one side or the other. The result has been that their work has lost much of its force for good and its influence has been limited according to the views of the reader on the subject.

Prof. Turner, who occupies the chair of European history in the University of Michigan, has succeeded in a marked degree in presenting an unbiased record of events, and his interpretation of the various political movements will be welcomed by all students who are honestly desirous of scrutinizing the facts and drawing their own conclusions.

The history of Ireland is sketched from the first centuries of the Christian era. The old Celtic culture is treated with fine sympathy and broad comprehension and its influence on world-culture at the time of its greatest glory is shown.

The sorry tale of political bickering, hot-headed and ill-advised rebellion on the part of the Irish people is told with tolerance and the immediate and underlying causes are treated with lucidity and fullness. The crass stupidity displayed by the British government in its attempts to crush the Irish rebels is also dwelt upon. He shows that the government has utterly failed to appreciate that the Irish, though more rash and precipitate than the British, have nevertheless shown a high conception of the value of political and religious liberty and keenly appreciate the economic disadvantages under which they are at present working.

He rises to a fine height in his analysis of the psychology of the Sinn Fein movement, which had, he says, for its fundamental tenet, the teaching of the people a love for the best in the past and in developing a feeling of strength and self-reliance for the future. He points out the weakness of this same movement, which was not essentially wicked or depraved, but only lacking in practical good sense, in refusing to accept conditions as they existed and turning them to good account.

The home rule movement is fully and comprehensively traced from its inception to the calling of the Irish convention, held at Trinity College, Dublin, in April, 1918.

In discussing this phase of the Irish question the author says: "A system of home rule would almost certainly have been established in Ireland if the war had not broken out, and even in the midst of the struggle it might have been tried except for the Sinn Fein conspiracies and the disorders attendant. But it should be noted that the most potent factor in causing home rule to be withheld was the irreconcilable differences between Irishmen themselves, especially between a part of Ulster and the rest of Ireland."

The conclusions of this scholarly historian are well summed up in the following lines by an Irish wag with a gift for apt verse:

"Och Dublin City there is no doubtin'
Bates any city upon the sea,
For 'tis there you'll hear O'Connell spoutin'
And Lady Morgan makin' tea.
For 'tis the capital av the foinest nation,
Wid a charmin' peasantry and a fruitful sod,
But they're fightin' like divils for conciliation
And hatin' each other for the love of God."

The volume contains a splendid bibliography and a comprehensive index.

SINCLAIR LEWIS.

Sinclair Lewis has turned from the city he portrayed in "The Job" to the free air of the West in his new novel, "Free Air," which will be the first fiction published by Harcourt, Brace & Howe. The novel is half as long again as the version which has just completed serialization, and is based on an actual automobile trip taken by the author. It is about a girl and her father from Brooklyn, a young mechanic from Schoenstrom, Minn., two almost human automobiles and a motor trip from Minneapolis to Seattle. The serial version has already started some autoists on the same trip, notwithstanding that some of the statements of the heroine about western roads have also started official and press correspondence. The novel will be danger. The thought never occurred to me I might be caught in my own crossfire. The seeming complete capitulation of the enemy put me off my guard. When I awoke to realization I had turned into the side trail and found myself traveling with my late prisoner toward—well, that was for the future to herald.

RUSHED OFF HER FEET.

There is no doubt of it. Ray Williams, literally and figuratively, rushed me off my feet. He gave me no breathing space. He never allowed time to pause and reflect.

We were always going some place different, doing something unusual.

A steady stream of flowers and fruit and candy and books and small gifts such as could not offend the maternal dignity flowed toward our home.

I met several of THE Williamses and quite a few persons of such social prominence as is the prerogative of A Williams to know. How utterly silly, how shallow and servile it sounds now! But then—there is no use denying these introductions had their weight.

"I hear you are going to the junior dance, Mary," greeted the mutual friend one afternoon when we met casually on the avenue. "That's simply splendid. Have you made Ray retract on the woman hating question yet?"

"Not yet, but soon," I smiled in my superior way. I felt decidedly above this sort of thing, almost like patronizing the kind hearted little creature who had brought about my Cinderella change.

Another lure that made me careless of what might lie at the end of the trail was the musical clink of gold against gold.

My own family were and always had been thrifty. A dollar with them was a dollar, something to be treated with consideration not unmingled with respect. Unnecessary expenditure, extravagance, was out of the question in our home. Our fortune was too limited for such indulgence, and if it had been otherwise, habit and a natural bent toward canniness would have curbed the open hand.

Against such a background the reckless manner in which Ray Williams disposed of money was as a dazzling red light against a curtain of drab gray. A century note seemed to mean no more to him than a one dollar bill. He went to the most expensive places, ate the costliest food, covered theaters from stage boxes, whirled here and there and everywhere regardless of what he might have to pay the piper.

GETS FEVER OF SPENDING.

For the first time I knew what it meant never to have to ask the price of anything, not to be concerned about dollars and cents. I contracted the spending fever. What a glorious, expansive feeling it is—while the fever lasts.

Alas! It dies out, as do all fevers—unless they grab the chart and run riot. In that case you are the flame that is extinguished.

This spending fever, once it has run its course, leaves you as cold, as wrung dry, as tasteless and as incapable of experiencing taste as a squeezed lemon cast ashore on a stony beach.

Exciting weeks—those first few of friendship.

I never stopped to ask myself if I cared for Ray Williams. Now and then I had qualms of conscience concerning a certain young chap who had beaued me to most of my juvenile parties. The girls who knew said he was awfully cut up about my "throwing him over." I was sorry, but I know now there was a major admixture of selfishness and vanity in my sorrow.

I was certain I was being envied by most of my friends. It was a pleasant inspirational feeling, a positive urge to ambition.

Mother was as happy as a mom-robin in the act of transmitting a large, juicy angleworm from her own beak to the yawing caverns of her birdlings.

As I look back now, it was the sporting spirit which spurred me on. I was getting something other girls had tried for and failed. I was outwitting a fellow human stronger than myself. I was the lucky little kitten which sneaked in and lapped up the saucer of cream while the other cats and kittens were clawing and scratching and purring for place. I was a personage of importance in the heart of my own family. They approved of me, even applauded me and strutted a bit over my success.

If only the trail might have ended there, at the milestone of friendship!

PROPOSAL IN SIGHT.

"Mary," said Ray one evening when we were driving in from a gay dinner at a country inn, "I want to see you alone tomorrow. There is something important I must tell you." He had been quiet for a long time, rather tense, I thought.

Natural instinct of woman warned me what that something was. Here, then, was the logical place to end the journey, to turn back and seek the open road—else to prepare to go on down the end of the trail with this fellow traveler.

Why did I lack the courage, the spine, the will to wheel about and seek unselfish happiness? Why did some one who had suffered not come forward and show me how the fleshpots are filled with gall and the essence of wormwood?

Tomorrow! It should have been the wonder day of my woman's world. Yet here on the brink, the thought of tomorrow brought only a strange sinking sensation, a feverish desire to forget.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Q.: Will you please give me some information about Frederic Douglass, the negro orator? M. D.

A.: Frederic Douglass was a famous anti-slavery orator. He was born and raised as a slave in Maryland. His father was a white man and his mother a negro slave. He married a negro woman. In addition to being a famous orator and writer, he held many important political positions. He died in 1895.

Q.: What was the actual fighting time of the Dempsey and Fulton prize fight? C. E. W.

A.: The actual fighting time of this bout was only eighteen and three-fourths seconds.

Q.: Can you tell me the maiden name of the mother of Jefferson Davis?

A.: Before her marriage Mrs. Davis was Miss Jane Cook.

Q.: Is there any likelihood of the capitol of the United States being moved from Washington? C. N. C.

A.: There has been some discussion in regard to moving the capital away from the District of Columbia, but it is not likely that such a thing will ever be done. Aside from the enormous expense such a movement would entail, Washington has been especially built and beautified with the view of making it the most beautiful city in the United States, and well worthy of being the capitol of the nation.

Q.: What is the average life of a rabbit? J. W. K.

A.: Rabbits live to be five or six years old.

Q.: Is it unlawful to change an undesirable name without going to court? O. M.

A.: A given name is only a means of identification, and is often changed without process of law. A surname, however, remains the same unless it is changed by law.

Q.: Can you inform me how to figure the baseball percentage of a given team? A. J. R.

A.: In order to figure the baseball percentage of any team, divide the total number of games played into the number of games won.

The "Flu" Scare.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In your issue of Sept. 16th there appeared under letters to the editor, an article by a Mr. Graham on the flu scare the American Medical Association is now getting up in advance for the harvest that is to follow. I wish to unqualifiedly indorse every word of this artcle. It is almost unbelievable that these medical pirates who have made such a dismal failure in their treatment of this disease, have the gall to even say one word about the disease reappearing.

The drugless physicians have been dogged and hounded from one State of the Union to the other yet the record of the drugless schools of healing shows up in comparison to the allopathic, alias American Medical Association, as does a modern limousine to an old Spanish ox cart. There is selfish greed, ignorance, orthodoxy and profiteering by serum venders, that is behind the whole damnable scheme of serum therapy.

Will the people ever learn that fear is the greatest curse that has ever afflicted man, and then why, in the name of common horse sense, spread the idea now in advance; advance press agents, of course. Will the great Jehovah protect us from the scheming medical politicians whose knowledge of nature and her methods is so small that it would take volumes to state what they don't know.

HOPES DEPARTED.

In the annals of state our Hiram stood higher
Than either Hiram Abiff or Hiram of Tyre.
As a worker constructive we were sure he would stand
In the Senate for reforms that would help all the land.

Let us talk to you, Hiram—your word was our law—
In a Presidential contest we decided the draw.
You would not be ignored and our will you expressed
By telling the bosses: "Thus sayeth the Great West."

As they say down in Georgia, "You've done gone and done it."
You surely have been stung by a bee in your bonnet.
You've forgotten our wishes—your friends and relations—
In opposing the Peace Covenant and League of the Nations.

You have gone from us, Hiram, like a prodigal son.
Has riotous living caused the thing you have done?
For the people out here, regardless of creeds,
Think the League of the Nations the thing the world needs.

But Hiram, dear Hiram, our hearts are made sad,
For we very much fear you have gone to the bad.
We had hoped, oh, so fondly, you'd sit in the chair
In the White House—but Hiram, you'll never get there.

Still Chewing.

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In answer to your Claremont mother, is she an intimate friend of Alma Whitaker that she should judge whether or not she has done her duty as a truly Americanized woman? Unless we know whereof we speak, none of us should dare to judge.

As regards the gum, I, too, am a young American mother, but shall certainly see that the day will never come when gum shall be found in every available spot in our home, for to me it seems one of the most disgusting habits of our American public, and to be forced to see and meet with it in all public places, men, women and children's jaws going constantly, certainly cannot be a picture to be admired.

She speaks of our "English" sister. I think if our American children were more trained along the English lines the children would be far more of a joy both to their parents and the general public, and our boys and girls would be children far longer than they are at present, for now the greater per cent. are world wise and world weary before they are out of their teens.

One word in regard to apartment and home owners who object to children. Can you blame them when so many children have no idea of regard for other people's possessions or feelings, and how few mothers are willing to admit that rare is the case when their children leave a home or apartment in the same condition as they find it, and how, if they are allowed to put gum in every place from mother's cut glass to their school seats, are they going to respect and care for other people's property if they do not know it in their own home, and who but the mothers are to blame? Let us teach the children a little more manners, and a reverence for things belonging to others, and then our children will be more of a pleasure to themselves and others brought into contact with them, and when that comes to pass, there will be more apartments and homes where children will be welcome.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I think we all owe a vote of thanks to the editor of The Times, who makes space in his valuable paper for an expression of our views.

AN AMERICAN MOTHER.

Speaks for the People.

MONROVIA, Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I notice that President Wilson in his speeches puts much stress on "The independence of nations, and the "voice of the people in government." Rather a paradoxical figure of speech in view of the fact that he spent six months in Paris against the desires of the American people and is now scurrying across the continent (at government expense,) accompanied by an entourage of fifty persons, just because the United States Senate, duly elected representatives of the pople (who are not permitted a direct voice in the matter) refused to accept, without comment, every article in the League of Nations constructed according to European diplomatic plans and specifications. As the President said in his auditorium speech, "facts and proof are concrete things."

B. W. JACOBS.

His Castle.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] An Englishman's home is his castle and free from invasion, but the poor American boob must open his doors and let the police search his pockets and his closets to prove that he has no naughty beer hidden!

Oh, where is American manhood?

JOHN BULL.

Too Much Room.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Forty-three rooms at the Alexandria Hotel, we are told, where required to suitably house Woodrow Wilson, President of the democracy of America's United States. Shades of the Revolutionary patriots fighting half-naked through the winter at Valley Forge! Ghost of Benjamin Franklin refusing to doff his suit of plain black when appearing before the gorgeous court at Versailles!

Whither are we going?

L. E. M.

Organized Anarchy.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] There have been editorials recently in The Times that have been timely and have furnished food for reflection for those who think.

The writer has been a wage-earner for more than a generation past, and is in sympathy with the wage earning class. They are entitled to fair wages, something more than enough to satisfy the pangs of hunger. Labor has not been treated fairly in the past, but anti-bellum conditions are a thing of the past. Labor unions are all right if conducted in the proper way, but they are now dominated by the radical element who prefer strife to harmony. The walking delegate goes about trying to stir up trouble; he is opposed to a plant being operated on a profit-sharing basis; because he is afraid if the men were satisfied they would withdraw from the unions.

It is the purpose of the radical leaders to form one big union and when they succed in unionizing the police force and the firemen in the larger cities; to call a nation-wide strike. After the policemen and firemen desert their posts, the cities are to be given over to the mobs to pillage and loot. The anarchists and I.W.W's. union men say boldly that labor created the wealth of the country and the laborers are entitled to take all their needs may require. It is the aim of this element to endeavor to overturn the government within the next twelve months,—substituting a soviet government along the line of the Russian Bolsheviki. While they mean to dispoil the wealthy they have no love or sympathy for the middle class and desire to exterminate them. Some wiseacre will say, "It is impossible for anything like that to occur in this country." But strange things have happened.

The union leaders are opposed to a large standing army but they don't give their true reasons for this opposition. A very large majority of the people of the United States stand for law and order; but as they are not organized and there is no co-operation they would be heavily handicapped in a sudden emergency. The plotters are well organized and their espionage system will soon rival that of the Germans in this country just prior to the great war. The unions leaders denounce every decent man as a scab who does not carry a union card in his pocket. They do not concede that he has a right to work for a living unless he is affiliated with some union. The radical leaders do not hesitate in saying they will make the ends justify the means.

The Hon. Hiram has been traipsing over the country airing his views, he has been telling his hearers their liberties have been abridged, free speech denied. The Hon. Hiram's jaw bone seems to be in good working order. He addressed the ranks of the anarchists when ever he spoke.

JUSTICE.

Look 'Em Over.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Is it not enough for a body to get the right idea of the League of Nations to measure the men who stand for it with those who are agin it? Not that I would be after asking you to go into the details as regards the latter as an honest opinion might be unfit for print.

Is there any reason why this country should act only as may happen to please Berlin, Dublin, or Rome? What have they done for us, anyway?

I can't sign myself as an old subscriber, as I am only a new arrival and learn't of your paper by being told it gave the best tips in the exciting game of house hunting.

"THE OLD MADHOUSE."

A Posthumous Novel by William De Morgan Which He Left Unfinished, the Final Chapter Being Written by His Wife.

"The Old Madhouse."

In "The Old Madhouse," the posthumous work of William De Morgan (Henry Holt & Co.,) we find again the racy humor, the faculty of vivid characterization, the deep interest in human life as all and sundry live it, and the rare geniality of spirit which will make this author long remembered.

Nor will the judicious reader grieve at the ordered leisureliness with which the story is developed. De Morgan's literary miles are assuredly Irish ones. Yet we cannot begrudge him the distances which he makes us traverse, since our guide is at once so wise, so witty, and so pre-eminently companionable.

De Morgan had not finished this work when death overtook him, but Mrs. De Morgan was able to supply the closing chapter. In the explanatory note Mrs. De Morgan appends to the book she gives some interesting side-lights on De Morgan's literary methods. She says, in part: "As the story was always read to me while in progress I too got to believe in the reality of the characters, and found myself thinking of them as real, live people, and I have frequently asked him when he came down to lunch, or had finished writing for the day, such a question as, for instance, 'Well, have they quarreled yet?' and he would reply, as the case might be, 'No, I don't know if they will come to a quarrel; after, all, I must wait and see what they do.' However, toward the end of the book, when an intelligible winding-up of the story became imperative, the plot was taken up and carefully considered, all the straggling threads gathered together and finalities decided upon, though latitude was always allowed for details to shape themselves after their own fashion.

"Thus it happened on that last Friday night in December, when my husband laid down his pen in the middle of a sentence never to be completed, he had told me as much as he knew himself of what the ending of the book was to be. I am therefore able to give a short synopsis of his ideas, and furthermore to assure the reader that not one word has been altered in the manuscript."

In its inimitable style, its thoroughly delightful delineation of character, and its pleasing whimsicality this is on a par with other works of De Morgan. But the plot of "The Old Madhouse" is more in need of rebuilding or rebuttressing than was the house itself, for a more shaky edifice than this was surely never insecurely pinned together. But with lovers of De Morgan the plot's not the thing; it is the author's interpretation of life, his kindly but pointed analysis of character, his drollery, and his thousand whimsicalities that endear him to a host of readers. The plot may or may not be plausible; the book will nevertheless delight its thousands of readers.

That part of the tale treating of the beautiful Lucy Snaith, who, instead of keeping her beaux yeux for her lawful lord, persisted in using them for the total subjugation of her husband's friend, whom she finally eloped with—or rather to—is sufficiently plausible. That after being divorced and married once more she should tire of her victim, and again bolt, this time with an amorous Russian nobleman, is also reasonable. To what other end did Russian noblemen so long exist but to be at once a bait and a goal for charming but skittish specimens of femininity?

That the cast-off lover should return to the arms of his affectionate mother, and that the first husband, the worthy "Nosey" Snaith, should obtain surcease of sorrow and a faithful nurse for his infant heir by wedding the angular but clever "Elbows," is a highly satisfactory settlement of affairs.

But surely there never was so unnecessary and unsatisfactory a ghost as that which haunts the pages of this book. Why should a sensible ghost persist in shouting to his nephew, "Come back, Fred," when the latter walked through the hall, and yet refuse to say more? Why should he—with a ghost's well-known power of looking through space at will—have taken the trouble to appear and talk with the wronged nephew too late to accomplish any good end?

May the kindly soul of De Morgan forgive the expression of the deliberate opinion that though as a cheerer and purifier of men's hearts he was a shining success, yet as a spook creator and exhibitor he was a distinct failure.

What Literature Lives.

What survives from the past is not the prose, but the poetic fiction, not the novel, but the epic, which abounded from the Iliad and the Odyssey, and the Aeneid through all the rhyming train of Italian romantic and heroic and burlesque stories, not to name in such company the Lusiad, the Portuguese epic of Camoens. The Spaniards had their great national ballad of the Cid which nobody has probably read through to this day, though many had partially sung it in its own day. In England Milton followed the epical tradition with "Paradise Lost," going to a much mythologized heaven for his plot. The poets everywhere had the pattern of the epic from antiquity and they varied it at their pleasure so long as they did not depart from the metrical form. It was not till we came to Cervantes that the true modern ideal of prose fiction affirmed itself as the supreme literary form, through Shakespeare, who shares the dominion of time with him, is mainly metrical in his drama. It is the curious fate of the wholly metrical Milton, indeed, to survive in spite of his verse as the favorite author of the childlike Russian people, who, perhaps because they have him in a prose translation, now love him beyond any other novelist, alive or dead.—[W. WASHINGTON. June 22d 1904

Darling Ethel,
Here goes for the picture letter!

Ethel administers necessary discipline to Archie and Quentin.

ROOSEVELT TO HIS CHILDREN.

Theodore Roosevelt was a many-sided genius. As President he stamped the impress of his personality on the country; as a writer he produced a formidable array of volumes; as a traveler, explorer and big game hunter he won world-wide repute, but unless the world loses its love for the simple and sincere things of life Roosevelt will be longest read and remembered through his letters to his children.

That this posthumous volume, "Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to His Children," edited by Joseph Bucklin Bishop (Charles Scribner's Sons,) with its wealth of fatherly affection, illuminated by a whimsical humor that is the delight of the child heart, will form the keystone to the arch of Roosevelt's literary fame, no one who reads these delightfully simple and sincere epistles can for one moment doubt.

The letters cover a period of twenty years. The first letter is dated at Camp at Tampa, May 6, 1898, and is inscribed to "Blessed Bunnies." All through the letters are addressed to "Darling Little Ethel," "Blessed Ted," "Blessed Archie," "Blessed Kermit," and when finally Quentin came to the age where he was able to appreciate a letter we find "Blessed Quenty-Quee."

The heart of the boy concealed in the robust body of the President of a great nation is revealed when in January, 1905, he consented to accompany nine boys, including three of his own, for what he called a "scramble" through Rock Creek Park, in Washington. Regardless of the demands made upon his time and energies by the great press of public duties, this devoted father always found time to give himself in the spirit of a "pal" to his family of robust boys and their lively sister Ethel. Their simplest games or most strenuous romps were shared with equal enthusiasm.

We find in these letters all the quaint sayings of Quentin, the gallant young aviator who now sleeps "in Flanders fields where poppies blow," for Quentin was a quaint and curious child who was eternally getting into some sort of boyish mischief. On April 30, 1906, he writes this in a letter to Dear Kermit: "Quentin is the funniest mite you ever saw and certainly a very original little fellow. He left at Mademoiselle's plate yesterday a large bunch of flowers with the inscription that they were from the fairies to her to reward her for taking care of 'two good, good boys.'"

The letters are remarkable in that they mark the advance of the age of the children. They are written as from one equal to another and as the children grew and approached manhood and womanhood the tone of the letters changed to meet the advancing intelligence of each and were rich in kindly suggestion and sound advice through all of which the father's great affection beamed.

His references to their mother are models of that perfect love that a great and good man is capable of bestowing on his wife and the mother of his children.

That Roosevelt loved animals, though some people will find it difficult to recognize love in the heart of a great hunter, is shown in a letter dated at the White House, April 1, 1906. It reads: "Darling Archie: Poor Skip is a very, very lonely little dog without his family. Each morning he comes up to see me at breakfast time and during most of breakfast (which I take in the hall just outside my room) Skip stands with his little paws on my lap. Then when I get through and sit down in the rocking chair to read for fifteen or twenty minutes, Skip hops into my lap and stays there, just bathing himself in the companionship of the only one of his family he has left. The rest of the day he spends with the ushers, as I am so frightfully busy that I am nowhere long enough for Skip to have any real satisfaction in my companionship."

All through the letters runs a continuous reference to birds of the air, beasts of the field, forest and jungle and even to the fishes of the sea. He seems especially to have delighted in recounting the antics of the various animals with which he came in contact in his wanderings over the far and near places of the world and his great child heart made it possible for him to appreciate how his children would love to read his quaint tales of the doings of these animals.

The picture letters are among the most interesting of the series, particularly one which is reproduced in part herewith, dated at the White House, June 22, 1904, and addressed to his daughter, "Darling Ethel." Roosevelt was not an artist, but in a crude way he succeeded in visualizing for his child playmates and pals the thought which he wished to convey and in this picture, "Ethel administering necessary discipline to Archie and Quentin," he certainly, in the language of the street, "gets it over."

The introduction is written by the editor, Joseph Bucklin Bishop. That Mr. Bishop fully appreciates the man whose letters he is giving to the public is shown by the keen sympathy with which he handles the work. In closing the introduction the editor quotes Roosevelt as having said to him a short time before he died: "I would rather have this book published than anything that has ever been written about me."

CURRENT REVIEWS.

"The Story of a Lover."

Here is a book that would have caused Anthony Comstock to throw a series of cataleptic fits before high heaven. "The Story of a Lover," anonymous (Boni & Liveright,) will, even though the late lamented custodian of purity in art and literature is no more, cause a merry little row in literary circles unless I miss my guess.

To avoid possible misinterpretation this book should have been entitled "The Story of a Self Lover," for surely no crasser expression of absolute egoism could possibly have been written.

The creature who could subject his wife—to whom through the involuntary obedience to the law of attraction he was naturally drawn, because she possessed an ampler and deeper nature than his own—to such a course of prying, grilling, lacerating vivisection, knew as little of true love as God's cherubim do of hatred. One is reminded of a sentence pronounced by Maurice Hewlett's "Artemis" on a similar individual: "He wants me only that he may mangle me."

It seems scarcely worth while to remind such beings of the age-old truth embodied by Clement of Alexandria in this brief but pregnant sentence: "Love is the true hierophant of all the mysteries of the universe." In order to comprehend aught of nature, art, the eternal feminine, or anything else worth while, one must bring to the task earnest love. Naturally a contemptible Peeping Tom, like the author of this book, could never become really acquainted with the woman he had wedded, spiritually violated and physically betrayed.

One thing remains to be said of this erotic autobiography. If this man's utter lack of pure love which "vaunteth not itself" shut the door of his wife's soul in his face his rank sensuality double-locked and barred it. The revelation of the divinity enshrined in unspoiled specimens of humanity comes only "to the pure and simple soul in a clean and chaste body."

That the picture he has drawn of his amorous imaginings will appeal to a wide circle of readers is highly problematical. It will, nevertheless, be interesting to watch the sale of this book.

The story is shot through with purple patches. It is evidently the work of a man suffering from a bad case of brain storm in which passion is the predominating element. The way in which this so-called lover describes his passion reminds one of Huxley's famous comment on Swinburne's poetry: "He mistakes his caterwauling for the music of the spheres."

"The Promises of Alice."

Margaret Deland's new book, a novelette entitled "The Promises of Alice" (Harper & Bros.,) is a psychological study of the New England conscience as revealed in the character of Alice Alden, the primly serious daughter of the clergyman of West Meadows.

This timid, gentle creature had been from her earliest babyhood "vowed to the Lord" by her mother as a missionary to China. At the age of 15 she solemnly repeated the vow on her knees at her mother's side, though inwardly quaking at the prospect of the martyrdom that awaited her. How one obstacle after another was overcome with the aid of Cousin Mary and the way made clear for Alice to keep her vow, though in her heart of hearts it was the last thing she wanted to do, makes a plot that develops naturally to the final denouement.

Upon the death of Alice's mother the girl solemnly takes up the duty that lies nearest her, that of making a home for her father, postponing into the indefinite future the missionary life in China. Her relief, her qualms of conscience over that feeling of respite, her repeated declaration to herself that she would have gone if she could, give a remarkably clear delineation of the character. Believing that her duty at home makes it impossible for her to keep her vow, she follows the dictates of her heart and promises herself to her lover, Neely Henderson. Then Cousin Mary offers to take Alice's place as her father's companion and housekeeper, and Alice finds herself bound by two incompatible vows.

The solution of the difficulty, in which Alice escapes from her morbidity and comes to a realization of the paragon of a lover she has won in Neely, is handled with the masterly skill that belongs to Mrs. Deland.

While this is a simple story simply told that will do little to add to the author's fame, it is eminently worth while for the keen character delineation and the quiet humor that prevails throughout.

"Curly of Circle Bar."

This story, which opens amid a hail of bullets, one of which ends the career of Jim Harden, rancher and cattle rustler, is heralded by the publishers as ideal reading for boys. As a matter of fact "Curly of Circle Bar," by Joseph Bushnell Ames (The Century Company,) makes mighty poor reading for man or boy.

The plot is a fizzle, the characters are loosely drawn and unconvincing. The one possible feature of the book that deserves commendation is the picture of how cattle ranching is conducted these days on the big fenced ranges of the Southwest. Even this picture is blurred and hazy at times.

Curly and his chum Homer play a leading role. Dorothy is one of those insipid females whom the author tries to float through his pages on her looks. The villain and his tricks are too absurdly patent and the end of the story is as flat as the contents of a long-uncorked bottle of soda pop.

"The Hand of the Potter."

"The Hand of the Potter," a tragedy in four acts, by Theodore Dreiser, has just come from the publishers, Boni & Liveright, though the work was produced last year. It is a powerful plea for enlightened treatment of moral defectives, who come from the hand of the potter unfit and unable to withstand the temptations with which they are surrounded.

The tragic family of the poor old Jewish peddler, Aaron Berchansky, and their pitiable attempt to conceal the guilt of the defective son and brother, Isadore, so that they may remain respectable in the eyes of their tenement neighbors, is depicted with a realism that is as depressing as it is convincing.

The character of Isadore, with his jerking shoulder, possessed by a black passion that makes a fiend of him, is depicted in all his dreadful deformity of body and soul, proclaiming the age-old truth that each of us is his brother's keeper, whether we will or no.

As for the remedy, Dreiser leaves us in doubt. How society can best deal with the criminally defective is a problem too intricate to be solved in a four-act play and it may well be said that there are more fitting vehicles for the discussion of such problems than plays, whether in four acts or less.

"Yellow Men Sleep."

Those who enjoy a story packed full of dramatic episodes and tense situations will find in "Yellow Men Sleep," by Jeremy Lane (The Century Company,) a yarn to their liking.

The human interest element of the tale centers around the rescue of an American girl held prisoner since babyhood in a mysterious empire in the midst of the great Gobi desert of Mongolia.

Running through the story is a sub-plot dealing with the activities of the United States secret service in its efforts to locate the source of a mysterious drug known as koresh. Con Levington, who is the hero of the tale, undertakes a mission, agreeing not to read his final sealed instructions until he reaches a certain city on the edge of the great desert.

The ramifications of the story are far-reaching and complicated. The reader is carried into the mysterious innerland of China, across limitless desert reaches and over the graves of cities long dead and forgotten.

In the words of the slip cover the story "is a thriller, but not a thriller of the conventional type. It is romance, but not of the stereotyped plot and style. It is an amazing achievement that the reader will not soon forget."

"THE LIFE OF JOHN REDMOND."

In his remarkably readable biographical story, "The Life of John Redmond" (George H. Doran Company,) Warren B. Wells has, consciously or unconsciously, given to the world a history of Ireland that will do much to clarify in the minds of many people a number of moot points in one of the most tragic and dramatic periods in the annals of modern times.

In John Redmond we find "the fine figure of a great Irish gentleman who played for high stakes gallantly and lost without dishonor." Wells has painted a picture of this great Irish parliamentarian that will live. We see him taking up the reins of leadership upon the retirement of Parnell and with matchless skill and unexampled vigor piloting the ship of Ireland's hopes through the rough seas of religious prejudice, political animosity and personal antagonism.

So ably did he carry on his great work that he brought British democracy to a point where, were it not for the outbreak of the great war and the unreasoning radicalism of the Sinn Fein, home rule would undoubtedly have become an accomplished fact.

That he was called to the beyond on the eve of what promised to be the success of his life work is nothing short of a tragedy. For when that mighty brain ceased to function and that silver tongue was stilled, Ireland lost the one man whose powers of sane leadership had always steadied the cause and who was capable, it seems sometimes almost by a miracle, to snatch from what looked like ignominious defeat the very essence of future victory.

That Redmond was opposed to the separatist policy advocated by the Sinn Fein at present and by other Irish leaders in the past is clearly shown in all his efforts to gain home rule. Speaking at Manchester to a great audience representing the best in British democracy he said: "To talk about Ireland separating from the empire is the most utter nonsense." On another occasion, speaking in the House, he flatly asserted that "separation was not possible, but if possible, was not desirable."

The book will appeal to all who desire to approach the Irish question with open minds. The author deals sympathetically with Redmond, but in setting forth the facts of his life, his great achievements and his manifest shortcomings—for he made mistakes—the author has treated his subject without heat and with strict impartiality.

Redmond's loyalty to the empire when the war broke out is a fine exhibition of patriotism. While he still continued to oppose the government in matters purely Irish, he scorned to use his position to in any way embarrass the nation's war programme even though his actions brought down upon him the bitterest criticism and most unwarranted charges of treason to Ireland from the radicals at home.

"Ireland and England."

To write a dispassionate history in the light of perspective is comparatively easy, but to write the history of an age-old and still continuing struggle such as that being waged between Ireland and England, is a task for the genius of the most astute historian.

Such a task has, however, been accomplished by Edward Raymond Turner in his "Ireland and England" (The Century Company.) This history, encompassed in one volume, is a sane, impartial presentation of a subject that has been the theme of untold volumes, but unfortunately with few exceptions those who have attempted to picture the tragic chronicle of the relations of the Emerald Isle and England have colored their pages with prejudice on one side or the other. The result has been that their work has lost much of its force for good and its influence has been limited according to the views of the reader on the subject.

Prof. Turner, who occupies the chair of European history in the University of Michigan, has succeeded in a marked degree in presenting an unbiased record of events, and his interpretation of the various political movements will be welcomed by all students who are honestly desirous of scrutinizing the facts and drawing their own conclusions.

The history of Ireland is sketched from the first centuries of the Christian era. The old Celtic culture is treated with fine sympathy and broad comprehension and its influence on world-culture at the time of its greatest glory is shown.

The sorry tale of political bickering, hot-headed and ill-advised rebellion on the part of the Irish people is told with tolerance and the immediate and underlying causes are treated with lucidity and fullness. The crass stupidity displayed by the British government in its attempts to crush the Irish rebels is also dwelt upon. He shows that the government has utterly failed to appreciate that the Irish, though more rash and precipitate than the British, have nevertheless shown a high conception of the value of political and religious liberty and keenly appreciate the economic disadvantages under which they are at present working.

He rises to a fine height in his analysis of the psychology of the Sinn Fein movement, which had, he says, for its fundamental tenet, the teaching of the people a love for the best in the past and in developing a feeling of strength and self-reliance for the future. He points out the weakness of this same movement, which was not essentially wicked or depraved, but only lacking in practical good sense, in refusing to accept conditions as they existed and turning them to good account.

The home rule movement is fully and comprehensively traced from its inception to the calling of the Irish convention, held at Trinity College, Dublin, in April, 1918.

In discussing this phase of the Irish question the author says: "A system of home rule would almost certainly have been established in Ireland if the war had not broken out, and even in the midst of the struggle it might have been tried except for the Sinn Fein conspiracies and the disorders attendant. But it should be noted that the most potent factor in causing home rule to be withheld was the irreconcilable differences between Irishmen themselves, especially between a part of Ulster and the rest of Ireland."

The conclusions of this scholarly historian are well summed up in the following lines by an Irish wag with a gift for apt verse:

"Och Dublin City there is no doubtin'
Bates any city upon the sea,
For 'tis there you'll hear O'Connell spoutin'
And Lady Morgan makin' tea.
For 'tis the capital av the foinest nation,
Wid a charmin' peasantry and a fruitful sod,
But they're fightin' like divils for conciliation
And hatin' each other for the love of God."

The volume contains a splendid bibliography and a comprehensive index.

SINCLAIR LEWIS.

Sinclair Lewis has turned from the city he portrayed in "The Job" to the free air of the West in his new novel, "Free Air," which will be the first fiction published by Harcourt, Brace & Howe. The novel is half as long again as the version which has just completed serialization, and is based on an actual automobile trip taken by the author. It is about a girl and her father from Brooklyn, a young mechanic from Schoenstrom, Minn., two almost human automobiles and a motor trip from Minneapolis to Seattle. The serial version has already started some autoists on the same trip, notwithstanding that some of the statements of the heroine about western roads have also started official and press correspondence. The novel will be danger. The thought never occurred to me I might be caught in my own crossfire. The seeming complete capitulation of the enemy put me off my guard. When I awoke to realization I had turned into the side trail and found myself traveling with my late prisoner toward—well, that was for the future to herald.

RUSHED OFF HER FEET.

There is no doubt of it, Ray Williams, literally and figuratively, rushed me off my feet. He gave me no breathing space. He never allowed time to pause and reflect.

We were always going some place different, doing something unusual.

A steady stream of flowers and fruit and candy and books and small gifts such as could not offend the maternal dignity flowed toward our home.

I met several of THE Williamses and quite a few persons of such social prominence as is the prerogative of A Williams to know. How utterly silly, how shallow and servile it sounds now! But then—there is no use denying these introductions had their weight.

"I hear you are going to the junior dance, Mary," greeted the mutual friend one afternoon when we met casually on the avenue. "That's simply splendid. Have you made Ray retract on the woman hating question yet?"

"Not yet, but soon," I smiled in my superior way. I felt decidedly above this sort of thing, almost like patronizing the kind hearted little creature who had brought about my Cinderella change.

Another lure that made me careless of what might lie at the end of the trail was the musical clink of gold against gold.

My own family were and always had been thrifty. A dollar with them was a dollar, something to be treated with consideration not unmingled with respect. Unnecessary expenditure, extravagance, was out of the question in our home. Our fortune was too limited for such indulgence, and if it had been otherwise, habit and a natural bent toward canniness would have curbed the open hand.

Against such a background the reckless manner in which Ray Williams disposed of money was as a dazzling red light against a curtain of drab gray. A century note seemed to mean no more to him than a one dollar bill. He went to the most expensive places, ate the costliest food, covered theaters from stage boxes, whirled here and there and everywhere regardless of what he might have to pay the piper.

GETS FEVER OF SPENDING.

For the first time I knew what it meant never to have to ask the price of anything, not to be concerned about dollars and cents. I contracted the spending fever. What a glorious, expansive feeling it is—while the fever lasts.

Alas! It dies out, as do all fevers—unless they grab the chart and run riot. In that case you are the flame that is extinguished.

This spending fever, once it has run its course, leaves you as cold, as wrung dry, as tasteless and as incapable of experiencing taste as a squeezed lemon cast ashore on a stony beach.

Exciting weeks—those first few of friendship.

I never stopped to ask myself if I cared for Ray Williams. Now and then I had qualms of conscience concerning a certain young chap who had beaued me to most of my juvenile parties. The girls who knew said he was awfully cut up about my "throwing him over." I was sorry, but I know now there was a major admixture of selfishness and vanity in my sorrow.

I was certain I was being envied by most of my friends. It was a pleasant inspirational feeling, a positive urge to ambition.

Mother was as happy as a mom-robin in the act of transmitting a large, juicy angleworm from her own beak to the yawing caverns of her birdlings.

As I look back now, it was the sporting spirit which spurred me on. I was getting something other girls had tried for and failed. I was outwitting a fellow human stronger than myself. I was the lucky little kitten which sneaked in and lapped up the saucer of cream while the other cats and kittens were clawing and scratching and purring for place. I was a personage of importance in the heart of my own family. They approved of me, even applauded me and strutted a bit over my success.

If only the trail might have ended there, at the milestone of friendship!

PROPOSAL IN SIGHT.

"Mary," said Ray one evening when we were driving in from a gay dinner at a country inn, "I want to see you alone tomorrow. There is something important I must tell you." He had been quiet for a long time, rather tense, I thought.

Natural instinct of woman warned me what that something was. Here, then, was the logical place to end the journey, to turn back and seek the open road—else to prepare to go on down the end of the trail with this fellow traveler.

Why did I lack the courage, the spine, the will to wheel about and seek unselfish happiness? Why did some one who had suffered not come forward and show me how the fleshpots are filled with gall and the essence of wormwood?

Tomorrow! It should have been the wonder day of my woman's world. Yet here on the brink, the thought of tomorrow brought only a strange sinking sensation, a feverish desire to forget.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Q.: Will you please give me some information about Frederic Douglass, the negro orator? M. D.

A.: Frederic Douglass was a famous anti-slavery orator. He was born and raised as a slave in Maryland. His father was a white man and his mother a negro slave. He married a negro woman. In addition to being a famous orator and writer, he held many important political positions. He died in 1895.

Q.: What was the actual fighting time of the Dempsey and Fulton prize fight? C. E. W.

A.: The actual fighting time of this bout was only eighteen and three-fourths seconds.

Q.: Can you tell me the maiden name of the mother of Jefferson Davis?

A.: Before her marriage Mrs. Davis was Miss Jane Cook.

Q.: Is there any likelihood of the capitol of the United States being moved from Washington? C. N. C.

A.: There has been some discussion in regard to moving the capital away from the District of Columbia, but it is not likely that such a thing will ever be done. Aside from the enormous expense such a movement would entail, Washington has been especially built and beautified with the view of making it the most beautiful city in the United States, and well worthy of being the capitol of the nation.

Q.: What is the average life of a rabbit? J. W. K.

A.: Rabbits live to be five or six years old.

Q.: Is it unlawful to change an undesirable name without going to court? O. M.

A.: A given name is only a means of identification, and is often changed without process of law. A surname, however, remains the same unless it is changed by law.

Q.: Can you inform me how to figure the baseball percentage of a given team? A. J. R.

A.: In order to figure the baseball percentage of any team, divide the total number of games played into the number of games won.

The "Flu" Scare.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In your issue of Sept. 16th there appeared under letters to the editor, an article by a Mr. Graham on the flu scare the American Medical Association is now getting up in advance for the harvest that is to follow. I wish to unqualifiedly indorse every word of this artcle. It is almost unbelievable that these medical pirates who have made such a dismal failure in their treatment of this disease, have the gall to even say one word about the disease reappearing.

The drugless physicians have been dogged and hounded from one State of the Union to the other yet the record of the drugless schools of healing shows up in comparison to the allopathic, alias American Medical Association, as does a modern limousine to an old Spanish ox cart. There is selfish greed, ignorance, orthodoxy and profiteering by serum venders, that is behind the whole damnable scheme of serum therapy.

Will the people ever learn that fear is the greatest curse that has ever afflicted man, and then why, in the name of common horse sense, spread the idea now in advance; advance press agents, of course. Will the great Jehovah protect us from the scheming medical politicians whose knowledge of nature and her methods is so small that it would take volumes to state what they don't know.

HOPES DEPARTED.

In the annals of state our Hiram stood higher
Than either Hiram Abiff or Hiram of Tyre.
As a worker constructive we were sure he would stand
In the Senate for reforms that would help all the land.

Let us talk to you, Hiram—your word was our law—
In a Presidential contest we decided the draw.
You would not be ignored and our will you expressed
By telling the bosses: "Thus sayeth the Great West."

As they say down in Georgia, "You've done gone and done it."
You surely have been stung by a bee in your bonnet.
You've forgotten our wishes—your friends and relations—
In opposing the Peace Covenant and League of the Nations.

You have gone from us, Hiram, like a prodigal son.
Has riotous living caused the thing you have done?
For the people out here, regardless of creeds,
Think the League of the Nations the thing the world needs.

But Hiram, dear Hiram, our hearts are made sad,
For we very much fear you have gone to the bad.
We had hoped, oh, so fondly, you'd sit in the chair
In the White House—but Hiram, you'll never get there.

Still Chewing.

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In answer to your Claremont mother, is she an intimate friend of Alma Whitaker that she should judge whether or not she has done her duty as a truly Americanized woman? Unless we know whereof we speak, none of us should dare to judge.

As regards the gum, I, too, am a young American mother, but shall certainly see that the day will never come when gum shall be found in every available spot in our home, for to me it seems one of the most disgusting habits of our American public, and to be forced to see and meet with it in all public places, men, women and children's jaws going constantly, certainly cannot be a picture to be admired.

She speaks of our "English" sister. I think if our American children were more trained along the English lines the children would be far more of a joy both to their parents and the general public, and our boys and girls would be children far longer than they are at present, for now the greater per cent. are world wise and world weary before they are out of their teens.

One word in regard to apartment and home owners who object to children. Can you blame them when so many children have no idea of regard for other people's possessions or feelings, and how few mothers are willing to admit that rare is the case when their children leave a home or apartment in the same condition as they find it, and how, if they are allowed to put gum in every place from mother's cut glass to their school seats, are they going to respect and care for other people's property if they do not know it in their own home, and who but the mothers are to blame? Let us teach the children a little more manners, and a reverence for things belonging to others, and then our children will be more of a pleasure to themselves and others brought into contact with them, and when that comes to pass, there will be more apartments and homes where children will be welcome.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I think we all owe a vote of thanks to the editor of The Times, who makes space in his valuable paper for an expression of our views.

AN AMERICAN MOTHER.

Speaks for the People.

MONROVIA, Sept. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I notice that President Wilson in his speeches puts much stress on "The independence of nations, and the "voice of the people in government." Rather a paradoxical figure of speech in view of the fact that he spent six months in Paris against the desires of the American people and is now scurrying across the continent (at government expense,) accompanied by an entourage of fifty persons, just because the United States Senate, duly elected representatives of the pople (who are not permitted a direct voice in the matter) refused to accept, without comment, every article in the League of Nations constructed according to European diplomatic plans and specifications. As the President said in his auditorium speech, "facts and proof are concrete things."

B. W. JACOBS.

His Castle.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] An Englishman's home is his castle and free from invasion, but the poor American boob must open his doors and let the police search his pockets and his closets to prove that he has no naughty beer hidden!

Oh, where is American manhood?

JOHN BULL.

Too Much Room.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Forty-three rooms at the Alexandria Hotel, we are told, where required to suitably house Woodrow Wilson, President of the democracy of America's United States. Shades of the Revolutionary patriots fighting half-naked through the winter at Valley Forge! Ghost of Benjamin Franklin refusing to doff his suit of plain black when appearing before the gorgeous court at Versailles!

Whither are we going?

Organized Anarchy.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] There have been editorials recently in The Times that have been timely and have furnished food for reflection for those who think.

The writer has been a wage-earner for more than a generation past, and is in sympathy with the wage earning class. They are entitled to fair wages, something more than enough to satisfy the pangs of hunger. Labor has not been treated fairly in the past, but anti-bellum conditions are a thing of the past. Labor unions are all right if conducted in the proper way, but they are now dominated by the radical element who prefer strife to harmony. The walking delegate goes about trying to stir up trouble; he is opposed to a plant being operated on a profit-sharing basis; because he is afraid if the men were satisfied they would withdraw from the unions.

It is the purpose of the radical leaders to form one big union and when they succed in unionizing the police force and the firemen in the larger cities; to call a nation-wide strike. After the policemen and firemen desert their posts, the cities are to be given over to the mobs to pillage and loot. The anarchists and I.W.W's. union men say boldly that labor created the wealth of the country and the laborers are entitled to take all their needs may require. It is the aim of this element to endeavor to overturn the government within the next twelve months,—substituting a soviet government along the line of the Russian Bolsheviki. While they mean to dispoil the wealthy they have no love or sympathy for the middle class and desire to exterminate them. Some wiseacre will say, "It is impossible for anything like that to occur in this country." But strange things have happened.

The union leaders are opposed to a large standing army but they don't give their true reasons for this opposition. A very large majority of the people of the United States stand for law and order; but as they are not organized and there is no co-operation they would be heavily handicapped in a sudden emergency. The plotters are well organized and their espionage system will soon rival that of the Germans in this country just prior to the great war. The unions leaders denounce every decent man as a scab who does not carry a union card in his pocket. They do not concede that he has a right to work for a living unless he is affiliated with some union. The radical leaders do not hesitate in saying they will make the ends justify the means.

The Hon. Hiram has been traipsing over the country airing his views, he has been telling his hearers their liberties have been abridged, free speech denied. The Hon. Hiram's jaw bone seems to be in good working order. He addressed the ranks of the anarchists when ever he spoke.

JUSTICE.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Is it not enough for a body to get the right idea of the League of Nations to measure the men who stand for it with those who are agin it? MAKE PILGRIMAGE TO VERDUN.

L. N. Brunswig Tells of the Thousands of Relatives Who Go in Quest of Tombs of Heroes.

BY LUCIEN N. BRUNSWIG.

Lucien N. Brunswig, who left here last June for Europe to labor in behalf of the American Committee for Devastated France, and whose work in the interests of the French Red Cross and the Fatherless Children of France Society gained him the recognition of the French government, covers in this letter his observations on the battlefields of Verdun. His previous communications treated on conditions around Cambrai and in the devastated regions of the Aisne.

VERDUN (France) Aug. 22.—When one recalls the legend originated by Petain on that memorable 25th of February, 1916, "Il ne passerons pas" then on the signing of the armistice "On les a eu," one does not visualize the cost of this marvelous accomplishment of the French Poilu. In company with Col. Sarrot, commander of the Citadel of Verdun for these last three memorable years, I visited every interesting feature of the great battlefield. My "cicerone" was the best possible, having been called in February, 1916, urgently by Petain, to defend the Citadel unto death. Night and day, for ten long months, "he slept on his arms" ready for any emergency. When called he was convalescing from two bullet wounds through the lungs and scarcely able to drag himself about.

We saw in every direction dozens of men and women in deep mourning, who frequently asked Col. Sarrot for guidance on their special map to locate the graves of their dear ones. Verdun is, at this time, the place of pilgrimage for thousands of French families who slowly climb this Calvary of Douamont, Fort de Vaux, Froide Terre, Cote du Poivre, de l'Oie, 340, fields of carnage during the battle.

Cemeteries are seen everywhere. I saw a squad of German prisoners near Douamont disenterring hundreds of the dead heroes in order to transfer them to a large concentration cemetery near by. The widow of a general staff officer was there identifying his remains. Upon disinterment these were found mixed with those of a private soldier. We, after a long discussion, persuaded her to have them both buried together, united in death.

MILLION SLAIN.

One million lives was the cost of the Battle of Verdun, contributed fifty-fifty by France and Germany. The French army, drawing the attacks February to May, met the deluge of hell's fire with their naked breasts, pitted against the monster Krupp guns, Berthas sending marmites, plowing down into the bowels of the earth and frequently burying under the decombres an entire company of heroic defenders. Col. Sarrot tells me that many hundreds sank slowly to their death buried in the quagmire of soft mud formed by the shell holes and in the very sight of their companions, helpless to assist them.

There is erected near Douamont a large wooden cross on which was this inscription "1916—Nous les aurons" and then, in fresh paint added below "1918—Nous les avons." Beneath that cross lie buried ten officers and 170 men.

Fort de Vaux, situated on a dominating hill surrounded by deep ravines, withstood the attacks from February to June. Three hundred men, under the heroic Commandant Raynal, placed there to fight and die, held at bay tens of thousands of infuriated Boches, and only gave up when cut off from water and food for many days. I saw the subterranean galleries where the last fight to the death was made, and where the German thousands overcame this handful of martyrs.

The communiques never mentioned the Fort of Souville having been taken by the Germans. "Souville c'est Verdun"—this was acknowledged by the French General Staff, and when the Germans penetrated there in July, volunteers were called forth for the supreme sacrifice in saving France—5000 responded within ten minutes and within seven hours from the German occupation the foe had been bayoneted out. Mountains of dead Germans attested the heroic bravery of the French counter-attack. Henceforward Souville was intact in the French command.

COMPLETELY WIPED OUT.

Fleury village is completely eliminated from the face of the earth. A few debris of stone mark the spot where once was a church. Tavannes Fort played its part in the ensemble admirably; the village is gone; so are Bras Samogneux and dozens of pretty places which formerly dotted these hills.

The lookout of Douamont Fort is on a promontory of the highest hill. Based on concrete, the gun turrets dominate the surroundings everywhere, and likewise hundreds of cemeteries! In one casemate of the fort I saw the spot where eighty-six Germans and three officers had been buried alive by the crashing in of the roof from a 420-mm. French shell. The commandant showed me mathematically that the work of progression which took the Germans from February to July to accomplish was unavailing and the same terrain was retaken by Gen. Mangin's troops in a three-hour battle the following October. The barbed-wire entanglements were in parallel lines three feet apart, thirty to forty feet deep in every direction. Thus can be imagined both the cost of attack and defense.

Along the roads, one inhales mountains of dust. It is the very bone dust of 1,000,000 cadavers which, for many months, remained unburied along the hills and valleys. And for what all this slaughter, this misery, this desolation of so many homes, the creation of so many widows and orphans?

Gen. Valentin, the military governor of Verdun during the entire period, assures me that Verdun was in no way necessary for the defense of France. On the contrary, it was lying "en l'air" in a dangerously-exposed position, subject to surrounding and isolation. This was the object of the German attack. The French evacuation of Verdun would have simplified the problem and enabled the high command to economize several hundred thousand men, but the Kaiser had announced in his numerous pronouncements that Verdun was the heart of France and his attacking same meant the crushing of his enemy and complete victory. It was for this reason that the French armies determined to prevent the moral effect caused by evacuation and defeat at Verdun. Half a million of the flower of the manhood of France fell on the field of honor in the supreme sacrifice. Strategically, Verdun was unnecessary, but the heavy cost of lives to the Germans exhausted their reserves and inflicted a moral defeat from which they never recovered.

NO HOTELS.

There are at this time practically no hotels in Verdun. I lived for three days the guest of Gen. Valentin, in the citadel's subterranean passages, where, on the "Golden Book," I saw registered the names of the most prominent notabilities of Europe, Asia, Africa and America—guests at different times. One inscription is worth recording:

"In February, while in Berlin, the Crown Prince of Germany sent me word that I could visit his headquarters and see the German front, but if we waited till March the 1st his headquarters would be in Verdun itself. I did not wait, and now rejoice, as an American and ally of courageous France, to be here today as the guest of the gallant defender of France.

[Signed]

"BENJAMIN B. LINDSAY,

"Denver, Colo."

A great charity for the American Red Cross or voluntary organizations would be to provide a few Ford cars to enable the wives, mothers and sisters of the dead, who climb so painfully over these various Verdun hills in quest of their tombs, to reach their destination comfortably. I saw delicate women loaded with bags of victuals, camp stools and blankets. They camp out sometimes two or three nights in the open in the never-ending effort to locate the dead. The commandant suggested that such American generosity would confer many a blessing on these devoted relicts of the immortal defenders of Verdun.

Among the armories and trophies of the citadel I noticed the following legends inserted:

"Verdun—Valeur et Discipline," and, on a large star, "Honneur et Patrie." These two lines spell "the victory of Verdun."

The mentality of the French Poilu is revealed in this modest inscription which I saw in one of the posts: "When you speak of women, think of your mother, your sister, your wife, your fiancee; eliminate all actions otherwise than sublime."

In an outpost near another cemetery, where many Germans lie buried, I saw: "With assassins, incendiaries and thieves, one does not discuss matters; one judges."

The judgment is attested by the hecatomb of German dead.

FIELD FOR AMERICANS.

American enterprise has an immense field here. With the advent of spring and with passports available, hundreds of thousands of Americans, British and people of Allied nations will make pilgrimages to this memorable city. There is no accommodation. Hotels great and small are wanted. There are two automobiles at Verdun to accommodate tourists now. Hundreds would thrive at remunerative prices. Restaurants, tea rooms, etc., are wanted. In fact, each and every feature needed by tourists is lacking. The city itself is badly shattered, nine-tenths of its houses being badly wrecked or heavily damaged. Reconstruction is going on, but, unfortunately, the transport service is badly demoralized, materials are lacking, and, lastly, the artisans and workmen to accomplish this herculanean task are not obtainable. The number of maimed of the manhood of France precludes the possibilities of accomplishment by her people. The cry everywhere is "Send us workmen." The 300,000 German prisoners, who are being employed, will soon be released. It is hoped that negotiations now in train with Austria and Germany will bring from these countries laborers and skilled artisans to supply the deficiency.

FOOD VERY SCARCE.

Food is very scarce; there has been no sugar in France for several months. The staples of life are soaring higher and higher. A determined conflict against profiteers is being waged by the government, but the question of supply and demand is ever the arbitrator of the cost.

For many miles around Verdun the upheaval of the soil is in such a condition as to prohibit cultivation. The Prefet of Verdun told me that the value of this soil was approximately 500 francs per hectare, but that it would cost 5000 francs to fill the shell-holes and place it in condition; hence, the solution of the problem is impossible.

I am leaving for Romagne, where the greatest American cemetery has been located. There lie 27,000 American soldiers, silent refutation of the Kaiser's pronouncement, "America won't fight." Our boys fought almost too well, going into the very cannon's mouth in their impetuosity.

The marvelous accomplishments of the American soldiers in the Argonne battles and their rapid progress up to the armistice will prove interesting reading.

THE SHIMMY SHUFFLES OUT.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—"On with the dance, but joy must be refined," is the slogan which is now being carefully observed throughout New York. The shimmy is going, if not gone, and jazz is permitted to hold forth only during good behavior. All the syncopation was removed from the waltz at the beginning of the season, and the old familiar Strauss airs are now in high favor.

Yet, in spite of all these reforms, dancing is now more popular than it has been since 1914. Propriety, instead of killing it, has strengthened its position in society, and by making the cabaret safe for the debutante, the cabaret-owners have succeeded in regaining a large percentage of what they have lost on account of prohibition. Everybody is preparing for a big dancing season. The studios of the dancing masters are crowded with fluttering ladies and flustered men, the New York hotels are remodeling and enlarging their dance spaces, and the tailors and retailers of evening clothes, are, as one admits himself, getting cranky because they have so much business.

One of the largest hotels here announces that, with only a few exceptions, it has its dance rooms booked for private and club dances for every evening of the entire season. Part of the house is now in a state of upheaval from which a new dance room is to emerge, for such is the demand that the management has decided to increase its dancing facilities.

Another large hotel has converted its Louis XVI dining room into an impromptu ballroom by arranging the tables so that, as soon as the dinner hour is over, the center of the room may be cleared, the carpets rolled back and a smooth, polished floor placed at the disposal of dancing guests. By this means the hotel expects to increase its capacity to 15,000 dancers.

Questioned as to the cause of the sudden new craze for dancing, the hotel men were unable to give satisfactory answers. "How did you know there was going to be such a demand for dancing space when you started making your repairs in August?" one man was asked, for instance. "We just figured that another dance wave was about due," was the only answer he would make. Others, however, said they thought dancing was the inevitable reaction to the soberness of the war. To this the visitor facetiously suggested that the country was soberer now than it had ever been before, and to this the hotel men replied that that, too, was a reason. Dancing, they affirmed seriously was a substitute rather than an accompaniment to booze. One restaurant owner whose place has become tremendously popular since he had it remodeled for dancing, gives all the credit to the Association of Dancing Masters, which recently met in New York.

In its closing sessions, the association declared that it stood unitedly for:

"Dancing that is decent and beyond any possible censure of church and municipal authorities.

"For the improvement, where possible, of the standards of our profession. For the discouragement of all efforts to introduce jazz or other music that tends to degrade or sensualize dancing.

"For the encouragement of dancing as an art, as a social accomplishment, and as a relaxation and exercise. We consider dancing the poetry of motion and a natural expression of the delights of music."

One dancing master who was found teaching a little girl in his studio the other day stopped long enough to declare that dancing was as necessary to a child's education as arithmetic. "You will find," he said, "that all the great things in the world are done by men and women who possess a keen sense of rhythm. In some it is born and cannot be suppressed. In others it is not, and it must be cultivated. Look at this pupil." He nodded toward the little girl, who was standing awkwardly on one foot and clutching a fold of her little white dress. "She is stiff as a poker, and I must labor over her for hours to make her learn three consecutive steps. What if she grows up like that?"

A view of the ensuing lesson showed that the dancing master undoubtedly spoke the truth. As man is the only animal born without the power to swim, so he seems to be the only animal born without natural grace. After this, the demands of the Association of Dancing Masters for a national academy of dancing, even if it cost a million dollars, did not sound so wildly impractical.

"But why do you insist upon the death of jazz?" the dancing master was asked.

"Because it is not music," he declared indignantly. "Nothing but cowbells and noise. Well, what kind of dancing do you get—nothing but jumping around, which is insulting to the intelligence. Then, too," he added, in more practical vein, "anybody can do the shimmy; they don't have to be taught."

No dance which is essentially vulgar can live long, according to this master of dancing, and as an illustration of this he points to the short life of the turkey trot. This dance was an inevitable reaction to the long years of rather stupid dances, in which people did nothing but waltz and two-step. Dancing was indulged in by scarcely anyone over 30 when the turkey trot hit the country seven years ago and practically set the whole continent in motion. From it evolved the one-step and the fox-trot, which, being rhythmical without being vulgar, are still with us. For three or four years dancing was the most popular pastime known. Everybody learned the new dances, from grandmother down. Then there came a period when the attendance at the dancing academies declined; people began to be a trifle bored and to have indigestion from so many tea and dinner-dances, and so there came a lull. Just then, moreover, the war became serious, and it was not without relief that society damsels gave up dancing for war work. But the cabarets and the phonograph companies, which had made a tremendous amount of money out of the dancing craze, were not inclined to sit quietly by and see it die, so they set about searching for something new—and novelty—to keep it alive.

So came jazz. Jazz was purely accidental, the find of a cabaret man while visiting New Orleans. According to one dancing master's story, this man was walking through the poorer quarter of the city one evening when the sound of curious music made him come to a stop and listen. From the inside of a shabby little restaurant it came—strangely discordant and yet rhythmical, so that he could scarcely keep his feet still. He went inside and found that the noise or music, or whatever it was, was being made by a band of four negroes, known as Razz's Band. One played a baritone horn, one a trombone, another a cornet and another an instrument made out of the China berry tree, which he did not recognize, but later found to be common throughout the South, where the negroes make it themselves. (It is much like a clarinet, but has one peculiar handicap: It can be used only when the sap is in the wood, so that after a few weeks it has to be discarded and a new one found.)

The cabaret man realized that he had found what he was hunting for—something new. It was not long before Razz's Band was playing in a first-class New Orleans restaurant, and from there it rapidly made its way to Chicago. In some way Mr. Razz's name became converted into "Jazz," and thus made its way all over the world. However, a negro waiter who was questioned regarding this story said it wasn't true; that jazz was a term familiar in the negro vocabulary and well known throughout Africa, as well as our own South.

So one can believe whatever he likes, for it really doesn't matter—now that jazz, and its favorite child, the shimmy, are doomed to die.

The Lone Star State Originated the "Badger Haircut."

An observer who claims to speak with the authority of personal knowledge declares that the present style of haircut for boys, popular with boy-minded males of a large growth, had its origin in Texas, where it is known as the "badger cut." He refers, of course, to the manner now much in vogue of leaving the cranium densely thatched on top while

OLD CAMBRAI.

A Historical Sketch of a Famous City in France, Now Headquarters of Relief Work.

Cambrai, a county seat in the Department of the Nord, and an Archbishopric, situated at a distance of about 125 miles east of Paris and partly extending on the left bank of the Scheldt River, is one of the most ancient cities of the northern part of France. Its Latin name was Cameracum (from "camera," a vaulted chamber,) without doubt thus designated on account of the numerous quarries and subterraneous passages which still exist underneath' the Grand 'Place and a large number of buildings.

Cambrai is already mentioned in the itinerary records of Emperor Antoninus Pius, and the Gallic Roman troops occupied the whole district ever since the second century, for the traces of an ancient Roman camp, with its system of defenses, are seen at about five miles from the city in the surroundings of Etrun.'

The first inhabitants were Celts. Then Cambrai fell into the hands of the Vandals, thereafter into those of the Goths, and was later occupied by the Franc-Saliers under the leadership of Clodius (447.) At that epoch the small province of Cambresis had its own chieftains, the last of whom, Ragnacaire, was put to death by Clovis, who annexed Cambrai to his domain (509.) The first preacher who evangelized the country was Sant Gery, whose name is still celebrated within the entire region. He built his church upon the hill of Mont des Boeufs (or Mont St. Gery,) on the spot where the citadel rises today.

His work of propagating Christianity was continued by St. Vaast, the first bishop, who, after converting Clovis, was granted temporal sovereignty by the Merovingians. In 584 Fredegund, born at St. Aubert in Cambresis; gave birth to Clothar II. A Roman macadamized road bearing the name of Brunehaut or Brunhild, the rival of Queen Fredegund, is still in existence, leading from Crambrai to Bayvay.

In the course of the succeeding centuries Cambrai was conquered by Ebroin, retaken by Pepin of Heristal, devastated by the Normands and finally incorporated in the German empire. Emperor Otto increased the power of the bishop by appointing twelve peers or barons of Cambresis, and later Emperor Henry III ceded the government to the bishops. The prelates, on their part, transferred the defense of the city to chatelains, or lords of the manor, but after divers conflicts between the prelates and the lords, the supreme power passed to the counts of Flanders, then to the dauphins of France and finally to the dukes of Burgundy. During over a century, however, bloody strifes prevailed in the city in the attempt to secure communal liberties. From 1024 to 1210 the Cambresians drove their bishops away several times and the canons re-established the commonwealth, but each time were chastised by superior force, without, however, renouncing their attempts at emancipation.

In 1212 Emperor Frederick II granted their municipal privileges, only to resuppress such soon after. At last, in 1227, Bishop Godfrey granted a communal charter, which was confirmed in 1258.

In the fifteenth century France, in its struggle against feudalism, disputed to John of Burgundy the possession of Cambrai. Louis XI occupied the city in 1474, but his troops were driven out by the Burgundians a few years later. In 1503 the King of France, the Pope, the King of Spain and the Emperor of Austria organized the famous League of Cambrai against the Venetians. Thereupon the county was raised by Emperor Maximilian to a duchy and the bishop became one of the princes of the Holy Empire. From this period dates, in all probability, the coat-of-arms of the city of Cambrai, the double-headed black eagle, with its wings spread, on a gold background, carrying in the center a golden escutcheon with three blue lions, the whole surmounted by the Episcopal cross and the count's crown.

In 1543 Cambrai passed under the Spanish yoke and Charles V forced the inhabitants to construct, at their own expense, a citadel on Mt. St. Gery, after destroying the church together with 800 surrounding houses, which occupied the present esplanade and the public gardens.

Thus he completed the system of defenses of the city, which had already been fortified in the course of the Middle Ages by an important belt of bulwarks and trenches. At the north the stronghold of the Castle of Selles had been erected. Constructed of sandstone, it had its in the time of the Romans. Although modified by recent dismantlement, the stronghold still maintains an interesting historical character.

With its walls bathed by the Scheldt and surmounted by five strong towers, it contains vast chambers and vaulted corridors, which have served as a prison. It has lately been used as a military hospital.

The fortress of Cambrai has played an important part in the course of the wars and constantly been the scene of the hottest and most ferocious contentions and struggles. It did not definitely become a part of France till after the siege carried on under the command of Louis XIV, and was captured on the 5th of April, 1677, after nine days of desperate fighting in the trenches. In 1678 Cambrai was incorporated in the kingdom of France by the treaty of Nimeguen. Marlborough, however, came near losing the city in 1711.

During the French Revolution Cambrai had nothing to suffer from the enemies of France. The city was besieged in 1793 by the Austrians, but held out against them. The Reign of Terror, however, was cruelly represented by Joseph Lebon, whose tyranny sowed within the city nothing but ruin and murder. The revolutionists destroyed the wonderful cathedral constructed in the period from 1150 to 1672, a masterpiece of Gothic art, the steeple of which, all in stone and transparent, remained in its place till the beginning of the nineteenth century, when it was demolished by a hurricane. Its site is the present Fenelon Square.

A UNION FOREMAN'S EXPOSURES.

His Personal Experiences with the Bulldozers—Effects of the Use of the Epithet "Scab."

BY A. R. BUTTERFIELD.

You are a free workingman pursuing your chosen line of work; a union worker steps up to you and calls you a "scab;" you immediately assume a personal attitude toward him; is your attitude friendly or unfriendly? Does he draw you a step nearer the union or does he repel you two steps from it? You may answer this question for yourself. To me the answer is quite clear. If you had ever made up your mind to join a union it is then and there changed, and, the chances are, for all time to come.

No one who has never been antagonized by the members of a union can draw from his imagination the sensations of a man under the above circumstances. I have known those sensations, and can speak correctly about them. A sharp slap in the face could not be more insulting.

Imagine a man, unknown to you, suddenly stepping forward and dealing you a vicious slap in the face. How do you feel? If you are of the nonresisting type, you might, generously, turn to him the other cheek. If you did, I venture to say, you would surely get another slap. But if you are a red-blooded American, and believe in your constitutional right to life, liberty and limb, you will sense a feeling of resentment so strong that only the utmost self-control can restrain you from mopping up the dust with him.

ANTAGONIZE FREE MEN.

At this time there is an epidemic of such tactics on the part of the union men. Such tactics always react to the disadvantage of union labor. The truth of this statement is readily infered by reference to the number of recent strikes that have been speedily broken. The strikers not only invite the opposition of their employers, but that of free working men also. The employers, knowing of this breach in the ranks of labor, readily take advantage of it and use labor to beat labor. Can you beat that for a trump card?

I venture to say that, if a war (occasionally spoken of by some men) between capital and labor should take place, the battles would be fought by labor on both sides with the result that there would be fewer workingmen when the war was over and capital would be where it is today, except that it would be able to obtain labor for less money because of the improverishment created by the war. At any rate capital does not seem to be worried about threats of such a war.

The above suggestions, if taken seriously and mulled over in the mind for a little while, will solicit the conclusion that the principles upon which union labor is founded and at present conducted, are directly opposed to the interest of labor. And, the sooner that conclusion is reached the sooner will the back yards of unionism be given a thorough and needed scrubbing.

What do I know about unions? I know it from three points of view. I have been on the inside "looking out," and on the outside "looking in," and now I am an employer of labor.

I was put out of the union. That is. I was fined $10, which is equivalent to saying that I was put out. I was fined $10 for contempt (as though one could be in contempt of such a thing) because I let a set of pretext charges go by default. The true motive for the charges was of a vastly different nature from the charges themselves.

THE WORD, "SCAB."

There was an effort to make our town "closed shop." I was a union foreman and was at that time employing twenty-two men, twenty-one of whom were "fullfledged" and one ten months in arrears with his dues. This fact I learned upon a visit of the business agent (known as walking delegate.) The business agent and myself went before the man and I asked him about the matter. He readily admitted his arrearage and gave as an excuse that his wife was sick and that he needed his money to take care of incurred domestic obligations. But, as readily as he had admitted his arrearage, he consented to my taking from his pay an amount each week sufficient to "put him straight" by the end of four weeks. That closed the interview. The delegate and myself walked back down stairs where he turned to me and said, "Ah, fire the dirty scab." I quickly turned away and went upstairs to that man and said, "I shall take nothing from your pay."

The point now comes where the motive for the charges was furnished. The next morning a man came on the job with a kit of tools and a card from the business agent. He handed me the card, which read: "Fire that dirty scab and put a good man to work." I handed the card back to the man and told him to take it back to the business agent and tell him for me to go straight to hell. I was shortly served with a hatched up set of charges which I graciously ignored. Since then I have been on the outside, looking in, and I am going to stay there.

Of course, I was unduly insubordinate for having a mind of my own. I should have done as the other union men did, and are still doing, let the business agent do my thinking for me. Unfortunately, perhaps, for me, I am not a crowdman.

I have knowledge of many other instances where the same principle was actuated. At the present time I have two men in my employ who were fired from their previous jobs because they would not join the union. I have another man who was recently discharged from a job for the same reasons, but he joined.

THE INFECTION.

Of the three, the one who joined was, undoubtably, the least courageous. He feared the consequences of not joining. He neded work, and had been led to believe that he could not hold a job if he did not join. So he threw down his individuality, set aside his best judgment, and joined the union. This same man is gradually taking on the spirit of the others.

To illustrate this, a few days ago a Salt Lake Railroad train, loaded with men employed in a certain shipyard, was crossing a street railway. The crew of the street car was men employed by the Pacific Electric Company during the recent strike, and was waiting for the train to pass. At this point the train slows down to discharge a few passengers, which gave the ship builders an opportunity to indulge in their favorite pastime. Yells of, "scab scab" came thorugh every window of the train. Some were scratching their arms and faces in insinuation. The street car crew stood silently while the train was passing. My workman bubbled over with hilarity and seemed to get a host of fun from the demonstration. During that brief period he was thoroughly saturated with the union spirit. After a few suggestions from another man on the job, he admitted that it was not quite the proper way for men to act.

His thinker had momentarily rescued him. His training is not complete, but has progressed nicely owing to the short period of time he has been a member. In another like period he will have forgotten that he ever had the ability to think, even though it may have been ever so vaguely.

Many do not join unions for good reasons. The principal one being that they do not approve of the methods used in conducting the unions. They do not approve of the union vocabulary, which is, in most cases, disrespectful and non-magnetic. They do not care to sink their individuality to the bottom of the sea and follow, like sheep, a few chosen leaders.

Only a radical can be a leader in a union, and the fact that all radicals are biased and prejudiced on all subjects, and are swayed by their own opinions, is a good reason for not joining a union. Men, free to use their brains, resent the commands of such leaders. How would you feel taking orders from such dynamiting characters?

Some union members are very fine men, but they are the passive ones. The active ones are usually disagreeable, especially when the subject of unionism is approached. Some are boisterous and even threatening.

An incidentw hich occured on the morning of the first day of the late Pacific Electric strike is recalled to my mind. I was standing on the station platform conversing with a group of strikers, with whom I was acquainted, when a train operated by a non-union motorman passed by. One of the strikers, a young man, gazed sarcasticly at the motorman and turned to the group and said: "Gee! I just wish I had a six-shooter, I'd like to shoot that scab." That slightly ruffled me and I said: "Well, it is only a block to a harware store, where you can buy a gun, if you wish so badly to shoot someone." I haven't heard of any motormen being shot, as yet.

Why should that motorman have been the object of such a remark? He was a civil human being pursuing his chosen line of work in an individual way. In a way which suited him. He seemed satisfied with his job, and did not appear as though he was doing something dishonest. Yet he is called a "dirty scab." What great wrong did he commit? He took a position which was vacant. Made vacant, perhaps, by the man who called him a scab and expressed a wish to shoot him.

When a man is dissatisfied with his job and wishes to quit, it is his privilege to do so. That is just what the union men do—quit. But they call it by another name—strike. What difference does it make what name they call it, in essence, it simply means—quit. They willfully vacate their jobs. Yet they call scabs and wish to shoot the men who take the jobs that they would not have. The jobs are surely not bad or else it would be very difficult to find men to take them. The fact that men are readily found is sufficient to indicate that the jobs must be pretty good. It isn't so much that the jobs are bad that the union men quit, as it is that they wish to force someone to do their will. Now, it is not characteristic of the average American employer to be forced into any thing. But if he is he will surely remember it and will get even in due time.

No strike ever netted a union anything but a bad reputation and the ill will of others. For that reason, it would be better that they bonfire their charters and pursue a policy of strict individualism with "The survival of the fittest" as their motto.

HAND GRENADES USED TO FIGHT PROFITEERS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

COBLENZ, Aug. 25.—Hand grenades left over from the war were used effectively recently by enraged civilians in Zoppot in West Prussia who attacked food stores on the ground that the shopkeepers were profiteering. According to information reaching American army headquarters a mob, armed with grenades, revolvers and other weapons, attacked in numbers the stores which were known to have charged high prices.

In the interior of Germany margarine has been quoted recently at six marks per pound, whereas it formerly cost 2.80 marks per pound. This is attributed to the fact that large quantities have lately been bought abroad at higher prices than formerly, owing to the low rate of German exchange. The official rate of exchange for August at army headquarters is two marks, twenty-two pfennigs for one franc, giving the mark a value in American money of a fraction more than six cents.

NOSKE PLANS TO HAVE CAMOUFLAGE TROOPS.

REORGANIZES RESERVISTS AS HOME GUARDS TO EVADE ARMISTICE LAWS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN GERMANY, Aug. 26.—The Wuerttemburg government recently reorganized all the so-called reserve Sicherheits companies as home guards and the War Ministry has turned them over to the Minister of the Interior. According to information in the hands of American army officers, this is in accordance with Noske's plan to demilitrize all home guards units so that the Allies will not dissolve these units under the terms of the peace treaty.

Early this year many Sicherheits companies were organized in Wuerttemburg from remnants of old army units and have since been transferred into the Reichswehr or new army. Later many reserve companies were organized on lines different from elsewhere in Germany but on the same principal as the home guards or Einwohnerwehr.

German soldiers who recently protested from Mitau on the eastern front against failure of the Lettish government to provide them land for settlement, in accordance with vague promises of such land to all German soldiers who help to repel the Bolsheviki, have issued another statement declaring that they have been "shamefully deceived and reserve the right to take such further steps as may be decided upon."

Bitter feeling by the population against the new German army continues in various parts of Germany, trouble having been reported from time to time in towns and villages where troops have been garrisoned. In most instances the civilians object to the presence of the soldiers on the ground that they eat too much food.

An armored locomotive which is part of the equipment of some Reichswehr or new army units was sent from shop to shop in central Germany recently because the workmen refused to repair it as they claimed it was a tool of "Noske's bloodhounds." Men in the railroad shops at Goettingen and Cassel refused to work on the locomotive as well as employees in private shops in several parts of the country. The last the Americans heard of the armored engine, it was on a sidetrack in Cassel while officers continued their search for workmen to make the necessary repairs.

IRISH RELIEF FUND $689,040.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—The Irish National Aid and Volunteer Dependents' Fund, formed after the rebellion of Easter week to provide for the families of men killed or imprisoned, has just issued an audited account of its work which shows that the total amount it received was $689,040 of which it expended $679,730. Subscriptions were received from all over the world, the largest contribution $296,740, coming from the United States, while $109,970 came from Australia, and $25,850 from New Zealand. Ireland itself contributed $218,125.

Blind, No Hands, Uses Typewriter.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

Nichols of the Second Durham Light Infantry refused to be classed as an "unemployable" and today can write letters as proficiently as any normal stenographer. Nichol's restoration to a self-supporting basis was accomplished through patient training, a specially constructed typewriter, pair of artificial aluminum hands and his own indomitable spirit. Recently he passed a writing test of two hours and fifteen minutes, his "copy" necessitating only two corrections.

FURS for FALL

WOMEN who are thoughtful in their expenditures realize that the dependability of the house from which they make their purchases is of far more importance than the actual immediate cost of what they have in mind.

Particularly is this true when an investment in furs is considered. Hundreds of women have learned to depend upon the advice and recommendations of Obrikat-Meyer as they would depend upon the advice of their banker.

The tremendous volume of the Obrikat-Meyer business—with three big stores in Southern California—makes it possible for this house to obtain first selection of the choicest pelts obtainable and to buy them in large quantity lots. Obviously we buy at a lower figure than would be possible were we doing business on a smaller scale—and we can profitably sell for less.

Obrikat-Meyer quality cannot be obtained elsewhere at Obrikat-Meyer prices.

We cordially invite your inspection of this interesting Fall display.

For the convenience of our North-End patrons, we maintain a branch store at our old Third and Hill Street location.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE.

A Weekly News Letter from London.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The only explanation of Sir Edward Carson's recent outbursts is that Carson is a law unto himself, reckless of everybody else's feelings and interests, isolated curiously from everybody, unable long to remain in harness or even friendship with associates, the friend one day and the enemy the next, in succession, of Balfour, Asquith, Lloyd George, and now Law.

If ever man's character and career were written by nature's legible hand on a man's physique, it is on Carson's face and figure. You could never forget him, once seen. Tall, thin, with a long hatchet-shaped face, high cheekbones, protruding eyes, beak nose, black hair, complexion sallow almost to blackness, he looks a strange, sinister figure, a nocturne in black.

When first I saw him stalking through the lobbies of the House of Commons, I felt a shudder pass through my marrow, and a curious sense that I was seeing before me in flesh and blood a ghost from the worst epoch of Irish history, that which accompanied and followed the rebellion of 1898, when savage prosecutors and even more savage judges sent men almost gayly to the gallows, day by day, if not hour by hour.

CARSON EARLY A LIBERAL.

And up to a point Carson has played almost the same role in modern Ireland. He is the son of a Dublin architect who, curiously enough, was one of those liberal-minded Protestants who helped Isaac Butt, himself also a Protestant, start the modern home-rule movement. Carson, too, began life with liberal opinions. John Redmond and he were fellow students in Trinity College and young barristers together. Redmond often told me Carson then was what he would call an English radical in his opinions, far more extreme than Redmond, who always retained a certain leaven of conservatism in his composition.

Carson also was a member of the National Liberal Club, the rendezvous of all the radicalism of provincial and metropolitan England. When Carson defended this episode, he said he had ceased to be radical when Gladstone proposed his home rule bill, but it turned out that Carson's membership began in 1887, whereas Gladstone's home rule bill was introduced in 1886.

REWARDED FOR SHIFTING.

Whatever the reason, Carson changed his party and soon got the reward always given in Ireland to the lawyer who adopts the side of British government. His conversion, too, came at a convenient moment, for Arthur Balfour was in the midst of his whirlwind campaign of coercion, and Carson roved all over Ireland, prosecuting political opponents, and sending them to long terms of imprisonment. No man ever did his work more ruthlessly, not even in the old '98 days, and his rewards came fast in the high and lucrative office of Solicitor-General, an office that, in small and poor Ireland, has emoluments that would make envious the holder of the same office in wealthy, populous America.

Then he suddenly transferred himself to England. It was a bold experiment, which sometimes succeeds, sometimes fails. The methods of the English courts are so different from those of the Irish that transposed Irish barristers usually fail. James Campbell, the present Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and head, in his day, of the Irish bar, failed ignominiously, and was almost in despair with failing sight and advancing years till the whirligig of English politics brought him to the promised land, the highest judicial office in Ireland with a $30,000 salary and $20,000 pension.

BIG SUCCESS AT RUEL.

But Carson, backed by Balfour, in recognition of Carson's services in his coercion regime and by his own great gifts, had an early and immense success. His first great victory was when he broke down Oscar Wilde by the prolonged, ruthless cross-examination that wore down the neurotic epicurean and landed him in gaol and soon after sent him to exile and early death. It was characteristic of this ruthless man that he had been a classfellow of Wilde in Trinity College, and Wilde pathetically complained that he had been struck down by the man he still called "Ned" Carson. Success followed success, till Carson was the sole rival of Rufus Isaacs in the gigantic fees and great cases that have come in modern litigation.

Meantime, as member for Trinity College, he had added a parliamentary seat to his other advantages. There he took up a strange position. It was in the days of Balfour's parliamentary dictatorship. Balfour and Carson had been like brothers, passing together through all the terrors of coercion; but Carson, coming down to the House of Commons in a very white waistcoat, with a very black face, attacked Balfour almost nightly. Nobody knew what it all meant. It stung Balfour to the quick; though indifferent to attacks from foes, he is sensitive as a girl to attacks from friends. Perhaps the explanation was given when, through intimidation or weariness, Balfour gave to Carson, then a neat youngster at the English bar, the English Solicitor-Generalship, passing by all Englishmen with greater claims.

ULSTER ACTIVITY BEGINS.

Then came the home rule struggle, and Carson began his historic Ulster preparations for rebellion. He never expected to be allowed to go on, and perhaps would have welcomed prosecution and imprisonment as lifting him to the position of a hero and martyr, but he had dragged after him the whole Tory party, and the Irish Nationalists advised Mr. Asquith, rightly or wrongly, that he be not prosecuted, knowing from their own experience how futile political prosecutions always have been in Irish history. Thus Carson, partly against his will, pushed on the Ulster movement, reaching to a Niagara flood of passion, and determination, until at last he found himself in command of an army of volunteers, then of rifles, then Maxims; and meantime Lady Londonderry, since dead, a brilliant, energetic fanatical and once very beautiful woman, had recruited all society and helped draw the highest military officers into sympathy and co-operation with Carson's rebellion.

This led to the rebellion in the Curragh Camp in Ireland, to a ministerial crisis and tremendous agitation among the English masses, which at one time even threatened the throne under the false impression that King George was in sympathy with Orange rebellion.

SAYS CARSON CAN'T GET ALONG

The war interrupted all this, but Carson swore and threatened to the last moment, even after the opening of the war. The home rule bill was put on the statute book ultimately, but Carson held it up and holds it up now, five years later.

When Northcliffe compelled the downfall of the Asquith ministry and formation of the coalition government on account of Kitchener's mismanagement of munitions and quarrel with Lord French, the world was astounded to find Carson a member of the ministry, the ex-rebel, with delicate irony, being made Attorney-General, the head and guardian of the preservation of law in England.

But Carson never could get on with other people, and he thought Asquith supine, despised Kitchener, and so left. Then came the next whirligig, and Lloyd George, deserted and despised by all the old Liberals for his treatment of Asquith, in order to strengthen his hold on the Tories, gave to Carson the great position of First Lord of the Admiralty. Again Carson could not live with colleagues and resigned again.

It was these rapid promotions of the ex-rebel that precipitated rebellion in Ireland, just as arming Orangemen had turned the minds of Nationalists in Ireland from constitutional to revolutionary methods. Carson, indeed, is the real original begetter of Sinn Fein.

MARRIES YOUNG IRISH WOMAN.

Carson had fallen in love with a beautiful young Irish woman, but did not dare marry when rebellion seemed possible. However, when the war came and with it cessation of immediate prospect of risking his life, he went down to a quiet country church and was married. Then he resumed a practice interrupted for some years by political activities, and now in wild speeches, which every human being of every party in England condemns fiercely, threatened once more the existence of the ministry.

"What is Carson after?" everybody asks. Is it gigantic, neurotic egotism, such as that of the ex-Kaiser, with the same love of limelight, the same enoyment of the adoration of vast crowds of excited men and women ready to kiss his garments as a new Messiah? No one can answer.

To complete the picture, this strange paradox of a man, this daring creature who has risked his neck, is a chronic invalid so melancholy and hypochondriacal that his first word almost always is a complaint that his heart is weak, his digestion gone, his sleep vanished—and the yellow, lantern jaws do give the impression of a man with torpid liver and imperfect digestion.

Two final paradoxes in enigmatic characters. He is, in private, rather pleasant and good-natured, Irish Nationalists often exchanging conversation with him in the friendly freedom of the smoke-rooms of the House of Commons and—he prefers Irishmen who differ with him even to Englishmen who agree with him.

CHINESE WISDOM.

Banker Earl C. Dodge, of Boston, who has lived some years in China, said in an afternoon speech:

"Anybody who doubts the wisdom of the Chinese should read their proverbs. The Chinese have a book of 10,000 proverbs, and they're all as wise and true as the first line in the volume, which says:

"'It is safer to pull a tiger's tail than to call a lady's attention to her first gray hair.'"—[Detroit Free Press.

LATINS FEAR THE JAPANESE.

Consider Them Real Menace to Southern Continent.

Use Method in Studying the Smaller Republics.

Follow German Schemes of Asserting Sway.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—It is not Germany with its reported emigration of 6,000,000 people from the Fatherland to points in Latin America that is causing the people of that vast and practically undeveloped territory to stop, look and listen. It is not any other European power that possibly may be interested in furthering its own ambitions—political or commercial—in the land of plenty that is throwing the scares into the inhabitants of that continent. As a matter of fact, a great number of Latin Americans welcome the Germans as a desirable element in the community as long as they remain peaceful and law abiding, and keep their militaristic pretensions in their trunks where they may do no harm. As far as South America is concerned the peaceful German is a good German. There are today in South America large colonies of natives from the Rhine country, who have developed industry and greatly enriched the country. It is no wonder, therefore, that South America openly welcomes this element with open arms.

JAPANESE ELEMENT.

However, there is another element from another section of the globe that is causing the Latin Americans to pause and consider. This is the Japanese element, and South America fears it. The people living on the west coast of the continent wonder what the future will bring as they see hundreds upon hundreds of Japanese landing in countries in that region to make their future homes. The Japanese, proclaim leading Latin American observers, are the real menace to the southern continent. They point out a possible danger that there may be a preponderance of Japanese in the population in the years to come. There is a possible danger that the Japanese may become a dominant element in the community just as the Germans have succeeded in becoming in certain parts of the continent. There is a possible danger that a Japanese sphere of influence may some day assert itself to the disadvantage of other friendly nations.

These, of course, are only the observations of Latin Americans who follow the course of events in their respective countries closely. However, these observations are not the invention of an imaginative brain nor the wild-eyed dreams of flag wavers or jingoists. There is a basis for these assertions. Here they are:

The Japanese probably more than any other nation with the exception of the Germans have been studying the choice fields of South America with method. They are anxious to relieve the load of 60,000,000 people on their little island. To do this they must seek new land. They have picked on South America as a very favorable spot. They have found regions peculiarly similar in point of climate and other respects to the land at home. The Japanese are coffee growers and sugar farmers. They have found land in Peru where they can pursue these vocations.

The Japanese have sent secret agents to Latin America whose functions were to study and investigate, and to sound the people of the various countries on the subject of extensive Japanese immigration. Also, they have sent out trade commissioners, experts in all lines, to make reports on business conditions and on the activities of competitor nations.

RESULTS OF ACTIVITIES.

The results of these Japanese activities have been:

The establishment of banks and commercial branches in nearly every principal city of Latin America.

The building of a merchant marine subsidized by the Japanese government for commerce between Japan and South America.

An increase in the intermarriage between Japanese and South Americans.

The establishment of colonies in countries where climatic conditions were similar to those at home.

The making of commercial treaties with certain South American countries.

It will be seen, therefore, that the Japanese are closely following the general German scheme of reaching out for domination in foreign countries. It is more than probable, however, that the Japanese will not meet much success in their endeavors to marry into the Spanish-American families, which is a very popular German policy. Again, the Japanese will more than likely confine themselves to isolated regions where the colony will be purely of Japanese stock. The Germans, on the other hand, do not isolate themselves, but associate with the people in every line of endeavor and in time become a part of the population.

It will be recalled that a famous German writer once declared that the Imperial German government would soon rule over Brazil, Paraguay, Argentine, Bolivia and "other weak nations of the South American continent." A parallel statement was not long ago issued by the Japanese statesman, Count Okuma, when he said that the Mikado would extend his empire to South America.

COLONY IN PERU.

The fact that a large colony has already been established in Peru shows that the Japanese mean business. Over 800,000 acres of some of Peru's choicest lands have been taken over by Japanese interests for the raising of coffee and sugar, and immigration to that section of the world is already under way. Similar movements are reported in Bolivia. Japanese interests have been negotiating with Chileans for the purchase of some of the wild island lands in the south of Chile for colonization purposes. Although little effort has been made by Japanese to colonize in Argentina there has been a tremendous activity along commercial lines in the capital. Japanese banks and commercial houses are doing a big business there. Uruguay, also, is doing big business with Japanese people. Articles bearing the Nipponese trade mark are flooding the country. Business is on the increase.

What the activities of Japan in South America will finally lead to only the future can tell. Quien sabe!

GOMEZ TO RETURN.

Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez, one of the leaders of the last Cuban revolution, will return to his country from the United States this fall to lead the Liberal party as candidate for President. Gomez has been living in New York after his release from a Cuban prison following the crushing of the short-lived rebellion by the government forces.

URUGUAYAN CONSTITUTION.

The republic of Uruguay is run a little different than any other nation in the world. Uruguay likes to tinker with its constitution. It likes to try out new things. It has already taken its place as the most enlightened South American republic. But now it wishes to outdo even itself. For instance, by virtue of the new constitution the President's authority has been clipped to such an extent that he must now share the responsibilities of his office with a commission known as the National Board of Administration. This is something new in the way of running republics. This board is composed of nine members elected by the people every two years—that is to say, a third are elected every two years for a term of six. Also, few peoples have known that the Congress of Uruguay elects its President—not the people. The new constitution has changed this, too. It now provides that the President be elected by the direct vote of the people. Another radical change is the election of members of the Supreme Court. Appointments to this august body now rest with Congress. Congress now has the authority to interpret the constitution. In other words, Congress is the court of last resort whenever a question of doubt arises as to just what certain passages in the constitution really mean.

A monument to the memory of the late Col. Roosevelt is to be erected somewhere in Spanish America by funds to be raised by the people of Cuba and Panama.

GEN. GORGAS ACTIVE.

Gen. William A. Gorgas, who drove the yellow fever and the mosquito from the Panama Canal Zone, as well as dried up the swamps in that neck of land, is a much sought man in South America these days. Gorgas recently completed the job of cleaning up the Port of Guayaquil, Ecuador, for a long time the pest hole on the west coast of South America, and shunned by tourists and commercial travelers. His work in Guayaquil attracted attention in other countries. Peru has recently sent for him to apply the dose to the ports of Piura, Payta and Callao, three Peruvian ports that need cleaning out badly. When the general completes his work in Peru he may proceed to Chile, where there is more work to accomplish.

Argentina is planning a bond issue of 60,000,000 pesos for the purpose of consolidating its floating debt.

Colombia has established a government bank, of which the private banks are members. Interest rates are confined to 10 per cent.

Uruguayan Congress is debating over a bill in Congress providing for the pensioning of newspaper reporters after a certain period of service.

Cuba is preparing for 100,000 tourists from the United States and South America this coming winter.

Don Cipriano Castro, one time President of Venezuela and for some time past a political refugee after a stormy political career, is living in Porto Rico and is declared to be practically penniless.

The republic of Brazil in 1916 had over 30,000,000 head of cattle, which is over 2,000,000 more than Argentina.

Steamship companies in New York and New Orleans report the heaviest travel to South America in many years.

Peru has prohibited the exportation of coffee in order to preserve the present supply.

The A. B. C. republics are planning the enactment of a uniform immigration law to protect these countries from an undesirable element.

Spaniards living in Cuba have raised $1,000,000 for the construction of a club.

Brazil is still prohibiting the publication of papers in German.

COMPETITION IS KEEN FOR GERMANY'S TRADE.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN MERCHANTS DROP SENTIMENT IN RUSH FOR BUSINESS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—American and British foreign trade interests have resumed their accustomed pre-war code and the competition for the commercial conquest of Germany and other recently enemy countries is well under way.

This is freely admitted by representatives here of both American and British trade bodies. The London head of one American business men's organization said:

"The business man reasons it out this way: 'Eventually—perhaps in a year from now—we shall have resumed normal trade relations with those nations which were, until a few months ago, our enemies. Why not get busy now—if I don't, someone else will.' So sentimental considerations are eliminated. The dollar and pound once more are what business is seeking."

A sharpness of competition unapproached in pre-war days will characterize the conduct of foreign trade activities during the next few years, it is generally conceded. America's possession of raw materials, her facilities for quantity productions and the fact that her industrial machinery is not so clogged with strikes and other labor disturbances which are so seriously impairing British trade, it is thought, insures the United States a fair proportion of this business.

But it is pointed out that a voluminous foreign trade will be essentially a "new game" and British traders feel that lack of experience will offset, in a measure, the advantages indicated which now favor American trade bidders.

One train left Monte Vista, Colo., recently loaded with hogs and potatoes with a market value of $32,450. It consisted of eighteen cars of fat hogs from the Monte Vista sections, six more cars of hogs brought in by the San Luis Central, and nineteen cars of potatoes. The hogs were worth about $3000 a carload and the potatoes $550 a car.

A leopard used by a motion picture concern recently took to sulking, which made him a disagreeable companion for the actors in the jungle scenes. Imitation limbs on the "tree" will give perching accommodations.

THE WIT OF DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Douglas Jerrold's wit has a discreet malice of its own. Asked at a party who it was that was dancing with Mrs. Jerrold, he replied, laughingly: "A member of the humane society, I think." At another function he saw a very tall man dancing with a very short lady. "Hullo" he ripped out, "there's a mile dancing with a milestone." Once he was disturbed in his editorial room by a young poet rushing in asking: "Have you seen my 'Descent Into Hell,' Mr. Jerrold?" "No, I have not," was the reply, "but I should very much like to."—[Literary Guide.

Made with all their skill and care by Kayser, the originators of "Italian" Silk Underwear and Silk Gloves.

SO different from the knit cotton and lisle union suits you have known—this adorable suit, daintily ribboned!

When Kayser set about making knit underthings for women, they went right to the bottom of things—even to the kind of yarn used for the knitting. Combed cotton entirely—the softest, the whitest—makes Kayser Knit Underwear a little lovelier than ordinary knit underwear.

That is why special attention is given to its finishing—why every garment is laundered and pressed before you buy it, so it is white, soft—not prickly and fuzzy!

After this, much is naturally expected of a Kayser Knit Union Suit when it comes to comfort.

And you are not disappointed! Because it is made in a special way so it will fit perfectly.

Kayser cuts each garment from a shaped pattern—one at a time. Fits them so that every woman can find her size. Measures them again before sending them out. Inspects them again and again—every step according to the high Kayser standard!

Go today to your department store and get the saleswoman to show you a Kayser Knit Union Suit or Vest in your size. See the finish, the softness, the beauty of it! Julius Kayser & Co., New York City.

A MILITIA FOR FIGHTING FIRES.

Practical Suggestion for Conserving Our Blessed Watersheds.

BY THOMAS F. FORD.

Why not a permanent fire-fighting State militia for California?

An organization trained in the very latest and most effective methods of combatting forest fires is the crying need of the hour.

The magnificent forest area, which forms the watershed for the fertile valleys of Southern California, has been swept by a seething billow of fire thirty miles long. That this calamity could have been prevented, had there been an adequate fire-fighting force available immediately upon the alarm being sounded, is entirely possible. But since there was no such organization this section of the State faces a loss that it is impossible to compute.

The reiteration of the fact that this fire might have been prevented is futile. The dictates of common sense now demand that prompt steps be taken to prevent a recurrence.

The first step in a protective scheme to save our watersheds should be the organization by the State government of California of a State Fire Fighting Force, whether they be called militia, rangers or constabulary. The plan of organization should be along the lines of the State Militia, under the command of a State fire marshal who would in turn appoint lieutenants in the various forest reserve districts and whose authority over privately-owned timber reaches should be absolute in matters of fire prevention and co-ordinate with the authority of the Federal forest supervisors in national forests.

It is not the purpose of this article to outline a detailed plan for such an organization. It is merely to call attention to a situation that needs remedying, and that with the exercise of sound common sense can be, if not remedied, at least materially reduced.

Speaking generally, the logical action seems to be organization by the State of a force adequate to deal with a fire of the magnitude of the one raging at present.

This organization, if carried out along the lines of a State Militia, would, after a period of six months training under the instruction of experts in forest fire-fighting, acquire a sufficient amount of knowledge to enable them to go into the forests and after a week or so under tutors master the rudiments of the art of fighting fires under forest conditions.

It should not be a purely volunteer organization. Compensation for this strenuous work should be provided. There should also be facilities installed to enable the fire fighters to meet the monster with whom they will be called upon to cope.

The members of this militia should be subject to call at all times, just as are the members of the local fire department. They should be subject to the strictest military discipline and provision made for the enforcing of this discipline.

A series of wireless stations should be erected at all main lookout posts and the permanent rangers should be wireless operators. Whenever practicable, reservoirs should be constructed, equipped with fire-fighting apparatus, such as force pumps and the like. It is entirely possible that many incipient fires, which a single ranger equipped only with the ordinary tools for his trade, could not successfully quench, could be mastered if a strong stream of water was available at the time of discovery.

Such a step taken by the State would undoubtedly go far toward arousing the Federal authorities to the menace of the situation and possibly secure from Congress an appropriation that would lighten the burden on the State considerably.

The Federal government last year spent approximately $800,000 in administering the national forest area of California, an area that covers some 20,000,000 acres. In the national forest adjacent to Los Angeles, which is approximately 100 miles long and 40 miles wide, containing over one million acres, there are but sixteen forest rangers, or sufficient men to patrol one-tenth of that vast area.

The actual money damage caused by forest fires in California last year exceeded $1,500,000, while for the ten-year period the loss in money was in excess of $3,000,000.

While the actual money loss from fires alone is considerable, it is but a pittance in comparison to the collateral losses sustained in the destruction of watershed areas, which are to a semiarid country like California, beyond computation in dollars and cents.

The destruction of watersheds means a two-fold disaster. It decreases the water supply for storage purposes in the underground reservoirs of the valleys, of itself a grave menace. But in addition to the curtailing of the water supply for the use of irrigation and domestic purposes, the menace from flood damage is immeasurably increased. It is, in fact, made certain. For with the denuded mountain slopes left unprotected, the waters falling in the upper reaches roar down into the valleys below and carry all things in their path. The river channels are overtaxed and the waters break their banks spreading destruction far and wide. The flood damage of 1914 alone, exclusive of damage to the Los Angeles Harbor, exceeded $10,000,000 and a recurrence of such a wet season this year, with the watersheds denuded, may well be expected to exceed that sum.

While this may not be preventable this year, steps should be promptly taken to see that no such grave menace ever again be permitted to occur in this State.

Shocking an English Valet.

How an American serving in the British army gave a London valet the shock of his life was related by a soldier returning from England. A ragged, penniless American, worn by a year's fighting with the British in France, wandered into a Y.M.C.A. Eagle Hut, London, and seemed so forlorn and needy that Mrs. Gowers, head of the Y.M.C.A. Hospitality League, and wife of Lloyd George's secretary, took him into their home for his leave.

After a good night's rest the American put the valet "over the jumps," ordering his uniform pressed and generally bossing the houseman in a manner far from what that factotum thought a humble soldier should assume. Finally the servant went to Mr. Gowers to ask who the American was. Mr. Gowers did not know why the valet asked.

"Hif I may say so, sir, 'e's makin' 'imself very much at 'ome, sir, makin' us all jump about a bit, an' 'e told me to send this cablegram," said the valet, handing over a message which read as follows:

"Dad. I'm busted. Send another thousand. War is hell."

The ragged soldier was a California millionaire's son.—[Chamberlain's Magazine.

A Melody in Brown

—A melody that runs the scale from low C to high C with all the Sharps and Minors and Timbres of harmony that Fashion could conjure for the new Bullock Silks and Woolens.

—Not sombre browns, mind you, but rich russet tones that emulate the falling Autumn leaves.

—Fashion has struck a very ideal and logical note in following Nature in her autumn color themes and it appears that every variable change of Autumnal tints has been caught and interpreted in these new fabrics.

—Note them: Wood Brown—Seal Brown—Faison Brown—Maduro Brown—Mocha Brown—Cinnamon Brown—Tobacco Brown—Beaver Brown—Reindeer Brown—Cordovan Brown—Walnut Brown—Mahogany Brown—Coco Brown—Anzac Brown—Mouse Brown—

—These—

Bands, Flouncings, Tunics

are beaded and sequined into a new Fashion Glory and the printed word refuses stubbornly to depict their luster and beauty so that anyone may understand.

—One's thoughts drift to iridescent crystals asparkle in the sun; or the steel blue glints of flashing jewels; or rippling water hypnotized by a moonbeam—or most any beautiful thing to try one's imagination.

—One can, however, picture more truly the gowns that these sparkling confections will beautify; the wraps they will elaborate—and the luxuriant manner in which they can do it.

—The beaded and sequined Tunics seem sufficient unto themselves, but with a field of pastel silk for their setting their possibilities evade a conjecture.

—While the Bands and Flouncings suggest just how exquisite it is possible—under their magic—for a frock or wrap to be.

—It is rumored that these indescribable embellishments are exclusively Bullock's; that they were imported directly from Paris to Bullock's. So you should not confuse them with "somewhat similar" creations—but come to the Trimming Section if you would enjoy their delectable thrill. Second Floor.

—The new Handblocked Cretonnes portray the schemes of forest and valleys and waterways with floral inhabitants, bringing the freshness and colors of nature right into the home to outline the windows, to cover the pillows or to serve as overdrapes.

—The new Sectional Panel Nets of many pleasing colors, giving a motif of quiet simplicity for Living, Dining Room or Library.

—The new Tinsel Brocades for Table Scarfs, Pillows, Upholstery.

—The new Marquisette Curtains with their novel lace edges and insertions striking an entirely different notion in curtainry.

—The new Drapery weaves of many, many other sorts that are proving the delight of Home Devotees.

Furs

—One's eyes may be fairly mesmerized by some gorgeous Fur Wrap.

—One's lips may drift into ecstacies in expressing the beauty of a Mole Coat.

—But unless one knows Furs intimately it is difficult to judge correctly their character; their genuine excellence.

—The treatments that peltry undergoes before attaining that adorning charm are many and devious.

—And unless Sincerity and Skill are sponsors for their preparation, Furs are not what they seem to be, at all.

—These Bullock Furs—in their very select variety—are the very choice of Excellence itself.

—You find them interpreted into Capes, Stoles, Coats, Muffs, Coatees, Scarfs, Capettes.

—And you may choose them with Confidence—with Pride.

THE REAL FACTS ABOUT THE BOOB

Charlie Ray Tells the Why of His Characters.

Exploits the Youth of Ideas in Small-Time Place.

Story of Putting Ambition on the Screen.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

How much effort do you think it takes to build up a real living somebody whom an audience will recognize, or think they recall, and who is therefore vitally interesting to them? I am speaking, of course, of the picture play, because visualizing character and making us see personalities on the screen is what the serious-minded actor and director of the present day is making more and more his objective. You know how much those two recent productions de luxe, "Broken Blossoms" and "The Miracle Man," have depended on what developed in the lives of the people, not only as to surface changes, but soul states as well. Therefore the question is a fitting one, and also because while these two films are the most striking examples of the new tendency, photoplays on all sides are beginning to show greater strength in their character building. The long-desired element of psychology gives promise of entering through this doorway which is a proper and natural portal.

To evolve the idea of even one character is what might be termed a lifelong job. Such men as "Bill" Hart have originated a type, for instance, which by a long process of seeking out determining traits they have made a living essence of a certain dramatic spirit. Probably none of these actors would for a moment express a doubt but that this type as they present it today is far and away ahead of the same type several years ago. Because every ounce of their ability has gone toward making the character more and more striking, original and significant. Neither "Bill" Hart nor any other picture star wants to be confined to any one type, but the national bent of pictures seems to shape itself toward one supreme type portrayal.

In the heart of Charlie Ray, the Ince picture star, there is one great and surmounting fear. He dreads becoming a character. You see, a couple of years ago, Mr. Ray had the misfortune to make a picture which was called "The Pinch-Hitter," in which he evolved a young man of the countryside—or at least everybody thought it was an inhabitant of the rural districts—and now he can't stop.

In the press notices that are written about his stories Charlie is called everything from a farm hand to a boob. And while this is all in good part and complimentary, Mr. Ray very rightfully raises an objection.

Because he had succeeded in building up a type of character which is representative of certain peculiar American traits, the public refuses to accept his intent at its proper valuation, and just wants to have a good time at Charlie's expense. Of course, he doesn't kick about their having their fun, because it's meant tremendous popularity for his pictures, but he has just a word to say in behalf of the so-called greenhorns and dubs that he is accused of having originated.

JUST ORIGINAL BOYS.

You see, Bill Henry, and the rest of them, are no more boobs than anyone else who happens to have some original ideas and wants to express them. It just so occurs that they are in the midst of a lot of people more stupid than themselves, and therefore less inclined to flights of imagination, and so they are misunderstood.

Charlie Ray really has drawn on many sources of inspiration for the peculiarly interesting type he has evolved. You can find traces of literary influence of James Whitcomb Riley, Booth Tarkington and Mark Twain in his young men of ingenuity.

What Ray really does represent on the screen is the youth amid restricted surroundings who is seeking the way to a bigger sphere of activity. Here is where the dramatic clash comes in his plays. That is what makes them the masterpieces of screen humor.

Now to answer our original question of how much effort it takes to build up such a character?

KEEPS HIM BUSY.

During the conversation I had with Mr. Ray the other day, one sentence kept recurring and recurring during his talk: "I lay awake nights thinking up that bit of business," or some other bit of business, or something regarding the future of his characters and himself. Even though it is just an expression, that sentence shows serious-mindedness—the will to work beyond the working hours.

He takes everything that concerns work seriously. He goes to the very core of each golden apple of an idea that presents itself, and exhausts its potential flavor. He has only had one vacation—and that for his honeymoon—in all the seven years he has been in pictures. Some of that time he didn't know whether he'd ever amount to anything but a two-penny juvenile, but he kept right on doggedly waiting for his opportunity.

After he'd waited so long that he thought it was never coming, he just braced himself for one big effort, and made up his mind that he simply had to get there, and that's when he originated the type which has made him famous all over the screen-viewing Rialtos.

THE POTENT HOUR.

"Even today, I feel that if I'd tried another kind of role, I'd made good just the same," said Ray. "I'd just determined I was going to put over something big, and I lined up all my resources for the effort.

"I believe that determination when it gets large enough through being held back from its object is going to break through and reach it some day. You've got to have that determination, though."

That same stick-to-itiveness of which Mr. Ray speaks is probably one day going to take away from the screen one of its most popular characters. But if it does, this is only because Ray is going to give us something bigger.

His ideals are away up in the clouds, but at the same time they are down to earth. He knows the value of practicality, but that doesn't keep him from thinking up above the second-story level.

"BUSHER" HIS FAVORITE.

I asked him what his favorite characters was of those he had played.

"'The Busher,' I believe, because that embodies the most significant purpose," he answered. "You see, we have here the case of a young man who suddenly achieves fame in his own small province. An enterprising commercial manager from the city sees him as a 'find' and takes him away to a larger field. There the youth's encounter with the world rouses all his latent egotism. The new experience is so big that it blinds him to the higher truths of character, and having let his vanity run away with him, he at last loses out, and has to return like the prodigal to his original habitat. It was just as well for him that this happened, because it was here that his real future lay, and the other experience made the better man of him."

It seems very strange that although Ray has evolved a character that is apparently so typical in public judgment of the young man of rural America, he has spent but a very short portion of his life in the country. He was born in a small Middle Western town, but moved to California at an early age, even attending high school in this city. He admits that he didn't have an easy time at school, because he was too

THE DRAMA DOWN TO DATE.

Bayard Veiller Believes in News Values in the Play.

BY JAMES M. WARNACK.

"Profiteers, do you admit the sentence of death should be pronounced upon you?"

"We do."

"Then we will proceed with your trial, conviction and execution."

The time was Friday morning, the place was the rehearsing room at the Majestic Theater, the "judge" was Bayard Veiller, author of "Danger," which starts on its third week tonight, while the spokesman of the profiteers, who admitted the guilt of the meat packers, was Edward J. Peil.

"Judge David Hartford, Dist.-Atty. Lewis Stone, Vampire Florence Oakley, Profiteer George Pearce and all the rest of you, good and bad, gather round me," continued Mr. Veiller. "I understand that the public is well satisfied with our play and I know you all have done your darndest to make it a success, but we've simply got to tack on another act for next week in order to bring these rapacious profiteers to justice.

"It is not enough for the District Attorney to commit a felony by stealing the papers which are supposed to convict the meat packing ring—we must show the actual trial, conviction and punishment. We have no right to depend on the imagination of an audience that is howling for blood. Besides, it's been done in real life. I just read about the conviction of five profiteers in the East. The stage must reflect life as it is. If it can be done in life, surely it can be repeated on the stage.

"No back talk, please, Miss Oakley. The new act will not interfere with the regeneration of your soul but will rather emphasize it.

"All in favor of giving these profiteers their just dues, say 'Aye.'"

There was a chorus of resounding "ayes" and the rehearsal started.

"You see, it's this way," explained Mr. Veiller to me, as he handed the players their new lines, "the drama, if it be real drama, must be realistic, must follow the lines of life. In no other way can the theater-goer learn life at the same time that he enjoys drama; in no other way can he get an epitomized, definite view of conditions and formulate ideas looking to the reparation of social wrongs. And certainly the purpose of all drama, as of all art, science and government, should be, first, to make the world better and happier.

"Any work of any description, undertaken with any other end in view, will prove futile—and in the future, I hope, will prove unpopular. People have begun to use their minds more than ever, especially since the war, although, of course, when they attend the theater, a place of relaxation, they want a lot of their thinking done for them—and that is one reason why idealism must be presented in drama through the medium of realism."

"But you are the author of 'The Thirteenth Chair,' a new type of drama, a play that gave rise to many other mystery plays and that challenged the attention of many prominent psychologists?"

QUOTES GREELEY.

"Perhaps that play contained its message," smiled Mr. Veiller, "but, as Horace Greeley said, 'One world at a time should be enough for any of us.'

"I was a reporter for years before I ever wrote a play, and I am realizing now, more than ever, that drama as well as journalism is vital and useful mainly in so far as it deals with questions of the day, problems that must be solved before we begin to dabble in mysteries beyond our present comprehension or requirements.

"What will be the tenor and style of the future drama? I do not know and I think no one knows, for both people and conditions change with time, but I do believe that the successful plays of tomorrow will touch upon the subjects nearest to the hearts of the people, whether they be problems in economics, science, industry, religion, sex or what not.

"One comforting thought to me is that the theater is not only learning how to take lessons from life out the public has begun to learn of life from the stage. This is a hopeful sign for it places the stage where it rightfully belongs, makes it life's complement instead of its shadow.

"Take the case of the 'ruined woman,' for example. People have begun to realize that neither the soul nor the body of a woman can be 'ruined' by a single misstep, nor by many missteps. She may stray from the path of rectitude, certainly, just as any man may go wrong, but she is not 'ruined,' and any attempt of the playwright or producer to introduce an irredeemably 'bad woman' in speaking drama, is ridiculous and today is only laughed at by an intelligent audience.

"They still show us ruined women on the screen of course, but it has been truthfully said they can show anything in moving pictures. They can, indeed—and they do!"

Mr. Veiller wrote the dialogue for "Danger" in twenty-one hours—but he had spent ten months thinking it all up." The author lives in Los Angeles—most of the time on the golf course, part of the time making his own clothes, doing his own cooking and washing and the rest of the time writing plays. He is a sort of combination of Crusoe and Thoreau, doing the "simple" in a big metropolis. From now on Mr. Veiller intends to produce one play a year, each new production to have its premiere in Los Angeles.

ATHLETE JOINS METRO FORCES.

Jack Huddleston, a young athlete who holds the Pacific Coast record for the 220-yard dash, has been engaged as assistant to Arthur Martinelli, May Allison's cameraman for "The Walk-Offs." Huddleston made his record by running the event in twenty-two seconds, flat at the Amateur Athletic Union meet, Tacoma, Wash., last July. He has won one letter at the Los Angeles High School and two at the Lincoln High School, Los Angeles. His film experience includes work in the title department at the Morosco studio and in the laboratories at Lasky and Morosco.

MISS YOUNG'S SCHEDULE.

Clara Kimball Young hereafter is to be seen but four times a year on the screen, it is announced. Following her last picture, "The Better Wife," which was shown during the past few months, Miss Young is devoting three months to each production instead of four and five weeks, which the releasing schedule compelled her to hurry through. Her first picture under the new plan is "Eyes of Youth," to be followed by "Elevating a Husband."

Congenial Furniture

Congeniality is just as important an element in furniture as it is in personalities. The furniture you live with, on which your daily comfort depends, the furniture that influences your very character, and creates the atmosphere in which you live; should it not be chosen with the same thoughtful discrimination and judgment you use in the selection of your intimate friends, and of the books you read?

Consider well the fact that furniture, carefully chosen, becomes perhaps a lifetime companion, a daily factor in your happiness, and an eloquent expression of culture and refinement.

It is not so much a matter of cost, for even the least expensive furniture may be congenial if it embodies the elements of comfort and distinctive character.

Perhaps the greatest factor in the reputation which the "California" enjoys as the home of the unusual in home furnishings, is the fact that every article that enters our stocks is carefully, thoughtfully, individually selected for its congeniality; for the elements of comfort, of character and culture which are inherent in it.

It is such furniture we wish you to come here and see, regardless of the limitation or extent of your requirements. And we likewise most cordially urge you to make value comparisons, for we are confident that however modest or pretentious your home, you can economize by supplying your needs at the "California."

Rest.

The boat is hauled upon the hardening sand,
The mist is gathering o'er the dim morass,
The kine are couching on the daisied grass,
And in their stalls the champing horses stand.
No plash of brine along the darkling strand,
No light winds play the reed-pipes as they pass;
The moonlit deep is glittering like glass,
And all things yield to stilly night's command.

O balmy hours of silver sheen and dew!
Shall nought belie you save this laboring breast—
The soul alone to Nature be untrue,
And still of what she hath not go in quest?
Just now ye spake. Ah, speak those words anew:
"Wait, weary heart; soon thou shalt also rest."

JOHN CHARLES EARLE.

Pictures by the Ten Painters.

Another exhibition of pictures by the Ten Painters Club of California has just opened in the Kanst gallery, 826 South Hill street. It will remain on view for several months. As almost every member of the club has taken advantage of his privilege to show five pictures, the exhibition is as comprehensive as it is attractive—one of the best shows of the year, in fact, with landscapes predominating to the exclusion of everything but one lone figure study.

The California painters' absorption in landscape is, of course, the expected, the unavoidable thing. And, equally, of course, nobody wants him to avoid it. Nature has been magnificently and prodigally kind to us out here; we have everything in landscape that the eye could wish for, and we find transcendent beauty wherever we turn to look for it. Too, the climatic conditions are ideal for the landscape painter—sunshine perennial, 365 working days, or nearly so many. Surely the man who "is on to his job" so faithfully as the artist could find nothing more to his mind.

In this respect the photographer is as fortunate as the painter. Therefore the motion-picture producer has found it to his great advantage to move his vast paraphernalia to Los Angeles, where he finds his "pictures" ready to hand for every sort of story, and where the sun is always ready to obey the cameraman. New York has been forced to take a back seat in the production of the wonderful new art of the motion picture—I wonder if California is also destined to win out in the production of the elder art of landscape painting? Perhaps—and even probably.

But this is looking somewhat into the future. Let us consider the present, which is big and important enough to satisfy us for a while. Let us study the output of the Ten Painters of California, a really notable collection of landscape canvases by some of our best painters. The contemplation is bound to bolster our hopes and cement our convictions. For we shall see that these pictures are good.

Maurice Braun of San Diego contributes the only figure in the collection, but his three landscapes are so much better that we will let it go. A poetic bit, rhythmical in color, is "The Dance," and the greenish tones of "Early Moonrise," seen in both foreground and sky, make a picture of great charm and serenity.

As always, Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel gives us water colors of such breadth, simplicity and technical dexterity that we are left to marvel at their finesse. All are good—and more than good—but the two I like best are "The Desert," with its impeccable drawing of cold gray foreground sands and rain-dropping clouds, and "Oaks at Sunset," a scheme of roseate and golden colors exquisitely rendered.

Roi Clarkson Colman, whose home is at Laguna Beach, is making close and loving studies of the ocean in its various moods. Two attractive ones in the present exhibition are "The Summer Sea," which shows a yellow moon rising over a sea whose gray is permeated with gold, and "The Surf," a more vigorous expression, though perhaps less poetic—blue and green waves beating over rocks whose colors are cooled by shadows.

The splendidly vigorous landscape art of William Wendt is here represented by some striking examples, among them being "Trees that Are Old," slim trees whose leaves are spread out like fans placed against wonderful blue velvet—the velvet being the sea at Laguna Beach—a beautiful decorative composition whose color scheme is as attractive as its pattern; and "Over the Hills and Far Away," finely modeled oaks on hills that are painted with the living greens that nobody does quite so well as Wendt.

Jack Wilkinson Smith shows two marines that as yet have not been honored with titles. Both are of good size, and both are notably fine, though I like better the one that gives us a wave, powerfully painted, breaking in the foreground welter of rocks and waters, all seen under a golden sky of wonderful loveliness. The other has a vast sky, greenish in tone, whose sunset clouds, piled high, are like the splendid architectural forms one might see in dreams, below them a slowly breaking, low-lying ocean.

From Hanson Puthoff, almost matchless modeler of the magnificent hills of Southern California, come four or five pictures that are quite up to his usual standard. "Sunset Hills" has colors of rose and gold mixed with green, the sky above the hills being delicately blue. "Trail of the Angels"—but exactly what does the title mean?—is a fine study of rocks in a narrow canyon, beyond them a touch of warm sunlight on tender grass, among them a cool green pool.

Guy Rose's "The Path by the Shore" is exquisitely painted, mists seen over distant blue mountains, in the foreground rocks that are gray yet full of subtle coloring. His "Drifting Fog" is a fine scheme of color, the twisted foreground trees giving accent to a phase in nature that might otherwise be too elusive for the medium of paint.

Elmer Wachtel's masterly handling of values, his great knowledge of nature, and his fine precision in placing paint, are all shown in the five landscapes he gives us. "The Fording, Topanga" has a unique and refined scheme of color, greens and lush browns seen in the foreground, the distant mountains touched with gold pink. "Wild Lilac" is full of light and lovely in color, and we find even more light and air in "San Gorgione"—light and air so truly rendered that we marvel at the inspiration of their rendering.

Benjamin Chambers Brown has of late given much time, thought and work to the study of mountain forms, with the result that his mountain pictures are splendidly big in feeling and nobly free and broad in expression. They are gallery pictures, needing distance if we would find how true and beautiful they are. Step as far back as you can in the Kanst gallery—otherwise you may miss their value. Consider "The Pass in Winter," with its huge peaks whose gorges hold shadows that are cold green on snow, or "The Trail of the Peaks," an effect in pale greens, snow-clad peaks rising majestically toward the blue sky.

You are given much time to study this exhibition by the ten painters of California—so do not neglect it.

Art at Laguna Beach.

[Editor Art and Artists:] It will be of interest to your readers that there is one place in Southern California where harmony and cooperation among artists reign supreme; one place in this land of sunshine where painters have a widening vision of greater good to a greater number of artists and to a greater public; one place in this garden of keen western intelligence where artists and a thinking group of citizens are taking active steps to benefit the whole people. That place is Laguna Beach, Orange county, California. Here a rapidly growing colony of California's painters have established a successful art gallery, and an art association for the former's maintenance.

The present small gallery has been so well attended—15,000 people this year—and the sales of pictures so encouraging that a new and more commodious building has become imperative. Plans for an edifice of fitting beauty and utility are under way, and a movement is already on foot for raising $15,000, some of which has been subscribed. This gem of architecture will be set upon one of the imposing promontories of Laguna Cliffs, where it may be easily found and admired. From such an eminence it will also command a comprehensive view of Laguna's gold-fringed coast line, and look across a sea of emerald and sapphire to the tinted peaks of Catalina. The many painters, musicians, writers and other celebrities who visit our village throughout the year proclaim this the ideal retreat for artists of every description.

Musical evenings are becoming a feature of the art association's activites, with prominent Los Angeles musicians as contributors. Therefore a musical room will be incorporated in the building.

And for the reading public there will be the library and reading-room. In other words, the great aim of the institution is educational. We are bringing together the best talent in all lines for the mutual benefit of a public that is eager to learn and enjoy, as well as for the various branches of art, who gain fresh ideas and fresh impulse for work through friendly contact and association with one another.

Of course the sale of pictures is imperative to the well-being of the institution, and this is handled in a competent and courteous manner and without entailing any obligation to those coming to enjoy. The admission is free to all. And an entirely new set of pictures is shown each month. This gives visiting art lovers an ever refreshing exhibit to see, and this stirs the artist to a more lively obedience to his inspirations. A new jury of selection is chosen each month, and no member does jury service twice the same year. This reduces the danger from artistic czars to a minimum.

Life and progress—these we would make ours. And in this age of reconstruction let us amalgamate the life and vigor of the new with the sturdy backbone of the old, and go forward to a realization of a truly American art for which we are most surely destined. Must we not agree with Rodin: "Without religion, without art, without a love of nature men will die of ennui."

In the Laguna Beach Art Association, which is now 300 strong, artists and laymen combined, there is an increasing spirit of democracy and fellowship. And in the selection of pictures a broad-minded policy is going to be carried out. Our exhibiting members comprise a large share of the painters and etchers of Southern California, and this fact naturally insures activity that shall be to the best interests of the entire State. Therefore we believe that we can count on the enthusiastic support of every person who believes in the prospect of art that is western and art that is American.

Respectfully yours,
HENRI G. DE KRUIF.

California Art Club.

The exhibition of the California Art Club opens during the coming week, to continue through the month of October. It is the most important art exhibition of works by native painters held during the year. The most of the painters of Southern California are members of the club. Sculptures as well as paintings will be shown. The event is indeed a notable one.

Alanzo Kimball Lewis.

Among the distinguished visitors to the city this week was Alonzo Kimball Lewis, who stopped off a few days to visit his teacher, J. Francis Smith, who is now in charge of the art department at the California School of Arts on Grand avenue. Mr. Lewis has just completed a head of Lincoln, which measures eleven feet, and which was purchased by the city of Tacoma, Wash., to place in one of their city parks. He has done many busts of notable people in the West, and has just finished a bust of the famous dancer, Ana Pavlowa.

Exhibit of Sketches.

Dan Sayre Grosbeck, distinguished cartoonist and illustrator, formerly of Los Angeles, is showing a group of pictures and sketches made in Russia, at the Kamp Gallery, 744 South Hill street. Further comment will be given in this column next week.

A Way Where There's a Will.

The young hopeful of 4 had been a source of continual vexation and trouble all through the meal, and at its finish a lady friend turned to the child's mother and said:

"If your boy belonged to me I shouldn't stand so much of his nonsense at meal time, I should give him a thrashing."

"But," said the mother, "you can't smack the poor little fellow on a full stomach."

"No," said her friend, "but you can turn him over."—[Blighty, London.

All Doubled Up.

The semi-annual notion sale at that reliable store has proven so popular that the space devoted to such items has been doubled. I always declare Los Angeles women have a real talent for bargains. It takes them but a few hours—yes even half hours—to scent a bargain and flock thereto. It was the case with notions. And by the way, several of our old favorites reappeared in that sale. Remember those darling little boxes of silks on tiny spools? For long we have been unable to get them, but they are back again. Sports Goods for Less.

It really is a bother to move! And every item that can be sold—even at a sacrifice—is, in a way, a saving. That's why they are selling things for less, at that big sports goods store, which is so soon to remove to its new quarters, a block or so farther up the street. Fish hooks and tramping boots, camp wearables and takables are vieing with each other to see which can sell for least, it seems, each vowed to do its share toward helping "to move."

Poly-Chrome and Polly-Parrot.

What first attracted my attention to that shop which proved to be so interesting, was the parrot swinging in the window. Not that Polly said anything, either sacred or profane, to attract my attention—she just looked; and looked in lovely colored leaded glass. She was, in fact, one of the minor triumphs in this artistic creation, for which that shop is widely distinguished. Polly was of leaded glass, and the ring in which she was set was of this material also. There were other things as beautiful as Polly: Transparencies for the window, as well as entire windows, screens, and a new, lovely tile for placing 'round the fireplace—this a kind of molten glass, transfused into the most beautiful of opalescent tints, with flower petals and leaves in misty coloring. Then there was a wonderful hope chest, done in polychrome, by a new and magic process, put on after the wood was carved—that, too, by a process of greater accuracy and more celerity than when such work is done by hand. Altogether, I felt that shop to be a discovery—one more gem to add to the diadem of creative places, in Los Angeles.

Baby Irish is "in" again, and especially is it "in" for fine baby dresses. I saw one recently—an importation from Paris, Irish though it was — which was truly a baby treasure. BANKER FOUGHT WAY TO FIRST POSITION.

There's a bank in England unlike anything we have in this country, and the man at the head of it, too, is different, writes Samuel Crowther in System. The London, Joint City, and Midland has some 1200 offices all over England. But it has opened few of these on its own account; most of them were at one time independent banks, which either joined directly with Sir Edward Holden or first entered some other combination to be absorbed later by the big merger. The resources of the Holden chain may be judged from the fact that it has deposits of more than $1,500,000,000—by all odds the largest private bank in the world.

Sir Edward fought his way into his first job. Here is the story, as nearly in his own words as I can remember them:

"A small bank in the Midlands advertised for a manager; I was then an accountant and as poor as a church mouse. I wanted to go into banking, and I answered the advertisement, along with 300 other young men and old men, who thought they, too, might like to manage the bank. I did not ask for the position in my letter, but I said that I would take the place if certain conditions which I would explain orally were complied with.

"It was a piece of cheek on my part, and yet I really did not care to start unless I could make a success. And I knew that I must have my own way in order to make a success.

"The directors called me in to see them. I explained that I would consent to manage the bank if I had complete control and was permitted to merge other banks with their institution, so that we might have real financial power. I explained that there could be no money in a small bank—that volume was necessary. Think of a young man who needed a berth dictating how he should be employed!

"They engaged me, and that was the start of our present company. I bought two banks in Leeds almost at once; both banks were eager to sell, but at the same time neither wanted to sell if the other did. So it became necessary for me to work my plans secretly, seeing the one without the knowledge of the other.

"I made my terms and then had the agreements signed within an hour of each other—for if bank No. 2 had known that bank No. 1 had sold, it would not have gone on with the sale. They were a surprised lot of directors when they found out what had happened."

HAD STAGE FRIGHT.

Correspondent Overcome by Huge Audience at Carnegie Hall.

Part of the adventure of life in New York is the acquisition of unexpected knowledge by means of lectures; and Carnegie Hall is the mecca of lecturers. Having been one of the lecturers I can speak from personal experience when I say that a man who stands for the first time on the naked desert of that platform, looking toward rows of white faces and white shirt fronts to the farthest limit of the topmost galleries, feels humility creep into his soul until he shrinks to the size of hop-o'-my-thumb, and is the smallest, loneliest thing in the whole wide world.

A microbe is a monster to him, and he quakes with terror when he hears the first squeak of his tiny voice in the vast spaciousness under that high, vaulted roof. On that first night of mine I would have sold myself, with white shirt, cuff links and quaking body, for 2 cents, if anyone had been fool enough to buy me and let me off that awful ordeal. And yet, looking back on it now, I know that it was the finest hour of my life, and a wonderful reward for small service, when all those people rose to greet me, and there came up to me out of that audience a spiritual friendship so warm and generous that I felt it like the touch of kindly hands about me, and recovered from my fright.

Afterward, as always happens in America, there was a procession of people who came onto the platform to shake hands and say words of thanks, so that one gets into actual touch with all kinds of people, and their friendship becomes personal. In that way I made thousands of friends in America, and feel toward them all a lasting gratitude because of the generous, warm-hearted, splendid things they said as they passed with a quick handclasp.—[Philip Gibbs in Harper's Magazine.

BLIND MEN APPEAL TO PARLIAMENT FOR AID.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Seventy blind men recently presented themselves at the House of Commons "as a protest against State apathy towards the deplorable conditions of the blind." An offical of the League of the Blind complained that money contributed for the blind was being utilised in paying salaries to officials which, in some cases, amounted to $4000 yearly while the blind persons are given pensions averaging only $50 annually.

He declared that England had a blind population of 34,000, the great majority of them in dire distress because of prevailing costs and the scarcity of employment for which they are suited.

THE PASSING OF POYNTER.

A Man Whose Art Won for Him Many Public Honors.

Sixty Years of Activity is Brought to a Close.

His Dominant Talent Indicated in His Ancestry.

[From the Kansas City Times.]

Sir Edward Poynter, who died recently in London, received in his lifetime almost every honor in the power of his country and his fellow artists to bestow. Only last year, because of his age, he resigned from the highest of them all, that of president of the Royal Academy, an office to which he had been elected in 1896.

But Sir Edward was more than a painter—he was a teacher of art, and many of the younger British artists of today have him to thank for their early instruction. Two years before his election to the presidency of the academy, he had been made director of the National Art Gallery, and in his sixty years' activity as a painter and teacher held many more positions from which he molded public taste in art, as well as instructed novices in its rudiments.

A COUSIN OF RUDYARD KIPLING

He was director for art in the science and art department at South Kensington. He was at one time principal of the National Art Training Schools (now the Royal College of Art,) and was Slade Professor of Art in London University College. His lucrative position of director of the National Gallery he held after his election to the presidency of the academy.

To the disciple of heredity it is not strange that Sir Edward Poynter should be ranked with the most illustrious artists of his day. His father, Ambrose Poynter, a noted architect, designed Christ Church, Westminster. His mother, a granddaughter of the sculptor, Thomas Banks, R. A., was herself a miniature painter of some distinction. And, while it has no bearing of course upon his inheritance of talent, it is interesting to note that Sir Edward was a cousin of Rudyard Kipling, his mother's sister being Mrs. Lockwood Kipling, mother of the author.

STUDIED WITH WHISTLER.

Edward Poynter was born in Paris in 1836. His early education was obtained in England, but at 20 he returned to Paris to continue his art studies. There he was a fellow student of Whistler and Du Maurier, and in 1861, with Lamont, Thomas Armstrong and Du Maurier, Poynter established a studio in Paris—a studio with which all readers of "Trilby" are familiar.

But in a little while he returned to England, the land of his ancestors, if not of his nativity. While still in Paris, in 1859, he had gained his first recognition from the Royal Academy with "Two Italian Pifferari." Ten years later he became an associate academician with his "Proserpine" and "Atalanta's Race" brought about his election as a member of the academy in 1876. But, while his rise in the academy occurred coincident with the showings of these pictures, his "Israel in Egypt," an elaborate and detailed study of Egypt in the days of the Children of Israel, won him his first general popularity. It was a picture the public could understand and appreciate. This was shown in 1867, and one year later appeared another study of similar nature, "The Catapult." Sir Edward, however, produced only one other picture which rivaled "Israel in Egypt" in the opinion of critics. That was "A Visit to Aesculapius," which appeared in 1880.

Early in his career he was ambitious to become a landscape painter, but a tour of the continent for his health at that time diverted his interest to classical studies, and most of his productions thereafter were of classical and mythical derivation. He delighted in depicting classic interiors, adorned with precious marbles, and enshrined within them fair women of no less classic aspect.

Coincident with his election as president of the academy in 1896 Poynter was knighted. In 1902 he received a baronetcy from King Edward VII, to which he is succeeded by his elder son. Upon his retirement from the academy presidency last year, the G.C.V.O. was conferred upon him.

EAGLE WINS AIR CHASE

Three airplanes joined in the chase of a huge eagle that has been seen from time to time in the last week flying over Atlantic City. Persons who saw the bird said that it appeared to have a wing-spread of not less than fifteen feet.

Today it was seen while the aviators and aeronautic authorities were at the Atlantic City airport in connection with the organization of the tours of the Aerial League of America. Two land airplanes and a seaplane started off in pursuit. The landplanes were piloted by Earle L. Ovington and Lieutenant R. L. Dunn, and carried as passengers Henry Woodhouse of New York, Vice President of the Aerial League of America, and Mark Ovington of the executive staff arranging for the pioneer airplane tour. The seaplane was piloted by A. Livingstone Allen, and also carried a passenger. The flyers took shotguns with them.

The eagle flew to a height of about 6000 feet, and it took the aviators over ten minutes to reach that altitude. Then the chase began. The bird seemed puzzled at first and flew aimlessly, and the shots fired at it did not seem to have any effect. Suddenly the bird dove clear of the planes and made off in the direction of the Pennsylvania mountains.—[New York Times.

Up Against It.

One day when Mat Wynne, the manager of Churchill Downs and Latonia, was at the Juarez track he was braced for a little coin by a man who looked like a Mexican but talked like an Irishman.

"Are you an Irishman or a Mexican?" asked Matt.

"Will, sor," was the reply, "I'm both. Me name is Patrick O'Donnel Valdez. I have just enough Irish in me to make me want to fight all the time, sor, an' jist enough Mexican in me to get licked all the time."—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Roamer.

You ask why I'm a roamer?
I did not will it so;
I envy other men with homes,
Yet homelessness I know.

I once spent many an hour
Beside the murmuring sea,
With one possessed of mystic power
To fellowship with me.

I loved—but lacked love's daring;
Love's song I had not learned;
Another sought—another won
The prize for which I yearned.

She knew not my heart's meaning—
Guessed not the wreck—the blur.
And I—ah, never have I known
Another maid like her!

What else for me but roaming?
Blow winds, blow far and free,
But never whisper in her ear,
Why I must homeless be!
—[Clarence Radway, in New York Tribune.

Bubbling Betty.

Sweet Betty lives on Bubble street
And she just bubbles o'er;
She bubbles at the window
And she bubbles at the door,
She bubbles in the hallway,
And in the parlor, too;
It seems that Bubbling Betty
Has nothing else to do.
She bubbles fast and furious
When suppertime draws near;
We cannot stay for supper—
She bubbles out a tear.
We're 'fraid she'll serve us bubble tea
And bubble-bubble cake;
She bubbles like a bubbeler
When we arise to take
Our leave of this fair bubbeler
Whose bubbles always greet
Each one who walks the bubbling length
Of fairy Bubble street.
—[Cartoons Magazine.

The Modest Jazz-Bird.

The jazz-bird sings a barnyard song—
A cock-a-doodle bray,
A jingle-bells, a boiler works,
A he-man's roundelay.

The eagle said: "My noisy son,
I send you out to fight!"
So the youngster spread his sunflower wings
And roared with all his might.

His headlight eyes went flashing
From Oregon to Maine;
And the land was dark with airships
In the darting jazz-bird's train.

Crossing the howling ocean,
His bell-mouth shook the sky;
And the Yankees in the trenches
Gave back the hue and cry.

And Europe had not heard the like—
And Germany went down!
The fowl of steel with clashing claws
Tore off the Kaiser's crown.
—[Vachel Linsay, in Poetry.

Fortune's Favorite.

Ben Franklin flew a kite and wrote
His name in blazing flame.
By hours I have kept kites afloat,
But no discoveries came.

An apple bumped Ike Newton's head.
On gravity he thought.
My numerous bumps have never led
To things worth being taught.

So when you tell of how folks miss
Success, through lack of pluck,
All that I'll say is simply this:
Some men have all the luck!
—[Washington Star.

WHAT OUR CONSULS SAY

The American Consul at Teneriffe, Canary Islands, reports, under date of August 26, that 70,000 pounds of onion seed have been invoiced at that consulate for shipment to the United States during this year. Much of this was from last year's crop, owing to the fact that there was a large decrease in purchases by the United States last year.

The Canadian Pacific Ocean Service (Ltd.) has now established a direct freight line from Vancouver, B. C., to Singapore, in which it is using the British steamship Methven. This vessel sailed from Vancouver August 15, 1919. Its next sailing is scheduled from Vancouver on October 17.

All classes, both foreign and Chinese, are feeling the effects of the steadily increasing cost of living in China. The Chinese coolies who are engaged in loading and unloading cargo at the port of Shanghai are appealing to their employers for a slight increase in wages.

The rubber exports from the Sumatra East Coast for the first three months of 1919 amounted to 21,010,854 pounds. The United States took 7,857,584 pounds, or 37 per cent.; Singapore, 9,783,649 pounds, or 47 per cent.; and Great Britain, 2,522,467 pounds, or 12 per cent.

There are no manufacturing plants, railways, or other large industries using coal in Paraguay. Before the war, however, and up to about 1916, some steam coal was used by the Paraguayan Central Railroad Company. Wood obtained from the extensive forests of Paraguay is found to be a cheaper fuel for steam-generating purposes than coal that has to be brought from the United States or from Europe. For cooking purposes locally-burned charcoal is used almost exclusively.

An exhibition of British jewelry, silverware, electroplate, Britannia metal, and nickelware was recently held in Buenos Aires under the direction of a special commissioner of the British government, Mr. G. F. Braddock. According to the Review of the River Plate the enterprise was organized by the Ministry of Commerce with the co-operation of a number of industrial associations.

That the great republic of Brazil is becoming, to a very large extent, independent of imported footwear is the conclusion reached by an American commercial investigator who has returned from a study of shoe and leather markets in the Latin-American countries. Trade Commissioner H. G. Brock expresses the opinion that the opportunity for American footwear in Brazil must be regarded as confined mainly to high-grade shoes and specialty lines. It will never be possible, he says, to sell cheap foreign shoes there again, because of the high tariff and the excellence of the footwear produced in domestic factories.

THE LEAGUE COVENANT, QUESTION AND ANSWER.

BY FRANK JAMES.

Question: Why is a League of Nations necessary to prevent war?

Answer: In order to set up, by agreement, a body of men representing the nations of the world commissioned and authorized to look after and preserve the peace of the world.

Q: Do you mean to say that without a League of Nations neutral states have no authority to concert themselves in a dispute between other states?

A: Unfortunately that has been the international situation for all time. It is conventional, of course, for a neutral state to offer its "good offices" and suggest arbitration, but the neutral state can go no farther without "getting in bad."

Q: How then have disputes between sovereign states been settled?

A: By diplomacy and by war.

Q: Do I infer from this that there are no established rules or laws which nations are bound to follow in the adjustment and settlement of international disputes?

A: A sovereign state may, in the exercise of its might, disregard the established conventions between individuals and the laws regulating their intercourse, and keep what it has and get what it can. In a world without a League of Nations a sovereign state is a law unto itself. There is a code of conduct called the Law of Nations, but these laws are set aside by the powerful nations, as a rule, whenever they stand in the way of their ambition. You will readily understand why we have this condition of affairs when you recall that there is no power on earth above a sovereign state. When, therefore, a particular state is very powerful and when its ambition is to override the rights of other states and overrun their territory, the only law recognized is the sword.

Q: Has diplomacy been a failure?

A: Nearly so. The statesmen of our own country have, for instance, kept us out of war with other states, with but one exception, for over a hundred years. And the statesmen of other nations have patched up peace, from time to time, and kept the old world going, most of the time, smoothly on the surface, but the trouble about diplomacy is that it fails at the critical moment; it is more apt to be the means of precipitating war. War comes upon the world because diplomacy fails to make settlements. Every war that has come to the world may be laid at the door of diplomacy. German diplomacy forced war upon Serbia and this brought in France, England and United States and their Allies to undo what German diplomacy had brought about. Diplomacy for the settlement of international disputes is a disease; it is not a cure for war.

Q.: Do you think that the nations of the world by concert or agreement can succeed where diplomacy has failed?

A: Well, war is a diseased condition of society. The doctors have doped the patient with copious and frequent doses of diplomacy, and the surgeons have made many and liberal incisions with the sword, and still the patient is sick. What are we to do? Sit by and let an epidemic of war run us off the earth? Hadn't we better try the only remedy the best experts and specialists of the world, after years of study, can offer us, and particularly so in view of the fact that this remedy is the one which has received the approbation of those best qualified to diagnose the trouble.

Q: The remedy, of course, is the League of Nations Covenant.

A: Yes, sir; either ratify the covenant, or let war run riot.

Q.: What is the covenant?

A: An agreement between the Allies and the other leading nations of the world (for the present excepting Germany and her allies) obligating these nations not to resort to war with respect to international controversies without first submitting the matter in dispute to arbitration by agreement between the parties, or to settlement at the hands of the council of the league, or to a court of international justice set up for that purpose by the league covenant.

Q: Suppose the parties to the controversy are not willing to arbitrate, and refuse to select their own arbitrators, or submit the matter to the council, or to the court, what is the league going to do about it?

A: You have touched the vital point. If the parties to the dispute may complacently and safely refuse to carry out their covenant obligations to arbitrate, why, then, of course, the league is another "scrap of paper" and the league remedy is not better than the old remedy of diplomacy and the sword. The covenant, however, has something in it besides the obligations upon the particular member state. The league does not rest entirely, for its success, upon the assumption that a member state will faithfully keep its word. The covenant is constructed to meet human conditions, and one of which is that a particular state may desire, for selfish reasons, to break its contract. And herein is where the league covenant differs from all previous treaties and from so-called "scrap of paper" arrangements.

Q.: Am I to understand you as saying that a state can be forced to arbitrate?

A.: Oh, no. No state can be forced to arbitrate anything. Arbitration is an indirect purpose of the league; arbitration is a means to an end, the prevention of war. The direct purpose of the league is to bottle up the disputing states in such way that they dare not go to war for fear of consequences at the hands of the league. Arbitration or settlement by the council or the international court is the bottle, and the league holds the cork.

Q.: Please explain how it is that the league will prevent war, notwithstanding the league cannot compel the parties to arbitrate their disputes?

A.: The covenant first lays down a very simple method for the settlement of international disputes, that is, by arbitration through arbitrators selected by the parties, or submission to the council of the league, or to the international court of the league, for decision. The arbitration plan has been tried by the United States and by other nations, and it works well. In a controversy between citizens of a state in a private contract or property matter, the states sets up a court and compels the litigants to settle their differences through the courts or to hold their peace. In a qualified way the league adopts this mode of procedure with respect to international controversies. The plan is so eminently fair that no nation would think of rejecting arbitration for fear of bringing upon it the condemnation of every other nation of the world. By refusing, the member state would become an outcast among the nations. It is safe to say, therefore, that every self-respecting nation would either forego the dispute, seek an amicable adjustment by agreement, or submit the controversy to arbitration.

Q.: You are explaining on the assumption that every nation is going to keep its word and preserve its self-respect. Whereas, we all know that there are some nations which have no respect for obligations or anything else when they stand in the way of their ambition. Do you think the covenant will change human nature? Is the millennium at hand for the asking?

A.: Publicity is a powerful factor. No statesmen would care to assume the responsibility either to his own people, or to the world, for a course of official conduct which would bring upon himself and his government the contempt of the world. And here and again is where the present plan differs from all earlier attempts. Secret treaties are put under the ban. Negotiations must be open and frank, and you may rest assured that the people of a nation as a whole will not permit their statesmen to make of them the scapegoats of society.

Q.: Am I to infer that the success of the league, as a war-preventing body, rests upon the hazard that every state, just from real goodness, is going to lay aside the sword?

A.: Certainly not. There is plenty of real serious trouble ahead for the covenant-breaking warrior state. Section XVI of the covenant provides that should any member state resort to war in disregard of the provisions of Article XII (arbitration or inquiry by the council upon initiative of the disputing states,) or in disregard of provisions of Article XIII (arbitration of justiciable causes upon the initiative of the disputing states,) or in disregard of Article XV (inquiry by the council with respect to non-justiciable causes.)

"It (resorting to war,) shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the league, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not.

"It shall be the duty of the council in such case to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military, naval or air force the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league."

It will be seen, therefore, that the league does not rest alone upon promises for the orderly conduct of the world. The covenant furnishes the league a weapon of such compulsion that no defaulting state would dare resort to war in violation of the covenant. No state could survive a boycott of the kind provided for in Article XVI of the covenant. And no statesman or diplomat or minister would attempt to disregard the orders of the council or break the covenants of the league, not less for fear of the other states than from his own people. The old notion that each sovereign state is a world unto itself is out of date. Commerce is the very heart of the national life. No state could thrive under isolation of the kind authorized by the league covenant. It is safe to say, therefore, that no state would dare break the covenant, even if it so desired, for fear of the terrible consequences to it. But more, under Article XVI just quoted, the league may take other steps to protect the covenants of the league. It may recommend what armed forces shall be furnished by the loyal states as against a covenant-breaking state. In other words, with the unanimous consent of the states, members of the league council, which includes the United States, the league may employ the combined armed forces of the league for the purpose in hand. Does it not look, therefore, as if the league has the war situation bottled up? Can you suggest anything better? Do you recall anyone, not excepting United States Senators, offering anything as good?

VERDUN REMEMBERS HEROES OF AMERICA.

ST. MIHIEL ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED WITH MASS FOR DEAD PATRIOTS.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. MIHIEL, Sept. 22 (via Paris, Sept. 26.)—(Delayed.) American soldiers were pouring through St. Mihiel a year ago in thousands, going to and from the new front their smashing victory had established.

Today Brig.-Gen. Hart, his sergeant-chauffeur, sixteen Catholic war council workers and the Times correspondent were the only Americans to witness the fete of the first anniversary of liberation.

The principal ceremonies included mass for the fallen, laying the first stone of a Franco-American monument by President Poincare, dedication of the military cemetery and inauguration of an Ossuary for the unknown dead.

The gold star mothers of America would have wept with pride if they could have heard the eulogy of their sons by the Bishop of Verdun. Before the altar in the cathedral a replica of a battlefield grave had been fashioned. On one side of the white wooden cross fell the folds of the Stars and Stripes, on the others the tri-color. Over the symbolic grave a solemn funeral service was performed. Then the bishop spoke:

PRAISES AMERICANS.

"How wonderful the Americans were! We saw them passing in our department of the Meuse splendidly, joyous, ardent in their desire to meet the foe. We said our best when we said, 'they fight as did the French.'

"Many fell on the field of honor. Near Verdun we have a great cemetery where we go to pay homage to them. Before the armies of America in France the Bishop of Verdun accepts the solemn engagement to guard piously the tombs of your heroes."

President Poincare revealed some little-known history about the taking of St. Mihiel, when he spoke of the monument. Often before the Americans came, he said, the French General Staff had studied the possibility of reducing the threatening salient. Always it decided it did not have the effectives to risk. Only when the A.E.F. became formidable could the project be undertaken.

PERSHING EAGER.

Gen. Pershing wanted to attack long before the high command gave him the task. Learning the Germans were preparing to withdraw at an advanced date, his attack caught them retreating and he won a smashing victory. President Poincare said Gen. Pershing wanted to smash on through the Germans' new line, but Marshal Foch preferred to save the Americans for the general offensive of Rheims and Verdun.

The stone the President laid was inscribed: "Grateful homage to the American and French armies." Africa received also a souvenir plaque, showing the figure of deliverance striking chains from the outstretched arms of St. Mihiel. At the head of deliverance floats the American flag.

In accepting the plaque, Brig.-Gen. Harts forgot the Latin custom of kissing the giver. Taking his one immediately after from the French officers, who were receiving a like courtesy, he slipped through the crowd following the little girl and kissed and patted her cheeks. The cinema men abandoned the scheduled ceremony to catch the spirited American bestowing his kisses on the little daughters of France.

SMILE THROUGH SCARS.

An elaborate luncheon at mid-day was served in the hall which the Germans used for a cinema, and now is an athletic club for boys. An able guide pointed out the German frescoed border. It is understood Gen. Pershing worked faster than the artists.

It was almost pitiful. Witness the pains taken by the city to make the fete a success. It was like a person rising from his bed of suffering and smiling through his scars and wounds at friends offering him congratulations. St. Mihiel still is more than half wreckage, being merely patched up, but it is determined to rise out of the ruins, remembering forever the debt it owes America.

MEXICAN PASSPORT BAN NEW HARDSHIP.

STRICT REGULATIONS KEEP OUT CUSTOMERS FROM ARIZONA TOWNS.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz), Sept. 15.—Passport regulations of the United States, which prevent hundreds of Mexicans in Sonora from crossing to this side of the international line to do their trading, have caused considerable complaint among the merchants of Arizona border towns who have heretofore reaped a harvest from Mexican patronage.

The Mexican shoppers often presented some peculiar contrasts. Formerly many Mexican families, their nakedness barely covered by the rags they wore, but with thousands of dollars in their purses, crossed the border for their annual buying trip.

After a day or two they would recross to the Mexican side, members of the family wearing as much of their clothing purchase as possible in order to escape Mexican import duties. Sometimes a man would be seen wearing several suits of clothing with four or five hats, one upon the other, on his head. Such sights, once common, are rarely observed now.

As a Woman Thinketh

Lost—A Husband. Anyone of a Million or So Wives Can Identify Him by This Description.

BY HELEN ROWLAND.

I have lost him—

My perfectly good husband!

It isn't as though he had "passed on" to a better world.

For, then, there would be memory—and the hope of meeting him in heaven, and the insurance—and all that!

(To say nothing of the consoling knowledge that I look "interesting" in black.)

It isn't even as though I had divorced him.

For, then, there would be the alimony.

And all the excitement and suspense—and the simply wonderful Nevada climate!

It isn't even as though another woman had "lured" him from me.

Because a husband that can be "lured away" isn't worth the rope with which he has to be tied.

And the woman who "lures" him is sometimes a delivering angel in disguise.

But this—this is different!

And I miss him so!

I miss the long, quiet, inspiring evenings when he used to read to me from Bernard Shaw or Walt Whitman,

(Or the sporting page, or "The Crazy Kids," or the stock quotations.)

And the hustle and bustle of getting him off to the office, mornings,

And the wild excitement of hunting for his shoes—and his hat and his pepsin tablets, and his safety-razor blades, and the court plaster, and his gloves, and his newspaper,

And the cosy, little, heart-to-heart, before-breakfast scraps,

And the 11 o'clock telephone calls, and the making-up, and the candy and flowers, and all that!

The house is as quiet as the dead!

But there are no flowers—and the music is lacking.

It is like living with a ghost.

Sometimes I catch a fleeting glimpse of him as he slips in, after dusk, with just enough strength to plunge wearily into bed.

Or, again, when he wakes up, at the last moment in the morning, with barely time to drop into his clothes, gulp down a cup of coffee and rush past me with a peck on the cheek and a muttered "G'by."

Sometimes, on rainy days, I hear him moving restlessly about in his room—and swearing softly.

But it is like living with a disembodied spirit!

Ah, me! If he had only gone to France, or Russia, or the Klondike—or even paradise—I might have hoped, some day, to have him back again.

But what hope is there for a wife like me?

Don't try to console me by telling me

That it is almost winter, and the wind and the snow and the frost will soon drive him back to his friends again!

What joy is there in having a husband's material body around the house

When his spiritual self is roaming the fields in the wake of a silly, little, white ball—

Twenty miles away?

What hope is there for me?

My husband—has joined a golf club!

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Mrs. Hoyt and Her Plans.

Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt, who spent the months of July and August at her summer home in the White Mountains and September in New York, has just returned to her home in Pasadena. She is already busying herself with plans for the winter season for the Los Angeles Symphony.

Miss Ruth Hoyt, who has been with her mother during the summer, will return from New York in a few days, and will give a large garden party at Hillcrest, the Hoyt home, on the afternoon of October 4, in compliment to Miss Katherine Wright, whose marriage to Mr. Charles Spencer Brown, Jr., will take place two days later. This wedding will mark the first really big society event of the autumn in the Crown City, and will be attended by many Los Angeles folk. Miss Hoyt is to be the maid of honor and Mrs. Elliott Bandini will be matron of honor. Miss Hoyt will leave shortly after the wedding for New York, where she will take up some special work at Columbia College. She will stop en route in Memphis to act as bridesmaid at the wedding of a school friend.

The garden party is to be a large affair, and a bevy of prominent Los Angeles and Pasadena girls will assist.

For Mrs. Hitt.

The visit here of Mrs. W. F. ("Billy") Hitt of Washington, D. C., has an enlivening influence on society, and several smart affairs have been given for her during her stay with Miss Louise Bourke of Berkeley Square. As Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late Senator Elkins of Virginia, Mrs. Hitt was one of the noted belles of America, and was equally as well known abroad as at home. A vivacious type of Southern beauty and charm, she was a favorite everywhere. Among her numerous admirers was the Duke de Abruzzi, who fell deeply in love with her, but the then Queen of Italy refused to sanction their marriage. The romance was kept before the public for years.

With Mrs. Hitt is Miss Celia McCallum, also of Washington, who has shared courtesies with the former noted belle.

One of the most attractive affairs arranged for the visitors was the luncheon at which Mrs. Russell McDonnell Taylor entertained at the Los Angeles Country Club on Sunday. Her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Russell I. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hook, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sidney R. Walles, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Green, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Chandler, Mrs. Mary Wilcox Longstreet, Miss Burke, Miss Katherine Strickler, Mrs. Michael J. Connell, Mrs. John Posey, Carleton Burke, Gurney Newlin, Robert Neustadt, Alfred Wilcox, Paul Hammond and Walter Van Pelt.

Mrs. John Posey also gave a luncheon for Mrs. Hitt and Miss McCallum at the California Club, later assembling her guests at a matinee to see "Broken Blossoms." Barclay-Spencer Nuptials.

In a setting of pink dahlias, combined with palms and ferns and Cathedral candles, St. John's Church was the scene of a lovely wedding on Thursday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, when Miss Lenore Barclay of Los Angeles became the bride of Ensign Thomas Spencer of Providence, R. I. The wedding ended an interesting chapter in a college romance, the couple having met at the University of California, where Ensign Spencer graduated.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Barclay, of 2932 South Normandie avenue. She graduated in June from Cumnock School of Expression. She made a charming picture in her gown of white satin. With this she wore a long tulle veil, fastened to her blonde hair with orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of bride roses.

Miss Olive Pate, a classmate at Cumnock, was her maid of honor and was frocked in shell pink georgette, with which she wore a pink tulle hat and carried a bouquet of Cecile Brunner roses. Walter Spencer of Berkeley was his brother's best man.

The wedding plans were very hurried, as Ensign Spencer had unexpectedly arrived just three days before from Panama. Wondrous New Beaded Bags from Paris

Seeking to secure for our discriminating patronage the most unusual creations available in the very popular Beaded Bags, we recently cabled our commissionnaires at 58 Rue de Faubourg, Paris, to personally select for us the very newest and most exclusive Parisian productions.

The bags are here—a limited few of them and only one of a kind. They are wondrously beautiful and definitely exclusive. The shapes, the colorings, the patterns, the mountings all express the originality and artistic conception for which French designers are so famous.

One bag is a reproduction of an old Paisley Oriental Rug. Its Silken mesh is so fine as to suggest a real Tapestry. Priced at $375.00.

Another is a reproduction of a window of the Twelfth Century, copied from the celebrated Cathedral Chartres. Priced at $210.00.

SOCIETY.

meal, they held a meeting with the genial host in the chair, and very earnestly and ably discussed the questions of the hour, and at the same time recalled many soul-stirring events of the past.

Dr. Prugh is enjoying good health after passing through a period of physical weakness. He attributes his long life in large part to this glorious California atmosphere.

He has many warm friends in Alhambra and in the regions round about.

A christening was held at the old San Gabriel Mission last week when the little 2½-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Watkins of North Monterey street, Alhambra, was christened Rose Mary. John Stevens McGrearty, author of the "Mission Play," and Miss Frances Hannon acted as godfather and godmother, Father Serano, father superior at the old mission, performed the ceremony.

After the services the guests were invited to the Watkin's home, where a delicious luncheon was served. Twenty-two dainty pink candles furnished the only light in the two rooms. Perched on the angel food cake were cunning little angels, some sitting and others flying, which were used as favors for the guests; Mr. and Mrs. McGroarty of Tia Juana, Miss Frances Hannon, Father Serano, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ward of South Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. M. Nathan, Miss Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hough, Mr. Yankie and daughter, Mispah, and Miss Claire Woodbury of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Currier of East Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Fred Dicky of East McLean street, Alhambra, entertained at her home last Sunday with a charming dinner, the honored guests being Miss Lorna Gregg, who will leave the middle of October with the Ellison-White Chautauqua Company, and Miss Ruth Morris, who also leaves sometime in October for Chicago, where she will study for the grand opera. The other guests were Miss Morris's mother, Mrs. Blimm, and Mrs. Loomis, mother of Mrs. Dicky.

GARDENA.

Mrs. Lulu Belton of Magnolia avenue returned Friday from a two months' visit to points in Iowa, visiting there two sons and a sister. In Algona, the home of her son Walter, Mrs. Dalton found a small grandson. She visited Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Belton in Des Moines, and at Sutherland spent some time with a sister, Mrs. Mary L. Wad, who was during the past winter her house guest. Mrs. Belton's neice and the latter's husband, Mr. and Mrs. Will Walton of Des Moines, accompanied Mrs. Belton on her home trip and are her house guests.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Weed enjoyed a four days' motoring trip to San Diego last week.

The Gardena Bridge Club played an evening at cards and a sumptuous midnight supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Towne last Saturday night. Sixteen members were present.

Mrs. Susie Stubblefield, District Deputy Patron of the Order of Rebekhas, visited the Nita Dena Lodge at their regular meeting last week. A fine repast was served.

Mrs. G. D. Harris of Lebanon, Or., cousin of Mrs. George Burke whom she has not seen in thirty years, arrived at Mrs. Burke's home Friday of last week, and will remain as house guest for some time. The ladies were children together in Missouri.

EAST HIGHLAND.

Mr. H. C. Rickman, formerly pastor of the East Highland Baptist Church, and who has been studying in Boston, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Benson.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bloomer have returned from a vacation at Long Beach.

Miss Esther Perry, who has been spending the summer at the Pohl ranch in Waterman Canyon, is at home again.

Mrs. Winnie Banta Poel has moved to Redlands, where her three boys will attend the High School.

Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Cadwallader and daughter, Miss Jessie, returned from a pleasant visit at the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Browning, who were recently married, were tendered a very delightful reception by Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. C. Smith. The event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley. After refreshments had been served Mr. and Mrs. Browning were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts, as well as innumerable good wishes for their future welfare.

Mrs. Louise Parker returned home Sunday from a week's visit with Mrs. W. M. Bristol at Camp Blue Jay in Bear Valley.

GLENDALE.

Chapter A. H., P.E.O., was delightfully entertained on Thursday with a picnic luncheon given by Mrs. H. P. Goodwin at Manhattan Beach, where she has spent the summer months. The party included Mmes. Barker, Hobbs, Stephenson, Davenport, Smith, Bancroft, Webster, Tuttle, Van Etten, Carmack and Wattles, with Miss Tholen and Mrs. Eames as guests of the chapter.

One of the most interesting events of the week in Glendale was the celebration, on Monday evening, of the forty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Kime at their home on West California avenue. The big living-room was charmingly decorated with old-fashioned flowers and autumn leaves; while in one corner, beneath a wedding bell entwined with asparagus ferns, were the marriage certificate and a picture of the bride and groom made on their wedding day, September 22, 1874. Mr. and Mrs. Kime were happy in having with them, besides a number of relatives and intimate friends of the family, their three daughters, Miss Zella, Mrs. W. D. McClellan, of La Verne, and Mrs. Sarah Thomas, also the latter's son, Ellis, who has recently returned from service overseas. The guests enjoyed a musical evening consisting of violin and piano numbers given by Mrs. W. A. Mulligan and daughter, Genevieve, and piano selections by Mrs. W. A. Haines. Dainty refreshments were served.

SANTA MONICA.

The Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club has announced its opening programmes of the new season of active work. Smocks!

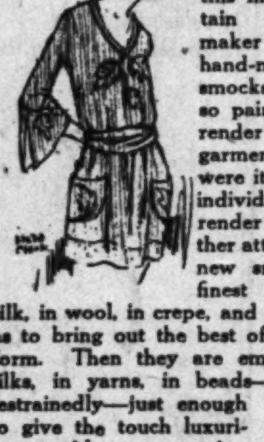
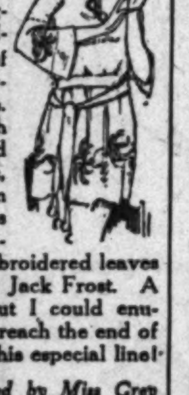
—Read what Olive Grey had to say in last Sunday's Times about the new Smocks which she found on our fourth floor.

Apotheosis of the Smock.



The smock is truly the basis of all waist attire, and having this in mind, a certain local smock maker has taken to hand-making all her smocks in a manner so painstaking as to render them truly garments de luxe, were it not for other individualistics which render them still further attractive. These new smocks are of finest materials, in silk, in wool, in crepe, and are shaped so as to bring out the best of the feminine form. Then they are embroidered, in silks, in yarns, in beads—embroidered restrainedly—just enough to give the touch luxurious, without overtrimming. One for example in a heavy silk crepe of that clear white which seems the especial prerogative of crepe, is embellished with embroidery of white angora wool, interset with crystal beads. The girdle is tipped with white angora balls, and the entire effect is chaste, elegant, almost ethereal in beauty. Another in shades of autumn brown is embellished with finely embroidered leaves in the tones imparted by Jack Frost. A smock in cluny blue—but I could enumerate for hours and not reach the end of the smock-loveliness of this especial line!



—The two models described by Miss Grey are pictured! Smocks—4th Floor—Jacoby's

SEEK TO FILM DARK AFRICA.

Daring Project Launched by Missionary.

Famous Players Financing the Enterprise.

Doings of Photoplayers in Local Filmland.

A project to invade the innermost regions of barbarous Africa for the purpose of obtaining educational films, the idea for which was originated in this city, and is now being carried out by Dr. L. J. Vandenbergh, and financed by the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, promises to yield unique and valuable results in the realm of photoplay enterprise. Dr. Vandenbergh, who as a missionary spent several years in British East Africa, in the vicinity of Lake Victoria Nyanza, sailed from New York last week for Europe, thence to go to Africa. He was accompanied by a completely equipped expedition, who will be engaged in the actual taking of the films, while Dr. Vandenbergh through his knowledge of the native tongues and tribal characteristics prepares the way.

The region which is the objective of the trip, is situated 1000 miles inland. Dr. Vandenbergh was originally engaged in missionary work in this district twenty-three years ago. At that time he had to make the trip on foot, accompanied by native baggage carriers. The time consumed was six months and eight days. Now, however, a railroad extends to within 100 miles of nearly all the territory it is sought to cover.

Dr. Vandenbergh originally interested the film producers in his enterprise on his visit to this city about a month ago. He made preliminary financial arrangements, but on arriving in New York it became necessary to enlarge the scope of these, and through Neil McCarthy, attorney for Sid Grauman and other motion picture interests, who has just returned to this city from the East, Dr. Vandenbergh was enabled to finance the transaction.

The country in which the African tribes are located, while it is very productive as to soil, is difficult to penetrate on account of its topography and the heavy growth of underbrush. It is estimated that the area in which the tribes are located is 800 by 1500 miles. Dr. Vandenbergh states that two different root tribes are distinguished—the Banta and Nelotic. These are divided into various warlike and savage tribes, some of them representing the lowest order in mankind. The trip would be fraught with the greatest danger to one unfamiliar with the native languages, which Dr. Vandenbergh mastered during his work in the settlements.

Dr. Vandenbergh belongs to the St. Joseph Order of Catholic Priesthood, founded at Mill Hill, in England, by Cardinal Vaughn. During his stay in California he took the degree of doctor of jurisprudence at the University of California.

Gale Henry Busy.

Under the direction of Herman C. Raymaker, Gale Henry last week started work on a new fun film, the title of which is "Sweet Cookie." The picture opens in an employment office. From there it shifts to a matrimonial office where a number of fair-eyed maidens have registered in hope of getting a mate. On his way to the employment office for a cook a stranger accidently gets in the office of the matrimonial agency —and then the fun starts. Miss Henry is ably supported by Eddie Baker, Hap H. Ward, Mae Allen and George Sherwood.

Writing New Lewis Story.

While Mitchell Lewis is resting after seven strenuous weeks spent in producing "The Last of His People," an Indian character play, just finished, his director, Robert Bradbury, who has completed the titling and cutting of what he claims is Lewis's best picture, is now arranging to hie himself away to his woodland cabin far up in Tejunga Canyon (provided the great forest fire now raging has not already devoured it) to write a new play to feature his star in a somewhat different type of role.

Fatty's Uncle Phil Flies.

Fatty Arbuckle's Uncle Phil had a first flight in an airplane the other day. Fatty was against it from the start but after he saw Jean Havez and Lou Anger go up and come down safely, the old gentleman declared that his nephew was too skittish, and climbed aboard.

They sailed away with Uncle Phil waving his hand. Once he essayed to look over the side and nearly lost his precious chin whiskers, after which he kept his head inside the cowl.

They returned after a time and alighted safely.

As Fatty dragged the somewhat scared Uncle Phil from the machine, the latter gasped:

"I wouldn't have missed it for a million dollars but I wouldn't give a nickle to go up again."

However, Uncle Phil says he thinks an airplane would be great on a farm.

"Just hitch a harrer onto it and by along—beat a tractor all hollow."

Picked Blossoms Herself.

Pauline Frederick is a born lover —of flowers. In her new Goldwyn picture, which William Parke is completing, nine different flower vases appear in a boudoir setting—all placed by the hands of the star herself. And it is solemnly averred at the studio that Miss Frederick actually picked the blossoms herself.

Writes of London Conditions.

David A. Morrissey, former publicity manager at the William Fox studio in this city, who left here last summer to take up similar work in London, Eng., for Fox, writes back that his duties are less congenial there because of his devotion to Southern California. The movie expatriates over in England, he says, have cause to be worried over the "eats" during the coming winter. In a letter to Miss Elinor Fair, the William Fox star, Morrissey writes:

"In addition to my publicity writing I am re-editing and retitling pictures so that the government censor will O. K. them. I am pleased to say that your pictures, Farnum's and Mix's, get by the rigid censorship without any question, but the official is strongly opposed to lurid sex plays.

"The British exhibition custom is very different from that in the States. It is called the advance booking system and a picture is not shown until several months after it is leased; therefore only one of your pictures has been shown in the theaters here. It was highly praised by the critics."

Snake an Escape Artist.

"There's a snake in your car," someone told Charles Bryant, as Mme. Nazimova's leading man was about to drive home after a day on location at Gopher Flats picturizing "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya."

Mr. Bryant looked under the car and under the hood, and finding no snake, drove on. At home his chauffeur examined the car thoroughly, going through the tool box, and looking in every part of the machinery, but no snake.

The next morning a six-footer was coiled on a bench in the garage. It was a harmless bull snake, and it was decided to keep it around the garden to drive away gophers. It was given a gopher to eat and then was locked up in the garage. But the following day it had disappeared.

Will Rogers Tells 'Em.

Will Rogers, latest satirical sparkler at the Goldwyn studio, "Since I've been in these movin' pitchers I've seen what they call temp'rament. It's th' bunk—temp'rament is only their aliby for not workin' or to get away from some'thin' they don't want to do."

Lila Lee Has Weeps.

Lila Lee, who supports Wallace Reid in his latest Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Hawthorne of the U.S.A.," had a good old-fashioned cry the other day. The cause of it all was a letter written in a childish scrawl.

"Lila Lee," the letter read. "Please send me a picture. I am 9 years old, but my mamma is helping me write this.

"I am always sick and I don't go to school. My back hurts me lots.

"My mamma teaches me herself. My papa is dead. I went to the motion-picture show once and I saw you. I hope I get your picture, please."

The little sick girl got the picture —at once—and she also received a long cheering letter from the screen star she had seen on her one trip to a motion-picture show.

Directs Drama He Acted.

Jack Dillon, who is directing Bert Lytell in "The Right of Way" for Screen Classics, Inc., was a member of the original company when Sir Gilbert Parker's novel was produced on the legitimate stage. The potographing of the story for the screen was begun this week at the Metro studios.

Mr. Dillon appeared in the New York stage production in the part of Billy Wantage, the youth who goes to the bad. This part is played by Antrim Short in the Screen Classics production.

Entertaining for Veterans.

Tom Forman, Famous Players-Lasky favorite, is arranging the programme for an entertainment to be given Monday night by the Hollywood Post of the American Legion. Among those who will appear are Houdini, and Evans Kirk and Max Fisher, musicians associated with the Cecil B. de Mille company.

A big percentage of the members of the post are actors and they have high hopes of making their chapter the finest in the country. A series of shows open to the public will be given to raise funds with which to build a clubhouse, finance a sick benefit fund and in other ways improve the post.

Wrigley Mansion Used.

Several scenes for "The Pointing Finger," Mary MacLaren's newest vehicle, were filmed in the famous Wrigley mansion in Pasadena. David Butler is again seen opposite Miss MacLaren. Other notables in the cast are Johnnie Cooke, Carl Stockdale, Lydia Knott and Charlotte Woods.

Eddie Kull is directing the picture, which was adapted by Violet Clark from "No Experience Required," a magazine story by Frank R. Adams.

Lead in Dana Film.

Pell Trenton has been engaged by Maxwell Karger, director-general, to play the leading role with Viola Dana in the Japanese fantasy, "The Willow Tree." Mr. Trenton began his professional career in 1910 with Julia Marlowe in "The Goddess of Reason," and with the exception of short flyers in stock, has kept himself consistently before the New York public since then. He considers that his greatest professional achievement prior to his engagement with Viola Dana for "The Willow Tree," was a year as a member of the repertoire company of Sir Herbert Tree, at His Majesty's Theater, London.

In the Herald Square Theater production of "Everywoman" Pell Trenton was cast as King Love. Mr. Trenton played juvenile leads in "Seven Days," "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," "Peg o' My Heart" and "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath."

He has also played juvenile leads in motion pictures with Clara Kimball Young, Mrs. Vernon Castle, Peggy Hyland, June Caprice and Frank Keenan.

Basil King at Studio.

Basil King, the author, is a daily visitor at the Goldwyn Culver City studios, where his famous novel, "The Street Called Straight," is being made as an Eminent Authors' production. Mr. King is in constant touch with the progress

Immediately Follows Other Hatton Adaptations.

"Miracle Man" and "Broken Blossoms" Continue.

The Hattons, who are pre-eminently devotees of the stage, are nevertheless entering quite prominently into the screen life, through adaptation made from their plays. "Upstairs and Down" closes today, and "Lombardi, Ltd.," opens tomorrow. Besides, their play, "The Walk-Offs," is now in process of filming. The stories of all these screen features were drawn from the stage successes.

The prosperity of the local screen world is indicated in the runs established by several features. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" will open its third week tomorrow, while the "Miracle Man" is in its fifth and closing week at the Kinema. The Griffith production has prospect for an extended run. Several other features are either holding over or enjoying a second run.

Besides "Lombardi, Ltd.," new plays include "The Egg Crate Wallop," with Charlie Ray; "The Dragon Painter," with Sessue Hayakawa; "The Wolf," with Earle Williams; "Wolves of the Night," with William Farnum; "Human Desire," Anita Stewart, star; a new Monroe Salisbury feature; "Our Better Selves," with Fannie Ward and Lew Cody. Repeats include "The Misleading Widow," starring Billie Burke, "Shanghaied," with Charlie Chaplin, and "Are You Fit to Marry?"

Dorothy Davenport will be seen in "Mothers of Men."

California.

"Lombardi, Ltd.," a seven-reel Screen Classics production of the Hattons' comedy-drama, is to open at the California Theater tomorrow. Bert Lytell is the star playing the part of Tito Lombardi, the temperamental and artistic male modiste, who is so trustful that he allows everyone to impose on him.

The heroine of the play is Alice Lake, who has graduated from comedy to drama and who is now to be starred by the Screen Classics company. Others in the company include George McDaniel, Juanita Hansen, Joseph Kilgour, Thomas Jefferson, Ann May, Vera Lewis and John Steppling. The production has many costly settings and a number of beautiful models used in the scenes in the modiste shop. The gowns they wear will interest every woman, it is said.

A "fashion show" number will be presented with the film. Girls will appear in modish costumes. The California Orchestra, under the leadership of popular Carli Elinor, will offer another "film opera" programme.

Clune's Broadway.

"The Dragon Painter," this week's attraction at Clune's Broadway, in which Sessue Hayakawa plays the part of a wild mountain lad, who paints his dreams on bits of bark and cloths, is announced as one of the few classics of the screen, because of the beauty and simplicity of the love theme.

The locale of the story is in the cherry-blossom land. Interior settings were built and especially decorated for the production by Mr. Menasco, a mural decorator, who was awarded medals at the San Francisco exposition. Exteriors were taken in Yosemite Valley and in the Japanese gardens at Coronado.

In addition to the Sessue Hayakawa feature, in which he is supported by Tsuru Aoki and Edward Peil, the programme at the Broadway theater includes the next to the last of the Houdini serial episodes.

Alhambra.

William Farnum is the star in "Wolves of the Night," opening today at the Alhambra Theater. He appears as a desperate man resolved to win back his wife and fortune from unscrupulous schemers.

In support of the star appears Louise Lovely as the feminine lead.

Short attractions complete the programme.

Victory.

Fannie Ward and Lew Cody are featured in "Our Better Selves" at the Victory this week. The story surrounds a wealthy Parisian beauty and butterfly of fashion, to whose heart leisure and contentment made the strongest appeal. Her every whim was gratified. She indulged in every luxury and vanity. Then along came a young American aristocrat, aimlessly drifting and idling in Southern Europe. The two met and loved—she rich and he almost penniless.

Then follow the answer to many vital questions of today. Does a poor man marry happiness when he marries wealth?

Even though he loves his rich wife to distraction; even though she loves him to the same degree, can there be mutual respect and admiration when fortunes are so unevenly balanced? Can two such people ever discover 'their better selves' until they have been steeled in the fires of adversity and suffering?

Symphony.

The Symphony will continue to show the sensational photoplay "Are You Fit to be Married?" which has been attracting crowded houses at every performance. Instead of presenting it to women only as during the past week, however, the picture will be shown to men only all day today and every evening during the week. At matinees women only will be admitted as heretofore. The change was made in response to the numerous requests that men be admitted to learn the strong lesson which it teaches. The lecture by Dr. Arthur H. Rollnick, which has been a feature of the showing, will be continued.

Palace.

A delicate question in chivalry is answered in Vitagraph's latest Earle Williams picture. The question is, Who has precedence in responsibility for a girl—her brother much of a dreamer, and he never finished the course.

THE REAL FACTS ABOUT THE BOOB

Against his parents' wishes he went on the stage and did the small towns up and down the coast.

FATHER FOOTED BILLS.

"It cost me more for my wardrobe and make-up than the company paid me, and my father had to foot the bills," continued Ray. "My stage career looked pretty black at that time, but I still cherished an ambition to go to New York. So I went out to the picture studios to get employment to make enough money for the trip. Then I began to like the pictures, and I stayed, and so I never yet have gotten to the Big Broadway.

"When I start work on my new contract I hope to make some of my pictures in the East. Later I also intend to go to Europe if it can be arranged, and take one picture while abroad. I don't want to stick to one type of character, or one kind of location because I think that variety is essential for the actor's self-development, as well as for his position with the public.

"Yes, I also admit that I hope some day to try the stage again, if I can secure the proper kind of play. I want something with a strong, healthy motif that will carry a message as well as entertain." And in this you have the spirit which characterizes all of Mr. Ray's present work.

Outside of reading and going to the theater, Mr. Ray's chief recreations are outdoor sports, for which he has a great penchant, but little actual time.

"I haven't had a swim this season, and nobody is keener about the sport than I am," he declared. But he goes in for handball and golf—the latter because it affords chance for rest and mediation as well as sport—and occasionally, as in "The Egg-crate Wallop," his latest picture, which is to show this week, for boxing.

WILLIAM DUNCAN ALSO DIRECTING.

William Duncan is again directing himself into serial difficulties and then directing himself out of them, at the Vitagraph studio in Hollywood. It is three months since Mr. Duncan worked within the confines of the studio lot. The variety and quality of film-thrills he sent back weekly from location at Huntington Lake, is considered by the Vitagraph Company to have been well worth the expense of keeping the Duncan Company of forty people, and as many horses, on location for that length of time. Incidentally, the trip establishes quite a record for long-time location trips.

WALLIE'S TWO NEW FILMS.

Under the direction of James Cruze, Wallace Reid, will complete the Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Hawthorne of the U.S.A." this week and very soon thereafter will begin work under the direction of Sam Wood on "Speed Carr," by J. S. Woodhouse. Wanda Hawley will again be his leading woman.

MISS EDDY'S MOTHER ILL.

Helen Jerome Eddy's mother was taken last Monday to the Thornycroft Hospital of Glendale for a minor operation. She is already on the road to rapid recovery.

WITH CORINNE GRIFFITH.

Webster Campbell will be Corinne Griffith's leading man in her next Vitagraph feature, "The Tower of Jewels." Mr. Campbell formerly was associated with Vitagraph at its Brooklyn studio, but resigned to join the army. Since his discharge he appeared in but one picture, "The Day Resurgent."

WOULD EXPAND WOMAN'S SPHERE.

The vocational aspects of play producing for women will be stressed at Cumnock School of Expression, it is announced. At least two plays are already scheduled for production during the coming year. One of these will be "Romeo and Juliet;" the other, a Greek play.

It has been planned to open the Cumnock artists' course October 22, the Zoellner Quartette presenting an instrumental programme. During the season a number of other equally-well-known artists will be presented.

Recent additions have been announced in the faculty of Cumnock school, among them being Miss Margaret Ray of Chicago, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke; Miss Mabelle C. Peck of Stanford University, Mrs. Anna Hellman Hugh of the Colorado State Teachers' College, and Marc N. Goodnow, magazine and newspaper writer.

RUSSIAN PRINCE HAS HARD TIME.

The Russian Prince, Paul Troubetskoy, tells of an incident that occurred at the Alexandria Hotel recently. He was exhibiting some photographs to a young woman.

"I recognize you in this one," she said, "but who is the other gentlemen?"

"That is Tolstoi."

"Whom?"

"Tolstoi—surely you know of him?"

"Oh, but my friend," protested the flapper, "I don't know half the men at this hotel!"

When the Prince related this anecdote to a group at the Metro studio the other day, Victor Andre, chief of the modelling shop, laughed.

"You know," he said, "the Prince call on me sometimes to chat. He came the other day, but my name slip his mind.

"'Are you Gregore?' asked the studio gateman, who expected a new laborer.

"'Gregore? Yes, I am Gregore,' said the Prince, who thought that was a good way to get inside. But the gateman was suspicious and turned him away. I hear of this, and the next day I say to the gateman:

"'That man you turned away was the famous sculptor Troubeskoy. He's a Russian Prince!'

"'He may be a prince,' say the gateman, 'but he is one big liar.'"

And at that Troubetskoy's laugh was the heartiest.

SOUSA'S CORNET VIRTUOSO.

Frank Simon, cornet virtuoso with Sousa's Band, is one of the best-known cornet soloists in this country, and has appeared in practically every city in the United States and Canada, and always to appreciative audiences. Born in Cincinnati in 1889, Mr. Simon moved to Middletown, O., where his early boyhood was spent. At the age of 7 he started to play the cornet, and became the local band leader at the age of 14—an almost unprecedented accomplishment. Five years later he was appointed cornet soloist with Kopp's Band, and then for four years was cornet soloist and assistant conductor of Weber's Prize Band. For two years he was a member of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and joined Sousa in 1914 as soloist, and assistant to Herbert Clarke. In 1918 he succeeded Mr. Clarke as principal soloist, concertmaster and assistant conductor.

HEDDA NOVA AT DEL MONTE.

Hedda Nova and her Russian wolfhound went to Del Monte last week to join the Katherine MacDonald company on location. Miss Nova will play the part of Mrs. Wemyss, a divorcee, in Miss MacDonald's third picture for the National Exhibitors, "The Turning Point," taken from "Japonette," a Robert W. Chambers novel.

MONKEY TAKES NOTES OF "SMILING BILL."

BALD HEAD STARTS NOVEL BUT STARTLING INSPECTION.

While filming some scenes at the National studios for his latest comedy, "A Much Needed Rest," under the direction of Mark Goldaine, "Smiling Bill" Parsons had a very unique but somewhat embarrasing experience with a rather unprepossessing-looking orang-outang. This Borneo trouper, although rather blase regarding most things, took a new lease in life after discovering that "Smiling Bill's" dome was nearly hairless.

After the first shock of discovery his curiosity was limitless, much to the discomfiture of the owner of the nude pate. The 'rang-'tang thespian, after first studying the miracle with the care of an honest-to-goodness phrenologist, chattered excitedly and ran to the nearest person, with a view to comparing notes.

The second object of his attentions happened to be a feminine member of "Smiling Bill" troupe. She was seated in a chair a short distance away reading, and was wholly unaware of what was suddenly about to happen. The monk approached her from the rear and in a most friendly manner proceeded to inspect her hair dress.

Perhaps her trend of thought made her unduly susceptible to hysteria and perhaps it was just natural under the circumstances. The fact remains that she gave one scream—it lasted five minutes—and beat a hasty retreat to her dressing-room. The monk, however, had satisfied his desire for knowledge and from then on looked doubtfully at Mr. Parsons. But he was entirely friendly, notwithstanding his skepticism.

MARGARITA SHOPS VIA AIRPLANE.

Margarita Fisher had some emergency shopping to do—meaning that certain apparel was needed by Miss Fisher for some 3 o'clock scenes in the studio in Santa Barbara and Miss Fisher knew nothing about it until 9 o'clock that morning. As several hundred extras were already on the set for the day's work, it was necessary that the planned scenes be taken. Miss Fisher came to the rescue with the suggestion that the studio procure an airplane for her and she would make the trip to Los Angeles, obtain the required clothing and be ready to "go on" at 3 o'clock. The suggestion was adopted, Miss Fisher's idea carried through as planned and at the stated time the star, the newly-purchased apparel and the several hundred extras were ready for the director's word "Go!"

TROUBLES OF THE CLUBMAN ACTOR.

Macey Harlem has lost all his friends. He is playing one of the leading parts in Geraldine Farrar's latest production being filmed at the Goldwyn studios under the direction of Reginald Barker. Miss Farrar is soon to go on her fall concert tour, preceding her opening at the Metropolitan Operahouse in New York City in November, so every effort is being made to finish the picture as quickly as possible.

"When I leave the studio in the evening the moon is out," says Macey Harlem, "and when I get up in the morning to go back to the studio the moon is still out. I live at the Jonathan Club in Los Angeles. Never in the history of clubdom have men left calls for 6 a.m. and the club porter hates me. When my friends ask me to go to dinner or the theater I tell them I am busy at the studio. Then they see me coming in during the wee small hours and think I'm not telling the truth. I've put aside the entire month of October for explanations."

AUBREY AS TACT-MASTER.

Some 200 film folk and fans assembled at the Jimmy Aubrey Dance at the Hollywood Woman's Club last Saturday evening. Jimmy Aubrey, of the Vitagraph, had donated a beautiful cup to be given away in a dancing contest during the evening, and when the contest was run, it developed that two couples were hopelessly tied for first place. The judges refused to make a decision, saying that it was impossible. The applause was evenly divided, and an actual count on a vote by the guests showed the same condition, many refusing to vote. It was then that Aubrey came to the front, and through his sportsmanship and generosity endeared himself to the hearts of all present. He donated two cups, one for each couple, requesting that they be named as joint winners. The winning couples were Frank Bireley and Katheryn Wendell, and Neal Kelly and Esther Smith. Practically every motion-picture studio in the city was represented at the dance.

"SEA WOLF" CAST LEAVES

George H. Melford of Famous Players-Lasky will leave Sunday night for San Francisco to start work on the production of "The Sea Wolf." With him will go Noah Beery, who is to play "Wolf" Larsen, Mabel Juliene Scott, who plays the part of Maud Brewster, the writer; Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Fred Huntley, Eddie Sutherland and other members of the cast. Fred Kley has just returned from the north, where he purchased a ferry boat and chartered a schooner for use in the picture. This story, by the late Jack London, is probably his most famous work. It has been dramatized as a full evening's play for the stage; has been done in vaudeville by Hobart Bosworth. This is the second time it has been produced for the screen. The company will be three weeks in the Bay City waters before returning to the studio to complete the interior scenes.

PLAYCRAFTERS TO MEET.

The Playcrafters will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., in room 435, Blanchard Hall. Lillian Pelee, the founder of the club, will read a four-act play, "The Spirit of the New." Rehearsals are under way for the public performance to be given the last of October, under the direction of Mary Richards Gray, chairman of production.

KEITH'S BOOKS "TOPICS."

"Topics of the Day," the novelty screen feature, which presents timely and witty paragraphs selected from the press of the world by "The Literary Digest" have been booked in all Keith vaudeville theaters in the United States. It is said that managers have found the "Topics" a good opener.

FOOTAGE HARDLY FITTED THE CASE.

Recently at a gathering of motion picture folk the subject of "shooting" too much film came up and Russell Simpson told the following story about the early days of the cinema.

It was the young acter's first picture, and had been sent to the cutting room. The director had informed him that it would be cut and ready for showing in three days. Each day for three days the actor came to the studio and paced to and fro in front of the cutting room, exhibiting much the same impatience as does the expectant father when he is waiting for the verdict, "boy or girl."

The fourth day passed and no sign of a finished picture. Unable to stand it any longer, the young actor knocked on the cutting room door and said, "Say, Buddy, how much footage have you on that picture?"

A pitiful sigh was heard, and with a small weak voice the cutter said, "What's that you say?"

The actor repeated, "I said, how much footage have you in that picture?"

"Brother," came back the still weak voice. "Brother, you're not talking to me, when you say how much footage have I got in this picture. You'll have to ask me how much mileage, before I'm listening to you."

NATIONAL GETS NEW FILM STORIES.

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation, has purchased the picture rights to three fiction works, namely, "The Kentucky Colonel," by Opie Read, "Hearts and Masks," Harold McGrath, and "Mary Minds Her Business," from the story which is now appearing in the Ladies Home Journal. He is now negotiating for the rights to one of the Broadway successes, which same will be used as a vehicle for Billie Rhodes upon the completion of the film now in the making—"Hearts and Masks." A future story for an all-star cast is also being arranged for, the one now under production being "The Kentucky Colonel," in which Francis McDonald has one of the strongest and most prominent parts.

STOCK PLAYS HOLDING OVER.

Stage Attractions are Drawing Big Crowds.

"Prince There Was" is the Road Production.

Orpheum Offers Large Bill; Singer's Midgets Back.

That the stage is booming in Los Angeles is indicated in the fact that two productions are now registering runs at local stock theaters. "Civilian Clothes" has had most unusual success that has carried it over to a fourteenth week, while "Danger," Bayard Veiller's new play, enters its third. The Community Players of Hollywood are continuing their production of four one-act plays a second week.

The big new show on the present programme is "A Prince There Was," the George Cohan musical comedy, which opens a week's engagement here tomorrow night.

The Orpheum has spread itself this week, and is offering nine acts. Pantages will have a return engagement of Singer's Midgets, while the Hippodrome and the Burbank offer variety.

Mason.

George M. Cohan's "A Prince There Was," will be the attraction at the Mason Operahouse beginning tomorrow night. It has had long runs in New York and Chicago.

The principal scene in the piece is a typical New York boardinghouse, one far from the lights of Broadway, and Cohan has managed to instill a lot of fun into this particular part of his play.

The Great White Way is not absent, however, since the main character is a Manhattan millionaire—a man not yet past the middle age, who has grown tired of an aimless life and seeks surcease from sorrow by becoming an inmate of Mrs. Prouty's boarding-house disguised as an employee of a big popular magazine. It is there he meets the poor princess—Katherine Woods, an aspiring, but unsuccessful authoress. Of course he helps her to success and eventually helps himself to her heart and all ends happily, in properly-written fairy tales.

The prince in the cast is Charles Martin, the millionaire, suffering from ennui and a past. Among the others are James Gleason, Ena Lewis Willey, Edmund Soraghan, Josephine Williams, John Bedouin, Lucille Webster, John E. Sanders, Adelaide Wilson, James Bradbury, Jr., Marie Nelson, Wilfrid Harper and Muriel Nelson.

Orpheum.

The Orpheum topline this week, on the nine-act bill, is Emma Haig, the dancer, with Jack Waldron. Miss Haig returns to finish out her engagement of a fortnight.

"The Current of Fun" is a mystery act wherein the audience laughs at the misery of others. Mme. Burnell is the electrifying woman who heads it, and she shoots the current into all who desire to be thrilled, it is stated.

Another novelty is "Mudtown Vaudeville," presented by Blanche and Jimmie Creighton. Tommy Hayden, an English character actor, and Carmen Ercelle, a violiniste, offer an act not common over here, but well known in the 'alls of London. Another importation from London is Boyce Combe, a "light" comedian, who has Burton Brown with him. The Vivians, Harry and Ada, are sharpshooters. Dulber and Dell are comedy cyclists.

"Heartland," the Emmet and Ryan fantasy, is to stay over, also "Visions of 1969," with Percy Bronson and Winnie Baldwin. The Topics of the Day, news views and the orchestral concerts will be the added features.

Hollywood Community.

The present production at the Hollywood Community Theater begins its second and final week tomorrow. It consists of four one-act plays—"The Lady with the Dagger," by Arthur Schnitzler, leading in dramatic interest. The cast includes Helen Eddy, Charles Meredith and Harold Matthews. The Florentine studio, designed by Mitchell Leisen is of rare beauty. Also by the same designer, and of especial beauty is the Japanese garden scene for "The Song of Lady Lotus Eyes." Joyce Percey, Barbara Gurney and Clark Marshall interpret the poetic lines. The Dunsany play, "Fame and the Poet," a gem of satire, is presented by Reginald Pole, Dick Morgan and Ethel Rosin Tyroler.

"The Pot Boiler," the comedy of the programme, is very diverting. The caste has Charles Meredith, Harold Matthews, Antrim Short, Edgar Hansen, Marie Denise, Nita O'Neil, Clark Marshall and Clyde McCoy.

Majestic.

"Danger," Bayard Veiller's new melodrama, will enter on its third week today, with Lewis Stone and Florence Oakley in the leading roles. The theme of the drama and its plot sequence make for popularity.

Pantages.

The new show at Pantages opening tomorrow brings Boby Henshaw and Joe Jackson. The former is an imitator of birds and musical instruments, a clever musician as well, and a comedian who has played in Broadway musical comedies; the other, Joe Jackson, as a ragged tramp specialist. These two have many friends among the moving-picture people who were formerly connected with vaudeville. Others on the bill are the Gilrain Dancers, presenting solo dances, duets, trios and full ensemble numbers. The Rialto quartette, two men and two girls, in operatic numbers, including the prison scene from "Il Trovatore;" Gaylord and Herron, representing two girls in a dressing-room quarrel, with a stage manager as mediator; The Shattucks perform juggling and club-swinging feats.

Another Harold Lloyd comedy picture will be shown.

Morosco.

"Civilian Clothes" will begin its fourteenth week today at the Morosco

The success of this play which was given its world premiere here last June continues unabated. Popular demand refused to permit the termination of the run here at the conclusion of the eleventh week, at which time it was planned to change the bill.

Hippodrome.

A young girl marries an old man—and later falls in love with his aviator son. That's a love story with certain comedy possibilities, that are utilized in "His Father's Wife," starring June Elvidge, to show at the Hippodrome beginning today. Frank Crane directed the picture. The vaudeville bill includes the Three Beauties, who sing and talk entertainingly; Jack and Pearl Hall, demonstrating rifle and pistol marksmanship; Mossman and Vance, songs and dances; Miller and King, comedians; Smith and Lawrence, "Why I Declare," a song and talk conception of their own, and the Fondelli Trio, acrobatic comedians.

Pelton's Burbank.

Commencing today, the Burbank Musical Stock Company will appear in a new musical production called "Slaves of Chinatown." Special musical numbers have been written by Edward E. Gage.

The opening scene, on board the United States transport Victory at sea, shows the various characters coming home after the big fight "over there." The second scene is Market street, San Francisco, and the third and final scene, Frisco's Chinatown and Barbary Coast.

Larry Richardson, the comedian, appears as a black private from Alabama on his way home after the fighting. He lands, broke, in the city of San Francisco, and decides to join the navy. As a colored jack tar rambling through the streets of Chinatown, Richardson is a scream. All the favorites have been given special musical numbers, and the chorus is very much in evidence.

UNFORSEEN INCOGNITO.

In the first scenes of "The Heritage of Eden," which Madlaine Traverse and George McDaniel have just finished for Fox, the hero, Ox Lanyon, being a diamond king, is spick and span and impeccably groomed. But Ox is called upon to rescue a party of his friends who have fallen into the hands of African savages, and when he comes back from the desert and the jungles his clothes are in tatters, his hair is unkempt, his once smooth face is covered with a growth of straggling beard. More than a score of darkeys are used in the picture. When one of them saw McDaniel, after the adventure, he exclaimed: "Law, Mistah Mac, ef I hadn't 'a' seen you, I wouldn't 'a' known you! You suah has changed!"

SEIGMANN NOW WITH ALLAN DWAN.

George Seigmann, who for a number of years has been prominently connected with D. W. Griffith has severed his former connections to become a member of Allan Dwan's forces. During the past Mr. Seigmann has distinguished himself a number of times both as an actor and as a director, among his portrayal being Silas Lynch, in "The Birth of a Nation," Cyrus in "Intolerance" and Van Strohm in "Hearts of the World."

When the United States entered the war Mr. Seigmann volunteered his services and was sent overseas as one of the two directors in charge of the photographic forces. He saw much of the real action of a number of the front lines, at times being within a hundred feet of the German lines. The photographic records, which he made there have never been shown in public, but are held as references by the War Department in Washington.

JOINS INCE STAFF.

Paul Schofield, former newspaper scribe from New York and way points, has been added to the scenario staff of the Ince studios. Schofield is writing original stories and continuities for the Ince stars.

STREET CLOSED FOR FILM STORM.

HUNDREDS SEE MIDNIGHT RACE THROUGH RAIN FOR MELODRAMA.

Rain pelted down all night Friday on a residential street in Los Angeles, where the motion picture company filming a Drury Lane melodrama, "The Best of Luck," for Screen Classics, Inc., photographed the pursuit of the heroine on a motorcycle through a raging thunderstorm.

The "storm" raged from Seward street to Cahuenga avenue on Lexington avenue. The distance of a fifth of a mile was roped off and patroled by police. Hundreds of spectators lined the street during the first hours of the storm, but they dispersed before morning.

A chase at night is itself a difficult thing to photograph, states Ray Smallwood, the director, but this melodrama called for a storm as well. The thriller was picturized by A. S. LeVino, under the general supervision of Maxwell Karger.

After the necessary permits had been obtained from the police and fire commissions, thirty broadside arclights were mounted on fifteen-foot platforms to illuminate the street, which is lined by English cedars. Two 140-ampere spotlights and an apparatus known as "lightning scissors" were also ready for production. Rain was supplied direct from the water mains. So great was the water pressure at those hoses that six men were required on each of the four nozzles.

Kathryn Adams, the leading lady, raced her motorcycle the length of the street through the storm twenty-four times. She was always pursued by a racing car in which were the villains, two Spanish servants who sought "the papers." In spite of her mannish attire of corduroy breeches and leather coat, Miss Adams was a much bedraggled girl before long.

AUTO RACE THRILLS.

"A Regular Feller," which is entering its third big week at the Cort, in New York, boasts a brand new mechanical effect. This is a realistic automobile race. The novelty occurs after the third act, and the illusion is effected first by a panorama of the country side for miles around, painted on a back drop. The automobiles are indicated by headlights, casting speeding illumination along two parallel roads. Then a transition shows a close-up of the smaller car, with Ernest Glendinning at the wheel, speeding to New York, along flying motion-picture scenery, including Williamsburg Bridge and Times Square. Frank D. Thomas is the evolver of this "kinetoscope" stage effect.

PLANS MODEL CUTTING ROOMS.

Billy Shea, head of the Louis B. Mayer cutting department, has returned from Chicago, where he supervised the duplication of prints for "Her Kingdom of Dreams," the current Anita Stewart production at the Ratchacker plant. He is assisting Manager William S. Sistrom in planning model cuttings rooms for the new Mayer studios at Selig Zoo. Shea, who was formerly head cutter for Douglas Fairbanks, has been assigned to the staff of Director Joseph Henaberry.

A WOMAN KNOWS, SAYS KARGER.

"It takes a woman to handle a story whose scenes are laid in a Fifth-avenue dress-making shop, and to invest the characters with the proper degree of smartness, servility, or haughtiness—according as they are mannequins, clerks or customers." This is one of the reasons given by Maxwell Karger for choosing a woman to write the script of "Lombardi, Ltd.," and he believes the result fully justifies big confidence in Jane Mathis, who adapted the Hatton play.

"Don't misunderstand me," continued Karger in speaking of his choice. "She has not made the role of Tito Lombardi himself effeminate—neither has Bert Lytell.

"But a woman can write of things feminine—and of things masculine also. She knows many men and learns their foibles and shortcomings, their little virtues. On the contrary most men have one stock idea of romance—the one they have experienced—and are tied to that one.

"As I said, it takes a woman to show a smart shop to every detail. One of Miss Mathis's suggestions to Mr. Staulcup, the technical director, was to have individual vanity boxes in each dressing room. What man would think of that?"

HAS POLITICAL THOUGHTS.

When you see the successor of Bebe Daniels as Harold Lloyd's leading lady, Mildred Davis, capering on the screen at Pantages, where the Pathe-Rolin comedies are shown, you'd hardly think she had a thought for serious politics. But she has, and the reason she is scanning the Philadelphia papers so zealously is because she is a first cousin of Congressman J. Hampton Moore, who is the Republican candidate for Mayor of the Quaker City in the current campaign. Miss Davis came to this coast from the Pennsylvania metropolis to enter pictures, and is said to be a lineal descendant of William Penn.

NEW LEADING WOMAN HERE.

Mabel Juliene Scott, a well-known and talented leading woman, engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to play leading parts opposite male stars of the organization in the west coast studios, recently arrived from the East. Miss Scott was born in Minnesota, received her education there and appeared in stock in Omaha, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Detroit, etc. Afterward she began her screen career in Edgar Lewis's productions and has played numerous society and similar parts.

STONE'S DIRECTOR GOES EAST.

As a result of his success in the two new pictures just produced independently by the comedian, Fred Stone, his director, Frank Borzage, has been signed to a long-term contract by Cosmopolitan Productions, Inc., of New York, and left for the East on Monday to assume his new duties. It is understood that the first star to come under his direction will be Marion Davies, for whom he will direct two pictures.

RETURN FROM OVERSEAS.

Irene Franklin, with Burton Green, has been recaptured for the Orpheum and is billed to come out here shortly. So is Elizabeth Brice and her overseas revue. Both these famed entertainers have spent most of the last few years abroad in the camps and trenches.

of the picture, and has frequent conferences with Director Wallace Worsley regarding the various situations in the story.

Included in the cast are Milton Sills, Lawson Butt, Naomi Childers, Charles Clary, Irene Rich and Lydia Yeamans Titus. Edward Lowe wrote the scenario.

Gladys George in New One.

Gladys George has been cast for one of the important roles in Enid Bennett's forthcoming Thomas H. Ince production of "The Woman in the Suitcase."

Woodhouse With Goldwyn.

J. S. Woodhouse recently resigned the position of director of publicity at the Thomas H. Ince studio, which he has occupied for the past year, to accept the position of director of publicity at the Goldwyn studio.

Gladys as Parisienne.

Edward J. Lesaint is producing "The Last Night," in which Gladys Brockwell is to be the central figure. In this feature, written by H. H. Van Loan, Miss Brockwell plays five different characters. The story is of Parisian society, developed during a six-months' stay of the author in the French capital about eight years ago.

Warner's New Story.

H. B. Warner, Jesse D. Hampton star, has a new vehicle from the pen of Fred Myton, entitled "A Fugitive From Matrimony." Production has been commenced.

Seena Owen is Warner's leading lady, and in the supporting cast are Adele Farrington, Christine Mayo, Lule Warrenton, Irene de Voss, Walter Perry, John Gough and Matthew Pideulph.

Gavin Young Casting.

Gavin Young, formerly with the Majestic stock company, has been engaged by Jesse D. Hampton as casting director of his Hollywood studios.

Viola Dana's Spaghetti Diet.

Poor little Viola Dana wears such an elaborate make-up for her role in "The Willow Tree" that she is perpetually trembling lest she spoil it, and have to do it over again. For luncheon she can have only spaghetti, because that is the one thing she can eat without opening her mouth very much. Wonderful Metro Harry, in sympathy, has named the dish on his menu, "Spaghetti a la Dana, a la Willow Tree."

Moreno's "Psychologic Hunch."

Antonio Moreno has a psychologic hunch—that is speaking in the modern light of mental research. A few years ago it would have been said that Mr. Moreno has a pet superstition and this fact comes as a decided shock to those who know the Vitagraph star intimately and who consider him a plain, everyday, "regular fellow" without any dominant vices or haunting hobbies.

Yes, Mr. Moreno carries a charm—in fact, two of them—one a baby's shoe and the other is a white elephant, and the star really believes that they bring him oceans of good luck.

Now then about the baby's shoe—don't get excited and allow your mind to take a fanciful flight—there is no dark secret nor shattered romance connected with this particular baby's shoe—it is a tiny gold ornament made to be used as a watch fob and the white elephant is not of the live nor fabled variety—it is a small carved ivory image. Both of these trinkets came to Mr. Moreno as presents from film fans.

Teddy Sampson Comedies.

Teddy Sampson, screen comedienne, has been secured by the Southern California Producing Company to play leads in Strand comedies. Miss Sampson was formerly featured in five-reel productions with the Triangle company, and more recently has been playing leads in comedy dramas, one of the best of recent date being with Tom Mix.

Stage Veteran in Cast.

Frank Currier is to play Alice Lake's father in "Should a Woman Tell?" according to an announcement today by Maxwell Karger, director-general of Screen Classics, Inc. Miss Lake is the fishermaid heroine of the story, a spectacular melodrama written by Finis Fox. Mr. Currier is adapted to the role of the bluff old salt, by years of experience on the Atlantic Coast, where he was recognized as one of the most skillful of amateur boat sailors.

The stage experience of Metro's famous "old man o' the movies" dates from the time he was 3 years old, when he played a child part with Edwin Forrest in "Rollo." In his youth Mr. Currier was a theater call boy and when 19 started his actual career "on the boards."

For years he played Shakespearean roles and has supported Booth, Barrett, Jefferson, Mary Anderson, Viola Allen, Margaret Anglin and Julia Marlowe. Later he appeared in character parts in such productions as "Way Down East," "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "The Merry Widow," "Egypt" and "The Deep Purple."

Mr. Currier entered the moving-picture field with Vitagraph and was with Triangle in New York for a short time, but his principal roles have been with Metro.

A Halloween Pumpkin.

A pumpkin eighteen feet in diameter will be built at Del Monte for the Halloween scene in Katherine MacDonald's picture, "The Turning Point."

The pumpkin's ingredients, a barrel of paste, six bundles of laths and big stacks of brown paper, left on the special property car Sunday night.

Madlaine Going North.

Scott Dunlap, who directs Miss Madlaine Traverse, the William Fox star, in her next production, "The Hell Ship," went to San Francisco to charter a sailing vessel on which most of the picture will be made. After his return he will organize his company and take the members to San Francisco by rail. They will embark on the vessel for Los Angeles, and their trip may take three weeks. The last of the scenes of the picture will be taken in Los Angeles.

The story Miss Traverse is to play will contain scenes of mutiny and the burning of a vessel in the South Seas.

Peggy as Shepherdess.

Peggy Hyland will begin her new picture at the Fox studios under Director Howard M. Mitchell tomorrow. It will be a comedy drama with the working title, "Auld Lang Syne." The Fox ingenue will portray a shepherdess. Miss Hyland has just finished "A Girl in Bohemia" with Mr. Mitchell.

Not Just Dental Floss.

The humorous possibilities surrounding dental practice and the ludicrous situations arising from the fear with which patients usually approach a dentist's chair, are being used as material for the latest Hank Mann Comedy now in the making under the direction of Robert Kerr with Madge Kirby playing opposite the comedian. The office and the operating-room of a prominent Los Angeles dentist is being used at night in order that the background of the comedy may be accurate.

Some weird and unusual scenes have been obtained which show the fantasies of those taking anesthetics.

Priscilla Breaks the Ice.

Priscilla Dean started work on the first special production on her new Universal contract last week. "The Virgin of Stamboul" is the title of the eight-reel feature which marks the return of this well-known star to the screen after an absence of six months. The story was written by H. H. Van Loan, and is being produced under the direction of Tod Browning.

"The Virgin of Stamboul" will cost over $250,000 to film, it is stated. The entire action of the picture takes place in Turkey, and the Universal technical department has constructed a number of big street sets and mosques for the production.

Miss Dean's supporting cast includes Wheeler Oakman, Wallace Beery, E. A. Warren and Edward Burns.

A Prophet at Home.

Hallam Cooley, who is playing in the current Mabel Normand picture, got a letter from Grand Forks, N. D., which told him that "When your pictures come here you are the only star in the screen heavens—all the rest are simply 'out' for we still love you as much as when you lived here and had a lot of freckles and everything." It is his home town.

Fox Manager Here.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, has been in Los Angeles the past week, following a special trip across the continent. It is reported his visit means signing up additional directors and stars, forecasting enlargement of the activities of the corporation on the West Coast.

The new Fox studio is in the heart of New York City, but Mr. Sheehan will arrange for additional companies at the Hollywood studio.

Before he left New York, Mr. Sheehan concluded final arrangements for Fox news, which will be issued twice each week, to include news and novelty features. He will make arrangements here for the production of novelty features for the news service.

A spectacular serial which Richard Stanton was filming at Newport, Rhode Island, on Mr. Sheehan's departure west, will be finished in Los Angeles.

Bosworth Completes Play.

Hobart Bosworth, who has just completed the filmization of the Gouverneur Morris story, "Behind the Door," at the Ince studio, under the direction of Irvin Willat, will commence next week on a new picture under the same director. This is to be an original story written by Luther E. Reed, writer of original scripts. The title is "The Oath." It is said by Mr. Bosworth and his director to be one of the most dramatic and forceful plays ever provided for the screen. Mr. Bosworth will be supported by Lloyd Hughes, the young man who plays the lead in Thomas H. Ince's big special production, "Americanism vs. Bolshevism," among others.

Ince Cutting Special Production.

Thomas H. Ince is now directing the cutting of the film for his special production, "Americanism vs. Bolshevism." The picture was taken under the direction of Fred Niblo and the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Houdini Plays Safe.

Wallace Reid has been vindicated! The Paramount-Artcraft star was called upon to do some sleight-of-hand tricks during the making of his latest picture, "Hawthorne of the U.S.A.," under the direction of James Cruze. He performed the tricks like a past master, though he never had laid any public claim to fame as a magician.

Someone suggested that Reid was not the best magician on the Lasky lot. The star admitted it, for Houdini is now at the Lasky studio, waiting to start on his second picture. But Reid added that he would doff his hat to no other Lasky magician.

Immediately a contest was arranged. Reid's rivals were Edwin Stevens, the actor who has made a reputation as an amateur magician, and Adam Hull Shirk, West Coast publicity director for Famous Players-Lasky, who formerly was a magician on the stage.

Houdini was the judge. At the finish of the contest he rendered his verdict—"a three-cornered tie."

Rushing Work at Mayer's.

William S. Sistrom, productions manager for Louis B. Mayer, and Bennie Zeidman, Mayer's personal representative on the Pacific Coast, are rushing work on the new Mayer studios at Los Angeles, in order to start screen work early in October. Director Joseph Henaberry is assisting Waldemar Young to complete the first scenario, and Art Director George Hopkins and Technical Director Robert Bennett are already busy on the settings.

This activity marks the return to the camera stage, after five months' absence, of Mildred Harris Chaplin in her starring vehicle, "The Inferior Sex," an adaptation of Frank Stayton's stage play of the same name.

The story is of the constructive class, wherein a woman demonstrates to a cynic of the opposite sex that man is not superior to woman.

No touch of "the modern woman" runs through the story; there is no insinuation that woman should assume the role of man, nor adopt a touch of masculinity. The entire theme is that men and women were created on a base of equality.

BILL DESMOND FILMING.

William Desmond is back at work again at the Jesse D. Hampton studios under the direction of Joseph J. Franz, filming an original story by Eugene B. Lewis, who is the latest addition to the scenario staff. The working title is "The Blue Bandana." Desmond is supported by Jean Acker, who is loaned by the Metro especially for this part, Russell Simpson and Frank Lanning.

"LOMBARDI" TO' MAKE DEBUT.

or her sweetheart? The film is "The Wolf," which will be shown at the Palace beginning today.

According to the picture, circumstances permitting, the task of upholding, protecting and vindicating the honor of the girl belongs to the brother. Such a situation arises when Jules Beaubien, played by Mr. Williams, takes up the gauntlet for the little half-breed Indian girl, his sister, whom he had never seen.

Annette, the girl, has been loved by Baptiste, half-breed trapper. While Baptiste is away on a hunting trip a stranger from the States arrives at the Indian village and charms the simple Indian girl into ruin.

Jules learns from his father on the latter's deathbed about his sister. He sets out to find the girl. Baptiste, returning from another region about the same time, also is headed for the Indian village. Jules finds the girl dead in the snow with an infant at her breast. Jules demands the right of vengeance.

The quest for her betrayer brings about dramatic happenings.

Tally's.

Anita Stewart will be seen at Tally's next week in her latest First National attraction, "Human Desire."

In the role of a young Italian girl, Miss Stewart gives a novel character portrayal. Spurred by a mysterious unconquerable mother instinct, the young maiden flees sanctity of her convent home and goes to America. She encounters a famous artist to whom her warm maternal nature is a golden emblem of happiness denied him by his wife, and the girl innocently accepts the realization of "Human Desire." Then comes tragic bitterness, which nearly wrecks her steadfast faith.

A special musical accompaniment is being arranged.

Grauman's.

Charles Ray comes to Grauman's tomorrow in his latest Paramount-Artcraft photoplay, "The Egg Crate Wallop." The atmosphere and locale are rural, and Colleen Moore, who played opposite Ray in "The Busher," is again his leading lady.

Supplementing this feature will be Mack Sennett's "Back to the Kitchen."

Musically, this will be Sam Fox week, the latest and most popular of that publisher's compositions being in evidence.

Grauman's Orchestra will play "Karzan" and "One Sweet Day." C. Sharpe-Minor will render "Taxi" as an organ number, and Milton Charles, during his morning organ recital, will play "Love Me."

In addition to this, Grauman's Symphony Orchestra, Arthur Kay conducting, will present as an overture Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana."

A prologue will precede the presentation of "The Egg Crate Wallop."

Two singing numbers are also on the programme.

Garrick.

Charlie Chaplin in his former success, "Shanghaied," comes to the Garrick today. It is one of Chaplin's funniest pictures. The story deals with an attempt to shanghai Charlie and his foiling of the plotters.

Another feature on the programme is "The Girl Alaska," said to be the first and only photoplay ever made on Alaskan soil. The company taking the picture spent six months in the Far North, and scenes in Alaska, both in winter and summer, are shown.

The story concerns a girl who wanders about Alaska dressed in boy's clothes. She meets with many experiences, and, of course, discovers a gold mine and falls in love. A real Alaskan glacier is shown.

Quinn's Rialto.

An interesting incident took place during the filming of "The Misleading Widow," in which Billie Burke will appear at Quinn's Rialto Theater today.

On the day that Director John S. Robertson made arrangements on behalf of Miss Burke for fifty wounded doughboys from the Greenhut Hospital, New York, to come and watch the star make exteriors for the picture, it unfortunately rained, so that no screening could be done. Miss Burke insisted on a party for the boys just the same. She had luncheon reservations made for all fifty at the Plaza Grill, and appeared there in person when the meal was under way, with tickets for all for a matinee. The soldiers cheered the comedienne to the echo, and were still singing her praises when the automobiles carrying them to the show drew up in front of the theater.

Clune's Auditorium.

"Broken Blossoms," David Wark Griffith's "orchid miracle of the screen," has attracted record crowds at every performance. The third week of the film starts tomorrow at Clune's Auditorium, and no definite time has yet been mentioned for closing the run. Mr. Griffith has been astonished by the reception given "Broken Blossoms" in Los Angeles. The film is meeting with greater comparative success here even than in Boston, New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

Much comment has been made on the acting of Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess and Donald Crisp in the production. Mr. Griffith is still receiving many letters of praise from Angelenos in all walks of life who have seen his new feature.

"The Miracle Man" will be followed by the second big picture produced at Mary Pickford's own studios. It is titled "The Hoodlum."

During the final week of "The Miracle Man" the same prologue and musical score will prevail.

She is elected by a big majority. During her term her husband, a prominent attorney, is accused of murder, is tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. Miss Davenport has full power to pardon her husband, and although besieged by her numerous friends in his behalf, she is firm in her determination to let the law take its course.

FACTS ABOUT AN INFANCY FRIEND

All of Us Use it, but a Few Know Much About Soap.

Varicolored Array in Stores Hark Back to Old Kettle.

Cheap Brands are Good Just so You Use Sufficient.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Whoever you are, you will not deny that you are a regular consumer of soap, that you have been intimately associated with soap every day of your life since early infancy, and that you ought to know something about soap.

As a matter of fact, do you know anything about it at all? Do you know what it is made of? Do you know what is a fair price for a piece of soap? Do you know what kinds of soap are injurious and what are not? Do you know what kind of soap will last a long time and what kind will wear away quickly?

The chances are you do not. The consumer almost never knows anything about the articles he buys, either as to their actual value, or as to their comparative qualities. That is one reason why he gets so regularly and thoroughly stung.

GOVERNMENT FOUND OUT.

If the United States government had bought the commodities which it used during the war in the same spirit of happy and reckless ignorance which you bring to your shopping, this nation would now be bankrupt. But the government had scientists analyse everything it bought. It found out just what was good and what was not. It also determined just what it cost to produce an article, and refused to pay more than that amount plus a fair profit. The result was that the government purchased most of its supplies for a fraction of what they cost the public, and even retailed them again through its quartermaster stores at prices less than half of those that you and I pay.

The results of many of the government studies of articles of common consumption have now been embalmed in bewildering technical reports, but out of these reports can be extracted a few facts and ideas comprehensible to the layman. Some of these facts about soap are offered here, in the belief that the general public will enjoy a little gossip about such an old and valued friend, and will perhaps be enabled to understand him a little better in the future.

It should be added that the government is not responsible for the conclusions here set forth. They are drawn by the writer from the technical facts in the reports.

VERY LITTLE POOR SOAP.

In the first place it should be said that there is very little poor soap on the American market. American manufacturers make good soap almost exclusively, and you are in little danger of getting a soap that will injure your complexion or your hair.

In the second place, it is possible to buy the very best soap for all practical purposes at five to ten cents a cake. When you pay twenty to fifty cents for a cake of soap, you are not getting any more cleansing value for your money than you are when you pay five cents.

The more expensive soap may contain a perfume which the cheaper lacks, and if this tickles your nose or your vanity enough, you may be getting your money's worth. This more expensive soap probably also comes in a fancy box or wrapper, and here again your sense of the beautiful may be delighted to fifteen cents worth.

Many of the expensive soaps are advertised to have medical value. All soap has a good deal of medical value inasmuch as soap is one of the best of disinfectants, and the medicated soap may have somewht more medical value than the non-medicated. But do not be too much impressed by the soap which is advertised to confer upon you any other boon than that of cleanliness.

ALL MADE OF SAME THINGS.

For all of these soaps are made of about the same things. The fact of the matter is that when our forefathers boiled tallow and ashes together to make soft soap, they were doing about the same thing that all soap manufacturers do today. Every soap is a combination of an oil or a fat and an alkali, which is usually either the potash the pioneers used or else soda. Most soap is simply a combination of tallow and soda boiled together, and provided both constituents are pure and clean, there is no better soap. The terrific multiplicity of form and shape and color and smell which you see in the soap showcase at the drug store is nothing more than the contents of the good old soap kettle of early days in a host of different disguises.

The superficial differences between these cakes of soap are numerous and striking, but there are only a few fundamental differences. The chief one of these is in the amount of water which the soap contains. Most toilet soap is from twenty to thirty-three per cent. water. Naturally, the more water, the less soap. And besides, the water in the soap makes it wear away more easily. A soap containing a large percentage of water will be somewhat softer than one with a small water content. To buy for economy, therefore, choose a rather hard, inexpensive soap. It will make you just as clean as any soap you can buy.

EXPENSIVE ARE MILLED.

The more expensive soaps are known as milled soaps. They are made by grinding the soap and then compressing it into cakes. The chief advantage of this process seems to be that it makes it possible to mix more perfume with the soap than can be done by merely boiling it.

Floating soap is another mystery to the average soap user. This attractive quality is given the soap by blowing it full of tiny air bubbles while it is still hot. These bubbles are invisible to the naked eye. They tend to make the soap wear away more quickly than a non-floating soap.

Transparent soaps are made in various ways, some of which tend to purify the soap, while others do not. On the whole transparency is not to be taken as an indication of purity.

The liquid soaps which you commonly find in public wash rooms are of a composition different from that of the soaps you buy in cakes. These liquid soaps are almost all made of cocoanut oil and potash instead of tallow and soda. Either sugar, alcohol or glycerol is usually added to prevent cloudiness and to keep the soap from foaming in the container. Relatively few of these soaps contain alcohol, so do not try drinking them. The glycerol rather improves the quality of the soap, but the sugar is objectionable. It is what makes so much of this liquid soap feel sticky.

ANIMAL FATS ARE PURE.

A good deal has been said about the purity and wholesomeness of soaps made from vegetable oils, and the implication has been pretty well implanted in the public mind that there is something impure about soaps made from animal fats. According to the scientists, there is nothing in this. Soaps made from cocoanut oil, olive oil and palm oil are not necessarily any more pure or effective than those made from tallow, as nearly all soaps are. Even refuse fats, which are not fit for human food, are just as good as any others for making soap provided they are properly treated. In fact, from the standpoint of national economy, the fats which are not fit to eat are just the ones that should be used in soap.

Remember, then, that an inexpensive soap is just as good as an expensive one; but whatever kind you use, use plenty.

MEXICAN PEONS LAP UP GUTTER TEQUILA.

PROLETARIAT GETS GLORIOUSLY DRUNK ON LIQUOR CONFISCATION DAY.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Aug. 16.—Though death has been the penalty pronounced by Gen. P. Elias Calles, Governor of Sonora, Mex., for the making or selling of liquors in that State, public sentiment was so strongly against the degree that, while arrests were being made in other parts of the State, in the Capitol, Hermosillo, recently liquor never was more plentiful nor cheaper since prohibition first went into effect in 1915.

Americans reaching here recently from Hermosillo said beer was being sold at $25 gold a case of sixty pints and tequila was selling at $5 a quart.

Not long ago, fifty cases of 500 bottles of tequila, seized in all parts of Sonora, were publicly destroyed. The liquor was poured into the gutter in front of the Governor's palace. Americans who witnessed the destruction said that a number of peons were on hand with cups and when the liquor was poured into the gutter scooped up enough to get riotously drunk.

During the period when the death penalty was in force until it was repealed early in July, not a single execution had taken place.

Adolfo de la Huerta, the Governor-elect, and the State Congress are reported to be prepared early in September, when they take office, to put in effect a law reopening saloons in Sonora for the sale of light wines and beer. At present there are a number of buildings in Agua Prieta, Naco and Nogales, Sonora, being remodeled for saloon purposes.

Mr. de la Huerta is said to have been approached recently by representatives of the people of the Alamos and Sahuarip districts or counties, with the petition that the manufacture and sale of mescal distilled from the maguey, a species of cactus, be permitted.

When I took some friends out to the Cawston Ostrich Farm in South Pasadena, not long ago, one of them smilingly remarked, "One of the strangest sights in America" and indeed, the well-known slogan proved to be justified as the giant birds in their semi-tropical surroundings, were an unusual sight. A guide showed us around the farm explaining the habits of the birds and giving a very interesting lecture on how they are raised and the constant care and attention given them, which has resulted in the finest ostriches in existence. Precautions against anything that would injure their growth and careful study of feeding give assurance of the wonderful quality of Cawston plumes. Visit the salesroom on the farm.

New Columbia Grafonolas—

A Trio of Words With a Wealth of Meaning

—There's the word "New"—always indicative of up-to-dateness; the word "Columbia"—which has such prominence in the talking-machine world; the word "Grafonola"—associated with voice and instrumental reproduction of an indisputably high order.

—And so when we write of the New Columbia Grafonolas that we carry in our Phonograph Salon, we feel we may speak of them with unbounded enthusiasm; they are instruments that have reached a high point of excellence, and though they may seem costly, we ask you to take into consideration their many fine qualifications—qualifications that more than offset the, seemingly, high prices.

The Non-Set Automatic Stop

—An attractive feature, which stops the motor automatically at the end of the record—no setting of devices necessary.

The Push-Button Record File

—which cleans your records, keeps them correctly filed and delivers them to you as the result of the mere pushing of the button.

And Last, the New Tone

—which seems more resonant, rounder, richer, fuller than any tone that has, heretofore, been produced by phonographs of this make.

As for the Prices

—New Columbia Grafonolas may be had from $50.00 to $250.00.

After the programme, the members and guests will repair to the patio, and celebrate the club's eleventh birthday. The Matinee Musical Club has begun a new era, carrying out the club's new policy of paying their performers and confining programmes to members of the club. As many of the club's members are musicians of international fame, arrangements have been made with the large eastern musical papers to give the club's work due recognition.

The membership committee reports many new applicants for both active and associate membership. The welfare department is being developed on a much larger scale than ever before, and it is the club's aim to not only give pleasure to many unfortunates through music, but to give them substantial aid as well. "The Autumn Tea" will be given at the home of Mrs. Franklin Harper Crawford, second vice-president of the club, 509 South Oxford avenue, Thursday afternoon, October 30.

The club is to present an opera to the public sometime in the early spring. Mr. John Hand of New York, the well-known baritone, will give a recital in February, under the auspices of the club.

Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, chairman of the drama section, has most interesting plans for the club year.

Combining presidents' day with reciprocity day resulted well for the Entre Nous Club of Boyle Heights, more than 100 persons attending the luncheon, which was followed by a programme of music. The auditorium of the Boyle Heights branch of the Public Library was converted into a banquet hall for the occasion, the president's table being in the center with twenty-one smaller tables, each seating four, surrounding the large table. A hostess presided at each table, all being beautifully set with pretty china, linens and flowers.

The programme was given by Mrs. Louis A. Stern, lyric soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Clayton J. Hinmann, and Edith Lillian Clark, pianiste, and Mrs. W. J. Fromme, reader. THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws its beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

A department of industry has been opened by the San Francisco branch of the League for Woman's Service, to find positions for women seeking paid employment. A paid secretary has been placed in charge of the new department and she is developing the placement and follows up branches as well as the enrollment. Applications for work, together with requests for workers, are pouring into the league daily. The department specializes particularly in the furnishing of highly trained women.

Unique among the plans for returned war cripples is that developed by Toronto, Can., for the care of her blind soldiers. The Queen City will shortly have the distinction of having the only blind soldiers' club in Canada. Named after Sir Arthur Pearson, the blind founder of St. Dunstan's, Pearson's Hall will be a home in every sense of the word for blinded soldiers who have no one to care for them—a place where they will be able to find a welcome retreat and enjoy the fine social atmosphere of the club.

Seventeen rooms compose the spacious residence which at present houses the club. On the lower floor are the reception room, recreation room, dining-room, kitchen and a classroom, while upstairs are twelve bedrooms and a workroom. The hangings and curtains are of chintz and the furnishings are such as are intended to give a homelike atmosphere to the club. Large, easy rockers invite the soldiers to a pleasant smoke and the companionship of an evening before a cheerful fire. In short, says the Modern Hospital, in describing the club, "nothing has been neglected which will add to the comfort of the blind soldier in letting him know that Canada aims to repay him for the sacrifice he has made."

Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President, was the hostess to 500 soldiers and sailors from the Walter Reed General Hospital and the Naval Hospital in Washington at a garden party held recently in the White House grounds. President Wilson received with the first lady of the land. War Camp Community Service workers assisted in entertaining the military guests.

The men at the party are undergoing treatment for wounds and other disabilities incident to war service. Many of them at the lawn fete were unable to walk. They were taken to the White House in trucks and ambulances, many of which were furnished by War Camp Community Service.

Open-air dormitories for service men are being maintained in New York City by War Camp Community Service. The latest one of these was opened recently on the roof of the Hotel Wellington. Hon. David H. Knott, Sheriff of New York county, and owner of the hotel, has built a special floor and bathing establishment for the dormitory, which accommodates about 500 men.

Through its workers in New York, War Camp Community Service is carrying on an active campaign to get further space in the city for its open-air sleeping places. Thousands of soldiers and sailors are in the nation's metropolis daily and the task of giving accommodations to a large percentage of them falls to the W.C.C.S.

GERMAN LEADERS POSE IN BATHING COSTUMES.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF EBERT'S EMBONPOINT GOOD SELLERS IN BERLIN SHOPS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—Photographs of Premier Ebert and Minister of Defense Noske, clad in abbreviated bathing suits, have been among the best sellers in this city and Weimar.

Noske and Ebert, while staying for the week-end at Travemuende recently, posed for press photographers who lost no time in placing the pictures on the market. It shows the republican leaders standing side by side in a foot of water. Ebert's familiar embonpoint affording striking constrast to Noske's rugged square-shouldered physique. The pose, the facial expression and the garb all reveal democratic simplicity.

The photograph with which Weimar was swamped during the time Ebert took the oath of office, prompted the conservative papers to accuse Ebert and Noske of personal proganda. The Boersenzeitung assumes that the unpleasant episode will teach both men to be less accommodating when next they are pressed by professional photographers for their pictures.

WOMEN.

It is quite customary now for Turkish women to have their shoes shined at the public stands in the streets.

It is just fifty years since the first woman was admitted to the practice of law in the United States.

The women of Mexico use fireflies as jewels. They tie them in little gauze bags and put them in their hair or clothing. Then, until they require them again, they keep them in little wire cages and feed them on scraps of sugar cane.

Most of the women in Japan smoke, the girls beginning the practice when they are about ten years of age.

Girls to the number of 6500 have replaced boys in the British post-office department.

Although totally blind, Miss Gertrude Timmer of Grand Rapids, Mich., is an expert operator on the typewriter.

A recent governmental report shows there are altogether sixty-four occupations open to women in Japan.

Four thousand women are included in the membership of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association.

Miss Hetty Goldman, daughter of Dr. Julius Goldman, of New York, has arrived in America after a tour of Serbia, Rumania, Greece and Bulgaria. She reports tremendous suffering in Rumania, with conditions in Bulgaria somewhat improved.

Women are to be admitted to the proposed degree of commerce at London University on the same terms as men. They will be eligible for the degree of Bachelor of Commerce after a normal course of three years, and will be able to proceed to the degree of Master of Commerce after practical experience of at least two years. This may mark a notable advance in the status of women in business. The chief barrier to them hitherto has been poor training, which has condemned them to remain in inferior positions. With a commercial degree, there is no reason why women should not fit themselves for the highest administrative posts, and become managing partners and directors of leading companies.

Her Natural Inquiry.

"Aw-ah, let me see," said the thin-necked gent in the rapid-fire restaurant. "You may bring me, please, a lettuce sandwich, some graham wafers and a cup of tea."

"Uh-huh," exclaimed Charmian, the waitress. "And what're ya going to eat?"—[Boston Transcript.

BRITAIN IS SPEEDING UP HER PRODUCTION.

ADVERSE BALANCE OF TRADE IS POINTED TO AS A SERIOUS SITUATION.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Confronted by what is described as perhaps the greatest industrial and trade crisis in the history of the country, the commercial leaders of Great Britain are bending every effort to speed up production, says the American Chamber of Commerce in London. One movement undertaken to head off the difficulties foreseen is an effort to induce the workers to increase production by showing them the "dangerously critical position" in which Great Britain is now placed by the balance of trade against her.

For July, the adverse balance of trade amounted to about $380,000,000, according to figures given out by the American Chamber. Imports for that month increased about $150,000,000 while exports increased only about 3,500,000.

The American Chamber points out that this discloses a serious situation and says that, while it may seem very well for Great Britain to buy from America much more than she sells to America, that is a "fool's paradise" for Americans. The Chamber explains that an excessive adverse balance against Great Britain would force down sterling exchange on New York and compel Great Britain to buy elsewhere, where the exchange is higher.

"The only way out of this," continues the statement of the American Chamber, "is for America to invest in British securities and to buy generously of British materials and goods that can be used to advantage. This would give Great Britain the wherewithal to pay for her imports from the United States until she builds up her exports to pay for them. If this is not done it is obvious that the United States' exports to Great Britain must drop off."

To induce increased production, employers are endeavoring to show their employes the need of an expansion in exports which are characterized as the "life blood of the Britsh trade."

At the same time, the American Chamber says, the government itself is being severely criticised because of national extravagance. The Times is running daily a column headed "The Road to Ruin" under which the huge outlay of government funds is analyzed and given publicity.

Almost a Boat Rocker.

"Only a fool rocks the boat."

"I suppose so," assented Mr. Growcher. "But when the boat contains a couple of guitars and an off-the-key tenor, there comes a terrible temptation."—[Washington Star.

THE STARVING GIRL.

The cost of living in Kansas City seems to have reached the point where some fathers are actually unable to get enough for their children to eat—at least, enough at meal time. Doubtless you, too, have noted the large number of children who are forced to keep body and soul together along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and again about 10 at night. A particularly sad case was seen the other afternoon on a Prospect-avenue car. A pale, wan little girl, about 16 years old, weighing not an ounce over 180 pounds, boarded the car at Twenty-seventh street. Evidently she was struggling to get an education by her own efforts, for in her lap she held a moving picture magazine. In another locality on her lap she held two paper bags, one containing about fifteen cents worth of salted peanuts, and the other, what looked to be a quarters worth of those triple armored, sugar coated almonds. As she pored over her lesson in the movie magazine she reached first in one sack and then into the other, with such precision and such synchronization of effort that her jaws never were idle, but worked on efficiently and inexorably, like a well managed concrete mixer. Tears were noted in the eyes of more than one passenger, whose heart went out to the earnest, half-starved student on the Prospect avenue car.—[Kansas City Star.

Kayser—The Knitwear that Fits Everywhere and All the Time!

—The great name "Kayser" is so well known that words concerning it are all but superfluous. Let us come quickly, then, to the new garments for fall that are now to be had. It seems logical to begin with

Union Suits

—and Kayser union suits are well worth a goodly "talk." They are curved from underarms to knees or ankles, according to their length; arms' eyes are not merely slits, for they, too, are curved to fit easily about the arms; back is sufficiently roomy without being bunchy; front is wider than back, as it should be; they have the elasticity, the "give" for which the name Kayser stands.

—Specifically, there are:

Kayser Lisle Union Suits at $2.25 & $2.50

—Low neck, sleeveless, tight-at-the-knees style, made pretty with their yokes of crochet-like lace. Sizes 36 and 38 are priced $2.25; sizes 40, 42 and 44 are $2.50.

Kayser Silk-Top Union Suits at $2.95

—These are to be had in two styles, round neck, band top and bodice top, with narrow shoulder straps; tightly-fitting knees; fully reinforced—where they should be. These come in flesh tint only

Kayser Knitted Bloomers

—come in flesh tint and in white and have elastic at waist and knees. Sizes 5 to 8 and priced $1.15.

Kayser Vests—Plain and Mercerized Lisle

—These stockings are priced $3.75 to $7.50.

Silk Stockings $1.35

—A line of full fashioned silk stockings in black only. These have slight imperfections which is the reason for the decisive lowering in price.

Silk Stockings at $1.00

—Just a broken line consisting of fancy drop stitch silk stockings in black, brown, gray, field mouse and navy. Lisle top, lisle heel and toes. While they last, $1.00 pair.

Children's Stockings 39c

—Black stockings in medium weight, fine ribbed, double soles. These are imperfect, nothing, however, that should affect the wear.

The Newest Suit Blouses

Fall Gracefully Well Below The Waistline

—and while their lines are as simple as they well could be, they are CORRECT lines, the designers of which know so well how to get effects that they are paid very tall salaries indeed.

—One blouse is of cream white crepe Georgette, in a slip-on model, rather heavily braided with white silk around neck, on the bell-shaped sleeves, at the lower edge of the center front, center back, and on the ends of the narrow sash. It is worth knowing that the braiding was done by hand.

—Price $17.50.

In a Shipment of Less Costly Suit Blouses Just Received

—are those of crepe de chine, crepe Georgette, taffeta and silk broadcloth. One pretty model is of tan crepe Georgette bound around neck and cuffs with aviation blue, the front being hand embroidered in tan and aviation blue silk. Price $10.00.

—Another of brown crepe Georgette has a round neck with a small yoke; is hand embroidered and beaded in front; cuffs are trimmed with tiny tucks and Georgette-covered buttons. Priced $15.

—Another has a tucked vestee, square neck and its pretty collar is embroidered in white; its long sleeves have tucked cuffs. To be had in tan, pink and white.

—Priced $12.50. 3rd floor.

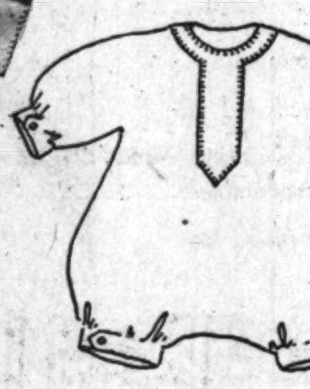
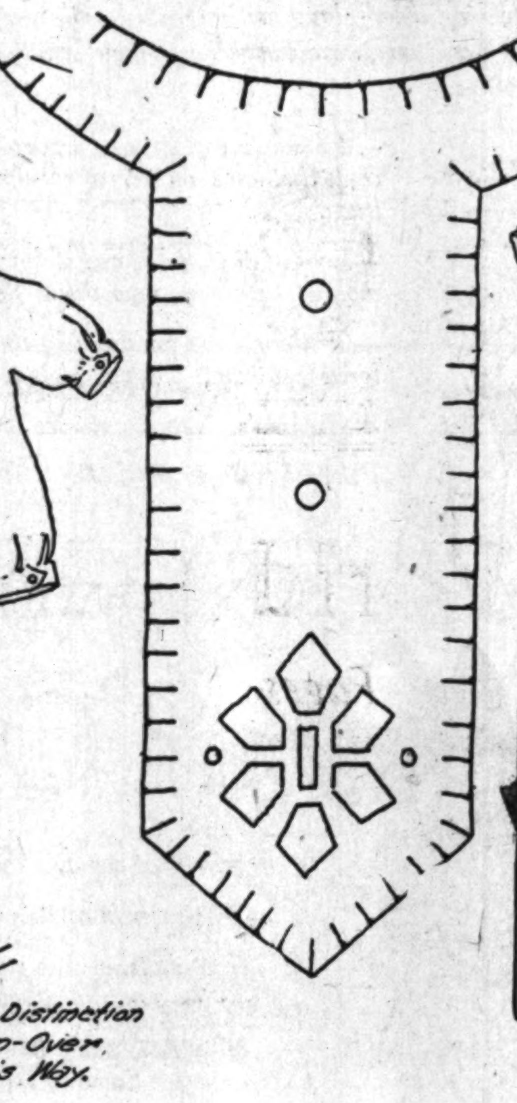
FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

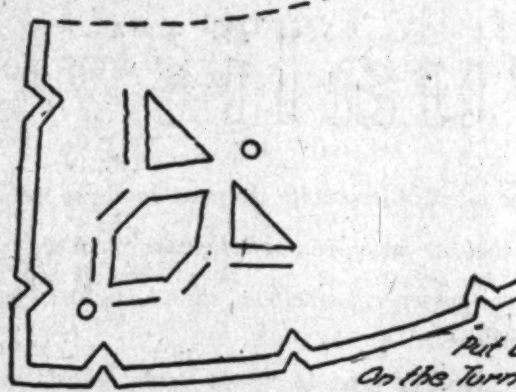
FOR THE TODDLER'S TOGS

He'll Like This Barefoot "Boy" Ornament.

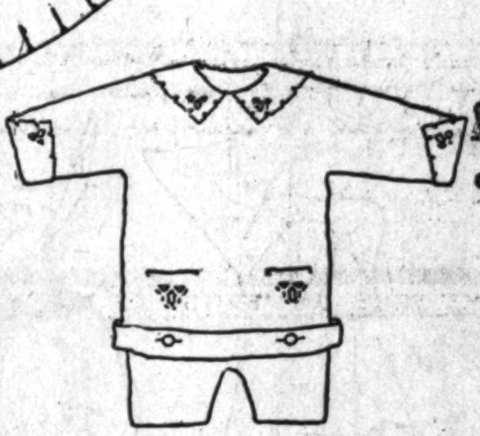




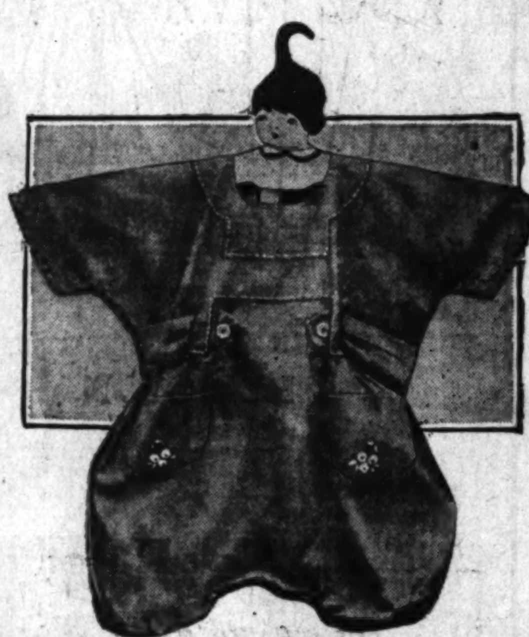
A Neck Treatment in Blanket-Stitch and Solid Work.



Put Distinction On the Turn-Over Collar, This Way.



A "Ducky" Idea for Pockets.



Straight Stitchery and Colorful Dabs of Fruit Distinguish This

ROMPERS were first designed for play clothes, but they proved so irresistibly attractive, as well as practical, that now youngsters, that is, many of them, wear rompers all the time. At any rate, little boys seem addicted to them. The way they are introduced to the aristocracy of "dress clothes" is by choosing exquisite materials and adding attractive touches like these. Fortunately, the embroidery touches of today are mere "touches," and, because they are, insure the smartness of the garment adorned.

On the little romper suit sketched the neck alone has been decorated, and, then, too, how very simply. Yet it suffices to make the little garment attractive. Around the edge the blanket stitch has been used. A conventionalized flower motif in solid work does the rest. Can you not see it in sturdy white linen? The blanket stitch would be effective in black, with the flower motif in buff of two shades outlined in black. Perhaps unbleached muslin with Dutch blue sounds more attractive. Or pongee and warm browns might tempt you even more.

The little boy's suit has collar and cuffs and two jaunty pockets, all with their bit of embroidery. Since it is used in a number of places, the design of a necessity has been kept very simple. Just a three-petalled motif, outlined with a straight stitch in the decoration, with, of course, a scallop for the collar and cuff. And, by the way, isn't that scalloping effective. Rather a bit different from the ordinary run of scallops. A brown linen suit scalloped in brown, with design in buff and brown, would be more than attractive. If the suit is white or cream-colored your petals may be rose, blue and buff, outlined in black. The scalloping may be of any of the three colors mentioned. A little gray linen suit would be an admirable foil for rose or Old blue.

Outlining little figures on the front of little rompers is a favorite way of touching them up. See the little boy fishing? On a suit of unbleached cotton, this little fellow brings joy not only to the wearer but to all who catch a glimpse of him. Again the blanket stitch is used. This time we find it as a finish for the neck and sleeves and on a seam down the sleeves.

Would you look at the little pockets that each flaunt a very dignified duck, radiant in a top hat, buttoned waistcoat and a very formal-looking duck. Wouldn't the tiny wearer be proud of him? Yet he is very easily put there, and makes these rompers doubly attractive. These, too, made of unbleached cotton. The popularity of the blanket stitch is seen again, on neck, sleeves, belt and pockets.

Blue chambray makes the next little suit and it shows a bit of solid embroidery. The neck and belt are outlined in a straight stitch with contrasting thread. The required touch of color is obtained on the pockets. Here a cluster of apples in soft rose, blue and green peep from among real green leaves. Of course that touch was not really necessary to the welfare of the suit, but it certainly has raised it above the level of the ordinary play suit.

So it is with all the cunning little rompers and play suits one sees. More often they are concocted by a mother who realizes that her needle is her best friend. A bit of unbleached muslin is quickly fashioned into rompers, which when decorated in any of the ways shown above become rompers of distinction and make your child the one who is known for his good-looking clothes.

STITCHING THAT 'EXPENSIVE' LOOK INTO YOUR DRESS

You have noticed probably that the frock you want and can't afford this season is the one with quite an elaborate lot of hand decoration on it. So you came home with an undecorated frock. Still, there is no reason why it should stay that way, when there is such a simple and effective and inexpensive way to make it otherwise. See this page next Sunday.

Spider-Web Embroidery Simple and Effective

IN THE present age, when women find so many things to take up their time and interest, and when embroidery is so popular, there comes the vital question: "To embroider or not to embroider!" They are so busy that they hardly feel right about stealing enough time painstakingly to work a design on this vest or that girdle or little Louise's frock, and yet how effective they all would be! Now one can take the time to embroider table linens, for they always are a la mode; but perhaps in a season or two embroidery will not be the popular trimming that it is now, and there you will have wasted all that time for one or two seasons! To try to buy frocks already embroidered makes one firmly determine to do without, providing one's income is only moderate.

The only solution is to do one's own embroidery, but to do it very much less elaborately than formerly. The means of using this solution is a stitch which takes little time and produces effective results. It is the spider-web stitch.

It looks very well done in wool upon the serge frock or upon a gilet, in metal thread upon the silk frock, or in heavy embroidery floss upon the little girl's frock.

Start from the center, and with a simple stitch of whatever length you prefer trace out about ten radii of an imaginary circle. Then begin at the center and weave each two of these radii together, never stitching into the material. You would draw it under one and over the opposite one; bring it around under and over the opposite one, etc. When you have finished weaving you may draw the thread as tightly as you wish to have the two long stitches (or radii) drawn together.

It may be used also for boudoir or baby pillows and carriage robes. Done upon white, with heavy pink or blue floss, it really looks very well. You can use the "spider webs" as a border or work them into designs if you prefer. If you use them upon your frock do not be modest about using a variety of colors. Everything is colorful this season. Of course, one must censor the colors with the eye of the artist.

A Useful Little Hand-Made Gift

ONE might be looking ahead just a bit and getting some Christmas gifts on the way, for the time will be here all too soon and gifts are so much less expensive and more appreciated when they are made with the giver's own capable hands.

A case full of hairpins is a gift whose usefulness need not be doubted by the most bitter Christmas-gift cynic. Make it of gray moire silk, or cretonne if you prefer it. It is twelve inches long, about six inches wide and has a pocket 3½ inches long on either end. One of these pockets is equipped with five small pockets into which go packages of invisible hairpins.

The pocket upon the other end is for bone hairpins. It should comfortably hold a half dozen. These are held in place by means of two small loops of embroidery floss, thru which each is slipped.

The middle section of the case consists of a piece of eiderdown. Into this wire hairpins are stuck, and they will remain very securely there.

Now, if you wish, you might embroider the monogram of the lucky receiver of this hairpin case upon the outside of it!

Direct From Paris

HERE is an idea which comes to you straight from Paris, and like most new things it really is not so difficult to do as the price of the suit might lead one to suppose. It is the idea which expands the price, for it is a very new one!

Here it is, and it is not a bit too early to use it right off on that new suit of yours for the coming season. Instead of the usual embroidery, make tubes of the material of which your suit is made and line them with crinoline. Cut the tubes into various lengths and, after the manner of sewing on beads, sew on the tubes into motifs of various designs. The effect is stunning to the nth degree!

KITTY SCRUBBER AND KITTY BEAN BAG!

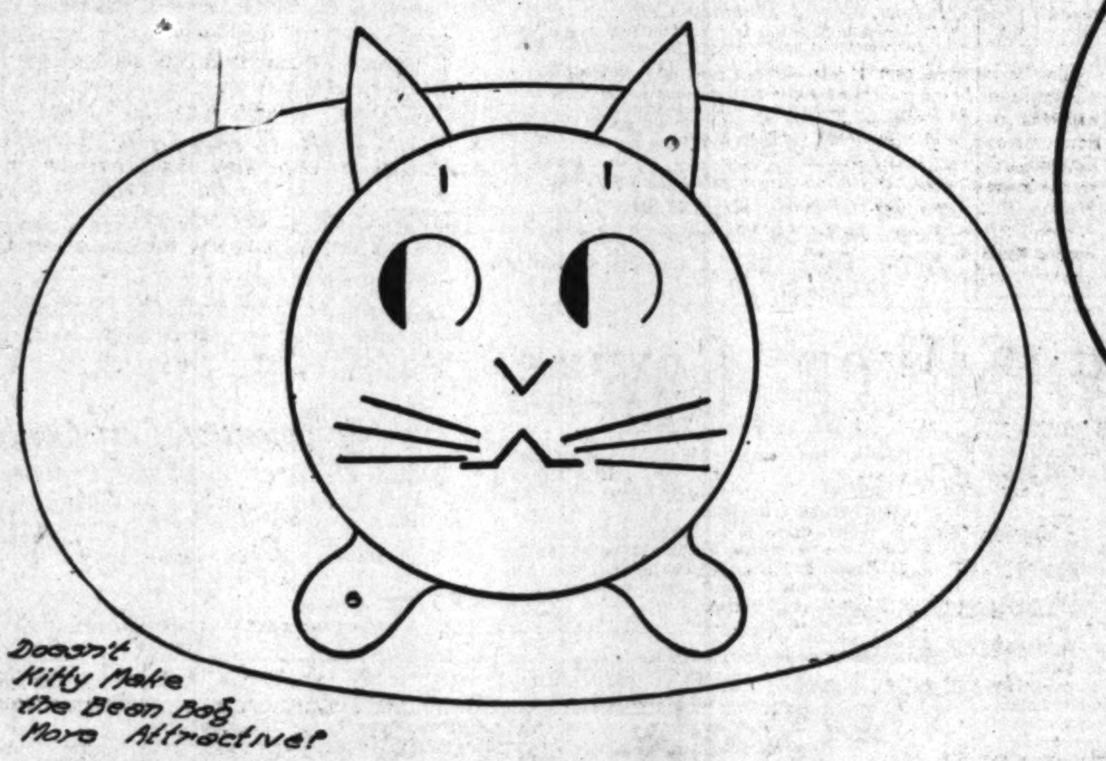
THE BEAN BAG illustrated is an attractive and practical toy for any little kiddie. The bag is made from a few scraps of Canton flannel, and, since it is washable, it is easily kept clean and "germproof"; an item which will make a strong appeal to mother.

To make the bean bag, a paper pattern must first be cut, and one can easily do this by following the outline as shown in the sketch. First cut the oval piece, and be sure to allow two little peaks at the top for kitty's ears. Next cut a round piece for kitty's face, narrowing it a little at the bottom to shape the chin. Cut a pattern for the paws and for the ears also. Now lay the pattern on the Canton flannel, and cut out the bag. Cut two of the oval pieces for the top and bottom of the body, one face, two paws, and two ears. The ears will be more attractive if made of a contrasting color. If the body is white the ears may be of gray Canton flannel, and if the body is gray make the ears pink. Put the right sides of the two pieces for the body together, and sew a seam all around, leaving about two inches open at the bottom side. Turn right side out, and baste the face in place on one side. Baste on the ears and the paws, and allow the edges to come under the edge of the face. The points of the ears must fit exactly the points on the body. Overcast the entire face to the body with small stitches; this is easily done if two fingers are slipped inside the bag thru the opening in the bottom. Embroider the features with thread of contrasting color to match the ears. The eyes may be made very lifelike if two green glass beads are used. The whiskers are made of white dental floss, or waxed thread, and must be securely fastened on the under side. Fill the bag with beans, and close up the opening.

The "kitty scrubber" shown in the illustration is a most useful and unusual gift to make for a small child or a baby. It is a wash-cloth made from bath toweling in the form of a hand mitt. The face of a kitten is worked in black darning cotton on one side, and the whole thing takes but a few minutes to make. When the hand is slipped inside the mitt with two fingers in the ears the kitten may be induced to do many antics which will delight the heart of any child. Mother, too, will appreciate the useful qualities of the "kitty scrubber," for the wash cloth is always where it is wanted—on the hand—and a finger inserted in one of the ears is ideal for reaching hidden cracks and corners.

To make the mitt a small piece of Turkish bath toweling and some black darning cotton are required. First make a paper pattern, following the outlines shown in the illustration. If the pattern is laid on the toweling so that the bottom of the mitt comes along the selvage, there will be no hemming to do at the bottom. Cut two pieces just alike, and with the right sides together sew a seam around the outer edge. Turn the mitt right side out, and embroider the face with black darning cotton. This is done in an outline stitch, with the exception of the dark part of the eyes, which is done solid with a satin stitch. One may find it easier to do the embroidering before the mitt is sewed up.

Before cutting, tho, be quite sure that the pattern will accomodate your hand. Which you can easily tell by comparing your hand with the drawing. Feminine hands differ, you know, and since it is decidedly easier to enlarge a pattern than to reduce it, this one [illegible] toward smallness for [illegible]. If, however, it happens to be [illegible] for you, follow the outline a [illegible] or more beyond the given boundary when you do your cutting.



Doesn't Kitty Make the Bean Bag More Attractive?

The opportunity of bringing into your home a modern university, for this is Dr. Eliot's famous five-foot shelf of books, as pictured above, covering

—HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY AND LETTERS.
—GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS.
—SCIENCE
—EDUCATION, DRAMA, ESSAYS
—PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION.
—PROSE, FICTION.

For Study

"It is my belief that the faithful and considerate reading of these books will give any man the essentials of a liberal education." —Charles W. Eliot.

Complete Reading Courses

The seeker of knowledge has the wise counsels of Dr. Eliot and his assistants, who have laid out complete reading courses on a wide range of subjects. The student is not only referred to the books to be read, in their proper sequence, but in every case the particular pages of each work are mentioned.

Introductions and Foot Notes

Concise and instructive introductions precede the works of the various authors. This feature doubles the value of the books to any thoughtful reader. Every page of the 21,000 pages has been carefully annotated, and explanations wherever necessary appear at the bottom of the page.

A Liberal Education

Harvard—Columbia—University of California—Northwestern University—Haverford College—University of Pennsylvania and Leland Stanford are among the colleges represented by the sixty-six authorities who have been consulted in the arrangement of what has been fitly called "A University for the People."

The Reading Courses in connection with The Five-Foot Shelf of Books offer to ambitious young men and women a marvelous opportunity for intellectual advancement.

For Pleasure

Travel with the World's Great Travelers

—The Five-Foot Shelf is a 3000-year journey compressed into the pleasure moments of a few months. The journey starts back on the Nile, hundreds of years before Christ. You float down the river's broad course with Herodotus, while he shows you the building of the pyramids and civilization just emerging from the darkness. You are with Virgil's heroes on their long wanderings; you stand with Columbus on the deck of the Santa Maria, and see the new world leap suddenly out of the West. You read his own account of the discovery. Vespucci tells you his adventures in his own words. You come down the centuries with the great travelers of all times.

See the World's Greatest Dramas

—If you are fond of the play, there are a hundred evenings of delight for you in the Five-Foot Shelf. In your own Library you have performed before you the world's greatest dramas. You see the Greek theater and in it the nine great dramas of the ancient masters. You have only to reach out your hand to bring the best that France has produced—or to live for an idle hour in Spain. The master minds who have made English drama brilliant are at your command.

Songs That Have Moved the World

—To the lover of poetry this library opens an inexhaustible mine of treasure. Here are embodied the ideals and aspirations of every civilized race, from the old folk-songs of our pagan ancestors, through the noble epics of Greece and Rome, the seductive quatrains of the Orient, to the sweet singers of the Renaissance and the melodious bards of modern days. The songs that have spurred men on to battle, and the restful rhythm that has soothed men's souls in hours of anguish, are all included in the greatest collection of poetry in existence.

For Reference

"The Index Volume is a marvel of excellence, and by it one may easily trace the best thoughts of the wisest men on all topics of vital human interest running through the ages." —Dean Evans of the Chattanooga Law School.

A Triumph of Service

Over fifty thousand dollars and a year of expert work were spent on the Index Volume of the Five-Foot Shelf. It is the only volume of its kind in existence. It contains 76,000 references and gives instant access to the things most worth while on a wide range of subjects.

A Busy Man's Friend

To the man who wants information for an address, a paper, an advertisement or an editorial, this index renders a service that cannot be computed in terms of dollars and cents. Long days of search would not bring to hand the wealth of material that can be obtained in a few minutes through this source.

A Priceless Volume

In addition to the General Index, this volume contains a complete index of first lines of all the worth-while poems and songs in the English Language. It also contains a complete chronological index. It may justly be said to perform for the average man the functions of a private secretary. As Dr. Eliot says, "It gives immediate access to any author or any subject, or indeed to any passage to which the enquirer has a good clue."

PERSHING WINS AS LADIES' MAN.

Most Wonderful Dancer in Lincoln in Early 90's.

Only a "Shave Tail" then, but Girls Liked His Step.

America's Military Genius Also Social Strategist.

BY T. R. PORTER.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 24.—All the world knows the military career of Gen. Pershing, but mighty few people know anything about his social career.

Out here in Lincoln he used to have the reputation of being the most wonderful dancer in the town. Today when the women of Pershing's "set" in Lincoln get to talking about Jack Pershing, somebody says, "And he was the most wonderful dancer of them all."

Pershing is remembered everywhere as a fighting man. In Lincoln he is remembered as a dancing man. Lincoln women remember the dances he used to attend. Lincoln men remember the dinners they had with Jack Pershing.

In the early nineties "Mr." John J. Pershing, second lieutenant, fresh from West Point, came to Lincoln as military instructor in the Nebraska State University. Later, while in Lincoln, he received his first promotion and was made Lieut. Pershing.

Lieut. Pershing was pretty general with his attentions to the girls during his Lincoln life. He enjoyed the rather uncommon privilege of being a favorite with both the young ladies and the young men of the town. He smiled his contagious smile and he bowed his chivalrous bow and he made friends all over the city. While he always attended to business first, as soon as that was out of the he was ready for social matters and affairs.

STRATEGY EARLY DEVELOPED.

The man who later was to foil the strategy of the German war lords displayed some of his cunning thirty years ago, before the Lincoln social set. A masquerade party had been planned. Great preparations were being made and great secrecy was practiced in the matter of costume identities. A few days before the party Lieut. "Jack" received a call to Chicago, which necessitated his absence from the ball.

The girls were mightily disappointed—as girls have been from the beginning of time—at the absence of an entertaining companion. And Lieut, Jack was "the most wonderful dancer."

The night of the dance came. Masked figures slipped into the hall. Many disguises were penetrated immediately. But not until the unmasking did anyone recognize the disguised figure of the popular lieutenant. The order to come to Chicago had been a ruse.

Other "girls" of those days remember a cotillion given by the Patriarch Club in the old Lansing Hall. Lieut. Pershing led the cotillion with Miss Lula Clark. The intricate figures of the dance were beautifully worked out and some of the women who were at that ball still brag about it around town. They had danced with "the most wonderful dancer in town."

CELEBRATE WITH A "STAG."

The evening following the news that he had been promoted to a first lieutenancy, Lieut. Pershing gave a "stag" party to half a dozen of his friends. During the evening, in a joke, the friends created a military company and placed Pershing at its head as captain. They then advanced him step by step until he had become general of the army of the United States and the best-known military man in the world.

But they never could get Lieut Pershing to make a speech. They often tried it in Lincoln. He simply would not make a regular speech no matter what the occasion.

"I don't like to talk to more than two men at a time—or one girl," he used to tell the boys.

When Pershing married, he came to Lincoln to have his friends and his wife get acquainted. He had been married on January 26, 1905, and was on his way West. His friends in Lincoln arranged a reception. He and his wife were to have arrived at 8 o'clock in the evening and to have continued their journey at midnight. But the train was late and arrived after 10 o'clock. They were rushed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Whedon, where they remained just one hour, visiting with nearly 200 old-time friends. Then they rushed back to the station and continued their honeymoon.

WOMEN MELT ARMOUR.

While he lived in Lincoln Pershing cultivated no man, but he always met a friendly advance halfway. The story goes that the women of the city were the first to melt his rather austere mein and know the real charm of the man beneath the rather dignified exterior. Gradually the men, too, learned to know him. But it was only gradually.

"My first impression of the man was that he was a human iceberg," says R. M. Joyce, reminiscently. But Mr. Joyce can be pardoned. He met Pershing at a party given in the home of Col. Baird of Lincoln by Miss Margaret Baird. It is understood that Mr. Joyce, to use the vernacular of the day, was "cut out" from the good graces of his hostess by the charming young officer from West Point. But the young officer, in time, also had to give way to another rival.

There are all sorts of stories in Lincoln about Pershing, but they all deal with the social side, rather than the military side of the man. And when any of the women tell a story in which Lieut. Pershing figured, they usually wind up with the expression:

"And he was the most wonderful dancer in Lincoln in those days."

THE HOST AGREED.

"You Americans are too frank; you do not look before you leap. That is why you are poor diplomats," said Lloyd George at a dinner in London recently. "In fact, your diplomacy calls to mind the conversation I once overheard between two American gentlemen at a house party. 'Beastly bore, isn't it?' said the first. 'Yes. It is anything but exciting.' 'I say old chap,' added the first, 'why not get away from the infernal place? What say if we jump into my car and take a run down to the club?' 'Sorry, dear boy, but I can't You see, I'm the host.'"—[Argonaut

There's Almost Bewitching Charm in the New

Velvet and Feather Turbans

Like These at $3.95 and $6.50

—They may look demure or mischievously jaunty depending upon the angle at which they are worn; or they may be drawn well over the forehead, just escaping the eyes, but thereby attracting additional attention to gentle glances.

—They seem to have a caressing note, too, in the tender closeness of fit.

Velvet Turbans

—are offered at a lessened price during Basement Week. Some have wee brims, that achieve a retrousse effect at the back.

ARTHUR LETTS
The Broadway Department Store
BROADWAY, FOURTH AND HILL.

The Seamstress

Don't you think it is a auful mistake for folks to try to appear what they ain't? It looks like to me that they ain't a bit of use of it.

Ma'm? Why yes'm of course you do know a whole lot of 'em. And don't you feel like atelling them that as far as you are concerned they can just stop and be natural and simple? Because it won't make no difference to you.

You will like 'em a heap better because they aren't what they are.

I know some men and some women too what want to pretend they are rich and they go and take all kinds of trouble to deceive folks and then all the thanks they get out of it is that folks just think they are silly and extravagant and aliving beyond their income.

Ma'm? Yes'm all kinds of affectation is mighty useless. Of course now—

Ma'm? Why certainly its right to affect being right if you are naturally wrong. I know what you mean. Some folks think the minute you try to improve yourself-like, that you are atrying to be something you ain't and affected.

Well, my land! Its a mercy for 'em to try, because what they naturally are is so ignorant, yes'm.

Well, when a woman wants to pretend she is rich she always gets more clothes than she needs. And she starts in to work on 'em and sets up at night and strains her eyes and runs down town to every bargain sale and buys in a fever and then rigs herself up alooking tired and bad.

Well, then she goes out somewhere and tells that she only paid two hundred dollars for it and she got the hat she wears with it (what she sat up night after night embroidering) for only fifty dollars.

Now, if you hear me, they ain't many women, specially those she wants to impress what don't know just about how much that thing costs. Because women what pay that much for a gown most ingenerally know the earmarks of 'em.

They'd have a heap more respect for her if she would just say once in a while that she made the dress herself. . . .

Well, yes'm, that's so, they would get tired hearing her say it too often. And then there's some others what would think everything was cheap she had if she told 'em, because they are some women what judge everything by the price what's paid for things.

But they's enough women with sense to approve of her doing what she can afford. These are folks what most ingenerally have got a good pull in society and so a woman stands a better chanct if she is just plain honest.

Well, my cous-rose color? Why that's mighty pretty for a little smock if you are aneeding one. You can embroider it in white wool and it will look mighty pretty with that hat you have got the rose band on. You can wear that band late on a black velour hat too if you want to.

Well, you have got a white serge skirt haven't you? Or mebbe you got a white crepe de chine one now. If you haven't you can make it easy out of two widths. If you want to have it plaited or box-plaited it will take just about three times your hip measure and then it ain't no trouble to hang it. You are bound to finish the lower edge before it is plaited anyway. So you can even it at the waist line if it needs any evening up. It is so much easier now to hang a skirt when they do it all from the belt instead of at the bottom like they used to.

A white smock worked in green is the summeriest one you can have. Yes'm.

You make a little round collar roll and finish the open sleeves too with the green georgette. You can have the smock of crepe de chine. It hangs better than Georgette when a waist has got a tail to it.

Well, I say my cousin is the kind what believes in putting her best foot fo' most. And most any time you go over there she has got her parlor furniture setting pretty just like they have it in the windows of the furniture store.

Well, and you go in the kitchen and you will see that they ain't no furniture nor cooking vessels neither much. And I reckon I ortnt to say it about my cousin, but she is foolish enough to try to make even her own kin think that she is going to buy a piano to set in the parlor. And everybody in the family knows that all she can do is to make ends meet by taking in laundry account her husband drinks a good deal away. I reckon the pore thing may have a chance to really get a piany now that the corner saloon is closed.

Well, if young girls only knew how much a real boy likes one of her kind what didn't pretend that she knew everything in the world when she has just cut her eye teeth, and every busy knows it, they wouldn't never try to take on so about liking the things what they don't know nothing about, or else they'd learn 'em. . . .

Oh law, I know, the grown women is just as bad. Most folks is bored stiff, especially if they have really got book learing, to hear ladies pretend that they like the poets and would be lonesome without 'em and that they have got to have grand opery just so often or they would perish or they must love art whether they ever met up with it or not.

The Limitations of Obesity.

"Why is it, Bob," asked George of a very stout friend, "that you fat fellows are always good natured?"

"We have to be," answered Bob. "You see, we can't either fight or run."—[Blighty, London.

MUSICAL.

NEW CONCERT PLANS.

SPREADING ACTIVITY IN THE ENSEMBLE FIELD.

Along with symphony activities this season, ensemble music organizations are coming to the fore. Already plans for an early start in this field are indicated in the announcements of concerts by several of the organizations which have previously figured prominently here. There have also been several new plans in the air, and which may be carried through before the season reaches its height.

Both the Zoellner Quartette and the Hope-Schoenefeld-Rosenfeld trio have already announced the dates for their concerts, so they are certainties. It is known that Christiaan Timmner has been contemplating the formation of a quartette or quinette, although his present association with other activities may forbid carrying this out until later in the season. The Saint-Saens Quintette is planning its season of invitational recitals for the purpose of bringing out the newer works. There has been some talk of reviving the Brahams Quintette, but nothing definite has been decided.

A series of wood wind ensemble concerts is not an unforeseen possibility, as there is a club, which would form an effective nucleus. Another unique plan is that of George Schoenefeld, lately returned from France, who intends to form a socity of ancient instruments here. Mr. Schoenefeld has made an extended study of the harpsichord, and during his recent sojourn abroad acquired several other rare old instruments in Paris.

Nothing is so firmly connected with the upbuilding of the higher taste of a community than efforts of this kind, because the compositions available for presentation represent the highest type.

Municipal Chorus Concert.

The Exposition Park municipal chorus will unite with the one from Arroyo Seco in a grand concert Tuesday evening, at Normal Hill Center. Both were organized by Joseph Dupuy last May under the auspices of the city playground department and now number about 200 well-drilled singers.

The programme will consist of a group of favorite songs. It is especially urged that all persons who have a love for chorus work attend this concert and see for themselves what can be done in a few short months of practice. The two choruses are the mucleus of the May Festival Chorus, which Dr. Dupuy is building and which he hopes will soon number 5000. A number of well-known singers will take the solo parts—Bertha Lloyd, soprano; Maud Reeves-Barnard, mezzo soprano; Laura Hoebele, contralto; Ross Stone, tenor; Lawrence Tibbett, baritone; Gerald Goldwater, basso; D. H. Silvius, accompanist.

Trinity Afternoon Concert.

Dr. Bruce Gordon Kingsley's fall series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Trinity Auditorium will commence today. An introductory programme of masterpiece numbers will be given on the grand organ by Dr. Kingsley. Dr. George Wharton James, author and traveler, will give a lecture, "How Horses and Dogs Helped us Win the War." It is illustrated by nearly 200 stereopticon pictures taken at the European battle front. Dr. James has written over forty books dealing with the Pacific southwest, its history and legends.

Philharmonic Instrumentalists.

Eighty-two resident players have now been secured for the Pholharmonic Orchestra, among them Julius Bierlich, as second concertmaster: Richard Schliewen, leader of the second violins; Christiaan Timmer, to head the viola section with Josef Rosenfeld in the second chair. Jay Plowe is first flutist.

Louis Hutinet is to head the trombone section being one of the eight men imported from the East. Mr. Hutinet, by the way, is a graduate of the Paris Conservatory of Music, a laureate; he first played in California with Walter Damrosch, having come to America from Belgium where he belonged to the Colonne Symphony. He has been a member of the Manhattan Operahouse Orchestra and later played for three years under Altschuler of the Russian Symphony.

Mr. Roithuell announces that explanatory talks, with the motifs and themes illustrated on the piano will be given in advance of each programme, thus familiarizing the lover of music as well as the trained musician with the thought expressed in the numbers. These informal talks will be open to the public, and will be one on important factors in popularizing symphonic works, which are often tabooed from the layman's mind, because they savor of highbrowism.

Opens Residence Studio.

Leo Charles Sparks, of New York City, has opened a residence studio at 1722 El Cerrito place, Hollywood for the study of voice. Mr. Sparks spent fifteen years in various parts of Europe prior to the war and was heard in Berlin, Leipzig, Florence, Halle and other musical centers in operatic work. He is accompanied by his mother with whom he will make his home.

Sam Fox,
Whose publications are to feature programmes at theaters this week. He plans opening a branch of his concern on this Coast.

Informal Musicale.

Mr. and Mrs. Amon Dorsey Cain will give an informal musicale evening, Thursday, October 2, at the Harbor apartments. Mr. and Mrs. Cain will be assisted in a musical programme by Miss Maurine Dyer of New York City, who is their guest.

De Chauvecnt Recital.

The De Chauvenet school of music will give a pupils' concert in which several teachers will also participate, at the Majestic recital hall. Misses Christena Knebel and Ester de la Vega will receive teachers' certificates. Ensemble and solo numbers will comprise the programme, to which the public is invited.

Repertoire Programmes.

Miss Margaret Goetz announces her eleventh season of five artists repertoire recitals on Saturday afternoons, at her now studio, 701 South Beacon street. The first concert will be October 4. Dr. Alexis Kall, of Petrograd, will talk on "The Heart of Russia."

Takes Charge of Dancing.

Miss Helen Van Pelt has assumed direction of the dancing department of the Westlake Art Studios School, at 624 South Alvarado. Miss Van Pelt received the greater part of her training with Mlle. Rach, who this season occupies the position of manager of the dancing at the Metropolitan Operahouse in New York City. Miss Van Pelt is well known in Los Angeles for her interpretive and classic dancing.

Ensemble Music Series.

The dates for the Hope-Rosenfeld-Alter chamber music concerts have been announced, as follows: October 16, November 13, January 15, February 19, March 25 and April 22. The concerts will take place at Blanchard Hall.

Marpis Study Club.

The Marpis Study Club, which was organized a year ago, met last Wednesday at the Synthetic School of Music. The object of the club is to promote the understanding and appreciation of music and the arts. There are ten lectures to be given by Madge Patton Sullivan, principal of the synthetic school.

Plans Another Tour.

Miss Pauline Lawrence, pianiste, who has recently returned from an eastern concert tour, is at present working with Ruth St. Denis at Eagle Rock. Miss Lawrence expects to accompany Miss St. Denis on the latter's forthcoming tour.

Weimar Studio Recital.

Miss Jessie Weimar entertained with an informal studio recital last week, honoring Mrs. Frank Tracy of Carlsbad, N. M., who has been here studying for some time. Miss Weimar gave a number of readings and Miss Louie Davidson was heard in violin numbers. This is the first of studio affairs that Miss Weimar plans to give this season.

Recital Programme.

The pupils of Miss S. Janie Bolin gave a concert and dance last Friday evening at Stone Hall. They were assisted by L. M. de Witt, steel guitar soloist; H. V. Zechiel, tenor, and J. S. Trewhella, basso.

De Averitt Pupil.

Miss Pauline Farquhar, young pianiste, and pupil of the De Averitt School for Piano, who was successful in recital here last year, will go on tour this season with a novel programme of modern compositions.

Kahn Aids Cause of Musical Art.

Otto H. Kahn, chairman of the committee in charge of the reception to the St. Cecilia Orchestra from Rome, which is to make an American tour following a gala premiere at the Metropolitan Operahouse in October, is one of the foremost patrons of music and dramatic art in the United States. His artistic associations have been with the most brilliant and successful musical organizations in the world, including the Metropolitan, of which he is the chairman of the board, Covent Garden in London, the Chicago and the Boston companies. Last year he was decorated by the French government for his interest in French art. He was the chairman of the committee which brought to the United States the Paris Conservatoire Orchestra, with Andre Messager wielding the baton, and a group of French artists which contributed largely to the success of last year as a season of musical excellence.

The associates of Mr. Kahn on the committee to receive the St. Cecilia Orchestra is an indication of the importance of the event. This group includes Frederick G. Bourne, Andre de Coppet, Henry P. Davidson, Henry C. Frick, Robert Goelet, Myron T. Herrick, Clarence H. Mackey, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Charles H. Sabin, William K. Vanderbilt, Henry Walters and George W. Wickersham.

This organization will arrive in New York early next month, and will have its first appearance at the Metropolitan Operahouse under the auspices of a committee of noted music patrons in New York banded together as the Italo-American Association for Music. This symphonic organization of eighty brilliant musicians comes here under the direct patronage of His Majesty, the King of Italy, and the Italian royal government. While it comes from the Royal Academy of Saint Cecilia, it is in no sense a Roman Catholic official organization. Indeed, its purpose is chiefly to cement still stronger the friendship of the two nations. Music has accomplished this for France, and Italy has not been slow to recognize that fact.

FARRAR TO SING THURSDAY.

The first concert of the season 1919-20 will be next Thursday evening with Geraldine Farrar as the bright, particular star. This will be her only concert in Southern California. In fact, in all of the United States she will have time for but eighteen programmes, before she starts the opera rehearsals at the Metropolitan, November 1.

Miss Farrar will be assisted by Rosita Renard, the young Chilean pianist, whose debut in New York two years ago, proved her to be one of the brilliant discoveries of the season, and Arthur Hackett, the American tenor, who has been doing such excellent singing in concert, opera and oratorio throughout the East the past three years.

Claude Gotthelf will preside at the piano. The programme numbers by Miss Farrar will include "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" (Haydn,) "For Music" (Haydn,) "Summer Fields" (Brahms,) "New Love, New Life" (Beethoven,) "In the Meadow" (Rubinstein,) "Eastern Romance" (Rimsky-Korsakow,) "In the Silent Night" (Rachmaninoff,) "The Wounded Birch" and "Snowdrop" (Gretchaninoff,) "Absence" (Berlioz.) "Au Printemps" (Gounod,) "Sans Toi" (D'Hardelot) and "Ouvre tes Yeux Bleu" (Massenet.)

Mr. Hackett's numbers will range from the lovely "Adelaide" of Beethoven to the modern American numbers among these being Cadman's "Dream Tryst." Miss Rednard has included shorter Chopin, Saint-Saens and Liszt numbers.

TWO :: NEW :: CONCERTMASTERS.

Formerly with Eastern Orchestras.

Alexander Saslavsky and Sylvain Noack.
Above, Mr. Saslavsky, who is to lead violin section of the Los Angeles Symphony. He was formerly concertmaster with Damrosch. Mr. Noack was leader of the second violins with the Boston Symphony, and assumes the first post in the Philharmonic here.

PRELIMINARY OPERA SEASON.

A preliminary season of grand opera will be sung next month at the Lexington Theater, in New York, the last operahouse built by the late Oscar Hammerstein. The roster of singers has not been announced, nor has the complete repertoire. It is known, however, that many works from the German will be sung, in the original tongue, with a counter-group of the lighter operas. Theodore Spiering is to be the leading conductor, and this is the best proof that could be offered New York music lovers that, artistically at least, the season will be worthy. Mr. Spiering conducted the New York Philharmonic Society orchestra after the late Gustav Mahler, and prior to the arrival of Josef Stransky.

PLAN CHAMBER MUSIC COURSE.

The California School of Arts announces for its faculty for the year names among the most prominent in the musical life of the city. The piano department will be conducted by May Macdonald Hope, who was with the Conservatory of Music of Kansas for three years before she went abroad to study with Carreno. Josef Rosenfeld, violinist, with Mrs. Hope, will give instruction in the study of chamber music in class as well as to individual pupils. Miss Marjorie Morrison, will do expert coaching in opera and concert repertoire. Operas are to be staged at the school auditorium.

CALLS PASADENA MOST BEAUTIFUL SPOT.

C. K. Shorter has many interesting and some unconsciously amusing things to say in the Sphere of his recent visit to our shores. One of the latter is perhaps his statement that it is well within the range of possibility that Charles Schwab will be the next president for "he alone can reconcile the conflicting claims of capital and labor, which are sure to play as great a part a year hence as they do to day" Washington will laugh gaily at his prediction that Chicago will some day be the capital of the nation. But Mr. Shorter's impressions of us are so flattering that it is ungracious to say anything unkind of him. He admits that he might fairly break out into rapture over Los Angeles and the suburbs.

"I unhesitatingly proclaim Pasadena, with its groves of oranges and other fruits, its cassia trees, its avenue of date palms, its abundance of flowers as the most beautiful spot I have ever visited. I have seen what climate can do to beautify in Spain and Tangier and the Italian Riviera, but it is all as nothing compared with Southern California. I began to realize the point of the story of one who was surprised when he entered Heaven to see men in a cage. Asking St. Peter what it meant he was met with the reply: These are Californians. If we opened the gate they would run back home. Shorter was properly impressed by our Grand Canyon, the Chicago stockyards, our clubs, one of which, in Los Angeles, he thought the finest in the world and our enormous array of ephemeral newspapers and magazines.—[New York Evening Post.]

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

secret of singing in the ge Jean de Reszke knew," eraldine Farrar, and the cele- singer-picture-star made me amazingly flexible ribs.

may be the secret of her ing twelve months a year years, and not "fall off," a woman is an opera star, and an actress to boot, I there is more than one of which may be more to the beholder than to the herself.

Farrar opens the music sea- this week in recital, after steps into her "tin palace" on tour for six weeks be- at the Metropolitan She is just now com- Goldwyn picture.

Miss Farrar's beginning was fabulously successful, and her popularity is sustained. She is still one of the biggest attractions at the Metropolitan. I asked her how she does it, taking into account her beautiful voice, her beauty and her intelligence, which are all topped by her strength of body and of character.

"Well, I never rest," she said. "I believe that a change is a good as a rest. I work twelve months a year."

And do we ever hear tales of tramps in the everlasting Adirondacks, or farming in Vermont spoken of Farrar? No. Yet almost every other prima donna farms and rows in the summertime, but I have yet to hear of such of Farrar.

"I began to study the voice when I was 12 years old. I had the invaluable assistance of Lehmann, and I made my debut when I was 18. After that I sang eight months in this country and four abroad.

"When the war come, and I could not go abroad, I could not think what to do in summer. I decided to come West and work in pictures, between seasons, until now it has become a habit, as everything else in my life."

"Habit! There is one of her secrets. With a colossal strength, and an iron determination, she has adjusted everything to her habits of work.

"Nothing can interfere with that," she went on. "I must regulate my actions with my voice always in mind. Of course, I am a slave to my voice, but that is what I must be, and after all I have the great compensation. Every morning I rise at 6:30 o'clock, and I go to bed at 9:30 o'clock.

TELLEGEN ENTERTAINS.

"Often when I am entertaining in New York I am in bed hours before my guests leave. Mr. Tellegen is a night owl, and he can look after them.

"Then, my food is prepared by a chef whom I take everywhere with me. A good stomach goes a long way toward keeping the voice fit. I go regularly to a throat specialist whom I have been to for twenty-two years, and I watch constantly for anything that may upset that tyrant throat of mine.

"I have seen singers come and go at the Metropolitan—singers with glorious voices, and I deplore the fact that they cannot last, either because of their imperfect training, or their frail characters which do not admit of the slavery and the determination which such a career demands. Of course, I love it, and how fortunate I am to be a singer rather than a virtuoso!"

"You prefer the voice then, as a medium for musical talent?"

"Of course. Do I not carry my instrument with me, and give of my actual self to my public, rather than tinkle on some instrument?"

"Oh, Miss Farrar! This is heresy, not to say blasphemy—"

LIKES RACHMANINOFF.

"Well, isn't it true? Of course, I would rather play on my own instrument. I like pianists, naturally. I like Rachmaninoff best of all. But I want to give the public music through my own self. A want to sing, and act. I love to act."

"Indeed, I think you love everything. Certainly you love life."

"Yes, I love life, but my work most of all. We haven't time for anything but work in our lives.

"I have no patience with the silly tales that are told about great singers. They're not true. A singer's life is too full of drudgery for such things to have a place.

"When you love your work, and it is second nature; when you have taken your stride and made up your mind to it, it is no longer drudgery. Even as a child I never remember a time when my work was not a pleasure."

So, there are at least a good dozen of secrets answerable for Geraldine Farrar's attainments, are there not?

Russian Composer-Pianist.

Mme. Ariadna Roumanova, Russian composer-pianist, will pass the winter in Los Angeles, where she has opened a studio at the Majestic Building, for piano students. Listening to Mme. Roumanova's English, which is only one year old, requires an ample patience, which is altogether rewarded by the presence of the young woman's ideas, and the pleasure of observing her exquisitely mobile and sensitive face. It is impossible to reproduce such quaint speech, but the meaning thereof is familiar to those who have become closely acquainted with the truly musical type, which is much the same the world over.

Coming from an artistic family of painters and musicians, Mme. Roumanova has what she calls "the flame in the soul," which, translated into our medium, means "the divine fire." She is all music.

"My mother was a piano graduate of the Moscow conservatory, my sister is a musician, and naturally I was put into the conservatory at Petrograd for piano. I never played in public—only for my friends and myself. It is strange how I began to write, for I have never studied composition. I shall begin to study soon, and until then I shall not publish any of my works, which are numerous."

The recital of the composer's beginning is an expression of what many of us have felt would be an inevitable outcome of the world war.

"My husband was sent to Japan on a diplomatic mission. I left Russia in despair at the terrible coming of the Bolsheviks. All the natural grandeur and greatness of my country filled my mind and heart when I arrived in Japan.

"Having no communication from my people distressed me, and I was homesick. Then the delicate littleness of Japan; the difference in manner and feeling, and the entire foreignness swept over me, and I felt that I must express my feeling somehow beyond simply playing.

"So I began to write.

"The first thing I composed was a concerto for two pianos—a fantasie. In that there is everything which was dear to me in Russia. I have used some themes from Moussorgsky's opera, "Boris Godunoff;" some sacred chants of my country, and even the sound of the church bells.

"To me there is in that composition something of what I suffered, and while the Americans who have heard it call it 'strong,' no Russian has heard it without weeping."

Orchestral music is what makes the strongest appeal to Mme. Roumanova, and it is that to which she expects to give the greater part of her attention ,although she has written about fifty songs. Last year she passed in San Francisco, and was requested by the San Francisco Chamber Music Society to send them something.

"I have sent them a Ballade Quartette, which they will play, and I have another string quartette which the Zoellners will play, here, I think," she said.

Of the type of music to which hers belongs, she says: "I am not what you call of the modern school of Russia. I am too healthy."

Mme. Roumanova came to California a year ago, and has played one programme of her own compositions entirely. She will probably play in recital here this winter, and also she plans a concert with Gregor Chernlavsky, violinist.

Babel on the Rhine.

The confusion of tongues that the war has caused is hit off in the following conversation reported in an exchange: "When two Americans meet on the streets of any Rhineland town, this dialogue results: 'Bon jour, Buddy. Where were you gestern abend?' 'Last evening? Why, I was schlafen.' 'Schlafen nix!' 'I hope to step in your mess kit if I wasn't schlafen. Where were you?' 'Schokolade party, and s-o-m-e time, take it from me. Three frauleins—swell janes—beaucoup cognac, and piano spielen. Krank head dies' morgen.' "—[Outlook.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS—
WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 360 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert.

MRS. F. A. SCOTT,
Suite 407 Bumiller Bldg.,
430 S. Broadway.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR—

I stand back of my work and guarantee any hair treated by me will be permanently destroyed, leaving no scars.

THE ART OF SINGING.
Save this advertisement.

Voice culture is an asset that cannot be overestimated from a health standpoint alone. The deep breathing required makes red blood, quiets the nerves, and gives correct poise to the body. It requires only little intelligent study, time and money to equip you to take your place as a singing artist. By learning to use your breath correctly you will be greatly gratified at the interest your audience will take in your singing. Your voice will be heard farther, the tones will be sweeter, and you will not fatigue, but will enjoy the singing as much as your friends.

SIGHT SINGING.

It is sad but nevertheless true, that many young people spend years of time and purses of money in trying to learn to sing and then wake up to find that they are failures as singers. The principal reason is that they have failed to learn the simpler elements of music. A great many of this class of students care little for the music before them, whether it is written in major or minor key, so long as they can have someone teach them the song they seem to be perfectly content. This is a great mistake, which militates against their getting anywhere musically.

There is no church committee or band of singers who would for one minute employ a vocalist who could not read his or her score, independent of any instrument.

The class meets at 8 o'clock Thursday evenings. Visitors welcome. Tuition to members, 50 cents per class lesson.

We have sight singing classes for the benefit of our students of singing, which others may attend for a nominal fee. The class meets once per week, where the subject is thoroughly learned and practiced. Come and talk it over. You will not regret it, and it may mean much to you.

HAVE YOU EVER THOUGHT OF THE POSSIbilities and advantages you might have if you could only speak Spanish? Think of the big concerns in America soliciting Spanish correspondents and traveling agents; think of the United States positions in postoffices, courts and diplomatic missions, and think that fifty lessons and a very small amount of money and time will open wide the gates to Mexico, Central and South America, Cuba, Porto Rico and Phillippines, the coming countries.

Don't you think you ought to consult with me on a matter that might change the course of your life as it has done for thousands of my pupils during the nineteen years I have taught Spanish in Southern California? 22 of my pupils are teaching Spanish in public schools. WANTED—AFTER SERVING ON THE STAFF OF a large firm of public accountants for several years, preceded by a liberal technical education, the writer has established a small private practice as public accountant. As yet this practice does not occupy all available time.

Experience shows that there exists many instances where the services of a reliable and competent accountant are needed, chiefly for analysis of the month's operations and for frequent advice and consultation. The greater volume of recording can usually be done by less skilled employees.

Under such an arrangement the highly trained accountant can be of greater service to his client than if burdened with considerable routine work. Also, his faculties are kept alert from his daily association with many businesses and their different forms of management, policies, etc.

This arrangement is highly satisfactory with the writer's clients, giving them better service at less cost. An interview is requested. Address S, box 456, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

We offer the following exceptional bargains in good, dependable used cars. They are all standard makes and have all been put in A1 shape throughout. We know that it will pay you to see these cars before buying and can arrange the very best of terms on any of them.

1919 SAXON, the very same model that we are now selling new and can hardly be told from new, either in running or appearance. For economy, flexibility and cost of operation you can't beat a Saxon.

SAXON FOUR ROADSTER, one of these thirty miles to the gallon cars that are so hard to get. This is the latest model and is in exceptionally good shape throughout.

1917 MITCHELL SIX TOURING. This is one of the high priced models and is as good a family car as any one could want. It looks and runs as nearly like new as possible, and at our price is a big saving over the new car.

Goats, Milch, Etc.

FOR SALE—BREED YOUR DOES TO HOLLY Lodge Shingle or Foshoda, because they are the Nubians that produce the highest class milkers known. The greatest milker known to Americans was Bonsi Tollosa. She gave nine quarts a day. The sweetest milk, also the richest known, is produced by Nubian does. Again, the most beautiful of all domestic animals is the Nubian doe and the most affectionate of all farm animals are the Nubian bucks, does and kids. The most sought after at the highest prices is the Nubian dairy goat. The most delicate flavored butter is made from the milk of Nubians. Some goat dairies sell it at $1 per pound. There is every reason why you should mate your does to the choicest Nubian bucks known. Foshoda's daughters will come to milking age within the next few months. They are very promising specimens. Foshoda's sire was out of Bonsi Tollosa, the nine-quart doe. No buck possesses such grand blood lines nor individuality in so high a degree. Investigate the Nubian. Send 50c to me for "Pleasure and Profit in Goat Keeping," by Lownsbury, and 25c for my 20-page booklet. DR. BURTON C. PLATT, R. D. 1, Box 216, Los Angeles. ASK VOLUNTEERS TO GIVE BLOOD.

Men Sought at Hospital to Save Young Woman's Life After Operation.

More young men volunteers are asked to come forward to give a quantity of their blood in an effort to save the life of Miss Kathleen Evington, 27 years old, of 1138 Valencia street, who is hovering between life and death at the County Hospital. One volunteer gave his blood on Friday, and yesterday one of the hospital physicians submitted to the transfusion operation.

Miss Evington has, as the result of several surgical operations, lost a large quantity of blood and, unless young men come forward and give their blood, the physicians fear that the young woman will not recover. A number of volunteers have called at the hospital, but nearly all were too far advanced in years for the operation.

G.A.R. VETERAN DIES.

Dr. Price was First President of the Medical Association Here.

Funeral services for Dr. M. F. Price, 85 years old, who died at his home 1702 South Bonnie Brae, Thursday night, will be held from the undertaking parlors of Booth and Boylson, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be in Evergreen Cemetery.

Dr. Price was well-known in this city where he has resided for the past thirty-five years. He was a member of the G.A.R., Loyal Legion and Knights of Pythias. He was the first president of the Southern California Medical Association, and was subsequently chosen head of the society several times.

During the Civil War Dr. Price served as a surgeon in the First Pennsylvania Light Artillery. He was in several important battles, principally, Gettysburgh and Antietam. For gallantry in action he was made a major. He is survived by his widow, one son and one daughter all of whom reside in this city.

OBJECTS TO CLUB VISITS.

Mrs. Fannie May Horsewood claims in a suit for separate maintenance, filed yesterday, that her husband, William Horsewood, a carpenter foreman, returned from a suburban club under the influence of liquor. According to the complaint he passed more than one evening at the club. Mrs. Horsewood asks for an allowance of $125 a month for herself and three children.

A group of recently took over an old in the Pelham Park section city, divided it into 264 lots, them for whatever prices would bring, and now propose finance building operations lot buyers. In advance of lot sale, these realtors had a model bungalow of six which cost $2500. It was attractively designed and built of first-grade materials. This they offer to duplicate at the same price.

The object of these realtors—who are not posing as "philanthropists" or public "benefactors," but have entered the building field at a time when the clamor for homes is loud with the thought of making a reasonable profit for themselves—is to bring home ownership within the reach of persons paying from $300 to $600 a year in rent. A thing worthy of public commendation is being done there—why not here?

Working in Earnest.

Out at Ascot Park, where the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company is building its immense plant, work is going ahead swiftly and satisfactorily, according to the company heads. Prospect is that by the time of the arrival of F. A. Seiberling, president of the Goodyear company, who is expected here some time this month, the great rubber tire plant will have taken definite form. By November, unless something unforeseen prevents, the first unit of the plant will be ready for its machinery. After that it will be merely a matter of a brief time before the factory is throbbing with activity and counted as a part of Southern California's expanding industrial life.

Then will follow quickly the cotton plant—twin enterprises that call for a building investment of some $6,000,000. Later the homes for workmen—800 of these for a starter—will rise, and the same forces and conditions that today make Akron a fine example of commercial stability and exceptional thrift will be working for our local betterment and Southern California's general prosperity.

Certainly the Goodyear executive forces have shown themselves to be men of vision as well as action, and these qualities are not to be despised when constructive minds look to them as a likely panacea for the evil of unrest. Los Angeles has Mr. Seiberling's word that his chief effort will be directed toward making this new "rubber capital" free from discontent and unrest—a model of independent, class-free enterprise. The next few months, as is generally believed, will see changes take place in this city's industrial field—through the operation of the Goodyear and similar great works—that a few years back were given credence only in promoters' dreams.

AT WALNUT PARK.

Victor Girard, realty broker, reports the sale of a building site on Flower street, Walnut Park, to Mrs. J. C. Chase of Denver, Col., who plans the erection of a home to cost $7000. The plans were prepared by Pierpont and Walter Davis. Several homes of similar design will be erected at Walnut Park in the near future, according to Mr. Girard.

ARCHITECTS BUSY WITH MANY JOBS.

BUILDING OF ALL KINDS GOING RAPIDLY AHEAD, THEY SAY.

Building operations are going forward on a healthy basis, according to local architects, although it is contended that house building has not yet reached that point where the supply is abreast of the demand. Although the September record of building permits shows general operations to be on the increase, architects believe the high point of operations will not be reached until some time next year. Aside from several larger construction jobs under way and contemplated in the near future, the progress of house building is forward throughout the city. Among the numerous new operations reported by architects are the following:

John C. Austin is preparing plans for an addition to be erected to a packing house at San Fernando for the Stewart Fruit Company; John J. Frauenfelder is preparing plans for a two-story frame and plaster residence to be erected on Holly drive, near Sunset boulevard, for Otto Baldin to cost about $20,000; Oliver P. Dennis has prepared plans for a brick garage addition to be erected at 1734 Highland avenue for James E. Bell; C. C. Rittenhouse is preparing plans for a brick commercial garage to be erected at 1140 South Figueroa street for H. S. Miller.

J. J. Frauenfelder is preparing plans for a frame and plaster residence to be erected at Fairfield and Cahuenga avenues for D. H. Miller; John M. Cooper is preparing plans for a brick commercial garage to be erected at the northwest corner of Tenth and Flower streets for Mark G. Jones; H. P. FRUIT LANDS SELL.

Report of Numerous Transactions in Porterville District.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 27.—Recent property sales in this vicinity include deciduous fruit lands, vineyards and citrus groves. Miss Florence Schmidt of Pasadena has sold 160 acres in the Poplar district to W. A. Hawley of San Francisco. G. W. Osterhout, formerly of Dinuba, has purchased 480 acres from R. J. Wood in the same district. He will set the tract to vines next spring. Paul C. McAbee, formerly of Glendale, has bought 80 acres from Mrs. L. Curry of Tulare, and another tract near by from J. W. Bryant. He will plant both tracts in peaches. Edward Moench of Fort Dodge, Iowa, has bought from E. H. Stong the latter's grove on Deer Creek containing twenty-five acres of young navels and five acres of grapefruit, for $35,000.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Stecker of Universal City have purchased forty acres in the Grand View Heights section, while S. I. Bradrick has acquired an eight-acre navel grove here from J. I. Coudray. S. J. Pfrimmer has sold his ten-acre orange grove in El Mirador to George Leiser. J. M. Deason of Fresno has purchased from H. B. Morse of Los Angeles a tract of 160 acres of alfalfa land, and also forty acres adjoining from Walter Raley of San Jose. E. W. and Willis Burson have bought from Dr. Arthur Paul a tract of 120 acres, while E. L. Sworder has sold 190 acres of general farm land in the Kelsey tract to F. H. Wilson and T. B. Floyd of Dinuba for $44,000.

NEW FACTORY.

Electrical Company Acquires Site for a New Home.

The Electrical Products Corporation, manufacturers of electrical signs, has purchased from F. Goehring, property on the south side of West Sixteenth street, east of Burlington avenue, and will erect there a building for its occupancy to cost approximately $30,000. Architect Frank L. Stiff is preparing the plans.

The new structure, of brick and reinforced concrete, will have a frontage of 105 feet on Sixteenth street by a depth of 168 feet. A portion of the building will be for offices and the rest will be for factory purposes. This company, now at 941 West Sixteenth street, has extended its business to Hawaii, Australia and Latin-American countries.

FOR LODGE ROOMS.

Native Sons Lease Quarters Once Occupied by University Club.

W. W. Mines & Co., through E. W. Ross of the firm's sales and leasing department, reports leasing the building at 349-51 South Hill street, once occupied by the University Club, to the Native Sons of the Golden West. The lease was made for Gilbert S. Wright. The two upper floors will be remodeled into club and lodge rooms.

The same firm reports leasing the storeroom at 649 South Hope street for the L. Harris Realty Company to Miss Florence Osler, of the Osler-Racine Tire Company. The store will be converted into a tearoom.

NOVEL WAY TO UTILIZE SPACE.

Merchants Finding New Uses for Lower Floor.

"Downstairs Stores" to Relieve Shop Congestion.

Dyas Company to Open Unique Service Plan.

Los Angeles retail merchants are manifesting a keen interest in the problem of utilizing the basement space in their buildings to the best advantage and in making this important part of their stores more attractive and convenient for shopping. Because of the tremendous growth of the city, with a consequent congestion during the shopping hours, merchants are finding an increasing need for additional floor space, and numerous ideas are being advanced for utilizing the space below the ground floor. High rental values and the natural expansion of business—a situation which prevails in cities of metropolitan size—are the chief factors, they point out, in working this change of sentiment in favor of popularizing downstairs departments.

The next few years, they believe, will see a great majority of Los Angeles retail store managers finding more varied uses for their downstairs spaces, applying to them service features which heretofore have not been thought of as a part of department store arrangement. They refer to the sensible uses to which basements have been put in New York since the development of that city's subway systems and the enormously congested conditions surrounding shopping. Virtually every department store on those streets under which the subway runs has an entrance leading directly into these stores, enabling shoppers to pass quickly from the cars into the store building. This arrangement, convenient and accessible for the shopping public, has brought several thousand feet of floor space into immediate use.

The problem of how best to utilize this valuable space has been solved by the B. H. Dyas Company, as far as that store is concerned, in opening a new downstairs sporting goods store in the Ville de Paris building at Seventh and Olive streets, one of the busiest parts of the shopping section. The arrangement of this space will givethe company an additional shopping and service area of 21,000 square feet. The object, according to Mr. Dyas, was to consolidate several departments on the same floor.

To bring these departments into more direct touch with the public the new downstairs store has been designed with a wide stairway leading from the front of the building, so as to bring the store within a few feet of the street pavement. Another convenient feature is the large elevator which has been installed on the Olive-street side. This is so arranged that a motorist can drive directly from the street onto the elevator and be lowered into the store.

Arranged along both sides of the front entrance will be glass-inclosed tanks containing an exhibit of the five varieties of trout found in Southern California streams. The object of this exhibit is educational. An indoor rifle range, intended for use of those testing rifles and practicing marksmanship, will add a spectacular feature to the store ensemble. Another department will be given over exclusively to camp goods of all descriptions. In con-

ENLARGED QUARTERS.

Realty Firms Making Improvements to Permit Business Increase.

The Wright-Callender-Andrews Company is enlarging its present quarters in the Wright and Callender Building with the idea of adding 50 per cent. of floor space and allowing for improved light and ventilation. This improvement will provide for the consolidation of the general sales force, the business sales, leasing, residence and country lands departments. It will also require enlarged sales, leasing and rental forces. The enlarged quarters include taking over a large storeroom on the Fourth-street side of the Wright and Callender Building, necessitating breaking through the intervening wall.

The sales, leasing and rental department are on the ground floor while on the mezzanine floor are the executive offices and directors' room. The corner storeroom at Fourth and Hill streets has just been leased to C. H. Brigder, jeweler, and T. D. Atkinson, optician.

CHARMING WEST ADAMS HOME OF 11 ROOMS AND TWO BATHS ON A LOT 150x150. Cement tennis court, and wonderful gardens. Asphalt paved street, paid for.

You cannot imagine a more beautiful and homey place than this one. It was built by day labor of the finest materials and the construction as heavy as that used in eastern homes. It has been occupied by the original owner only, and has been kept up in perfect condition. Not a year has past but what the house has been painted, and the result is that it is as good, if not better, than when it was built. THE REASON THE HOUSE IS FOR SALE NOW is that the owner's family is much smaller and they have no use for this large a home.

IF YOU WANT A REAL HOME AND AT A PRICE ONE-HALF OF WHAT SUCH A PLACE WOULD COST TO BUILD TODAY, YOU HAD BETTER MAKE HASTE TO SEE THIS ONE. SHOWN ONLY BY APPOINTMENT UPON APPLICATION TO THE UNDERSIGNED EXCLUSIVE AGENTS.

BY OWNERS.

We are building in the exclusive Wilshire district seven new homes, ranging in price from $18,500 to $25,000. Two of these are now completed and ready for occupancy. Three more are about ready for the decorators and two others are in various stages of construction. All of these are

"CHAPMAN-BUILT" HOUSES.

We have been building homes in this immediate locality for ten years and the recommendations of our past purchasers are your guarantee as to the quality of a "Chapman-Built" House. If we knew how to build a better house for the same or less money, we would build it. Our reputation as builders stands back of a

"CHAPMAN-BUILT" HOUSE.

If you are now, or soon will be, in the market for a home and if you believe as we do that a house built "for sale" should be built on "Honor," then we invite you personally to thoroughly inspect these several houses, both as to material and workmanship and satisfy yourself as to what constitutes a

"CHAPMAN-BUILT" HOUSE.

IMPORTANT TO BUYERS.

If you purchase one of these homes not yet completed, we will gladly permit you to designate the interior and exterior decorating, as well as any changes or modifications in arrangement that will not cheapen the character of construction of a

IF YOU WANT TO SEE A REALLY DISTINCTIVE HOME, JUST A LITTLE BETTER, JUST A LITTLE DIFFERENT FROM OTHER HIGH-CLASS HOMES, DRIVE OUT TO SEE THIS PROPERTY.

If you have wished for a Southern California home—just your ideal, all ready for you, even to the least detail, without ever having to bother building it—or giving it any attention whatever—your wish has come true in this beautiful home. This house was built for the owner for his own home, and now circumstances prevent his occupying it, and it must be sold. You have only to see the place to realize the unusual care and thought—all well directed—that have been given to the building of the home.

The lot is a southwest corner, 117x200 feet; and has been laid out by a most efficient landscape gardener. House is set back fifty feet from the street, and is so located on the lot that the yard at one side is 60 feet wide; the grounds throughout are as beautiful as Southern California flowers and plants can make them.

The house, a 10-room residence, expresses harmony and beauty in every line. Is very large and roomy, and is about 60 feet wide across and nearly one hundred feet long. Across the front of the house is the large living-room, library and den. These rooms, all opening together, are well adapted for entertaining. These main rooms, as well as the dining-room, are all finished in selected solid mahogany and quartered oak. The four lovely bedrooms are in French ivory, with exquisitely dainty paper hangings on the walls. The breakfast-room is a little jewel, circular, and practically all windows. Buffet in ivory, center light in silver and chintz.

The indirect lighting system, some of the fixtures being of Italian alabaster, gives a wonderfully beautiful effect at night. Three bathrooms, two of them tiled and fitted with the most expensive plumbing, pedestal bowls; massive roll tubs.

There is a large cement basement with a furnace and hot water heater. The entire house has been planned with the idea of quiet, dignified beauty, and most of all, to be comfortable. The 2-story garage has rooms for two machines, and above are servants' quarters, with bathroom, sink, built-in closets and all conveniences. Bowser underground gasoline tank.

A few words can scarcely give any idea of what to expect in this beautiful Oneonta Park home. Anyone who is looking for a home to meet their ideas of beauty and comfort will find it in this property.

Located at 1001 MILAN AVE., Oneonta Parkk, South Pasadena. Open for inspection today and daily from 10 to 5.

MAHOGANY IVORY COLONIAL BUNGALOW.

Built too well—cost me too much—can't handle it. I can't put in all the dandy garden, flowers, chickens I planned, but there's lots of room, and I got a fine lawn in front if I did just move in and not yet all furnished.

Lot is 60 front, 175 across rear, garage has sewer and water connected. Large new house, has A No. 1 tiled bath, tiled kitchen, dandy breakfast-room, two large, airy bedrooms, good living and dining-rooms, in mahogany and ivory. Close to car, near L. A. High and grade school, asphalt paved, restricted street. I need mostly cash, hence the low price. Phone my exclusive agents, 66740, for appointment, MR. BATTELLE.

FOR SALE—

TEN-ACRE

ALMOND ORCHARDS.

By our co-operative development plan, for a cash investment of $2500, part in cash and the balance in monthly payments of $25, you may own in a few years a ten-acre almond orchard of your own that will net you each year more than your cash investment. We know this because our experts, who have been developing almond orchards in the Paso Robles district for the past few years, have proven it to be a fact. These same experts will select your nursery stock, plant your trees, cultivate your ground and give your orchard the proper attention and will spare no expense to obtain the best results. We now own the land and we know that it is the very best in the Paso Robles district, containing all those properties necessary to the culture of the almond.
We take one-half the purchase price out of the crop. WE ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEE YOU A FULL STAND OF BEARING TREES and the Title Insurance and Trust Company of Los Angeles is custodian of the development fund.
If you are looking for a 100 per cent. investment and are willing to wait a few years without returns and then receive 100 per cent. returns, investigate who we are and what we have. We have an illustrated booklet explaining our plan in detail and we welcome investigation.

MINES—

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery; never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machines ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

$10,000 FOR INVESTMENT OF $100.
One acre oil land, Los Angeles county, for sale. Price $200. Or installments, $10 monthly, option, to buy within 20 months at this price. A trust company returns $100 of money to rebuy your acre if oil is not found within 20 months, in adjacent drilling three wells and you desire to sell the acre. Big operators drilling three sides of land. Closest one-half mile. If a Chapman gusher is struck your acre is worth $10,000. Only one acre sold to one party. You get warrantee deed. Can sell, lease or hold your acre without or with other thirty-nine holders of the tract of land. The California iniquitous Blue Sky Law of predatory Wealth has kept out and driven millions of dollars elsewhere and to Texas for oil investments. Reinsure your foreign investments with a bet on Home Oil Lands. Any millionaire can invest in the stock of the larger oil companies and banks, but here is a chance for the small investor. If you want 4 per cent. invest in Liberty Bonds or loan your money to the banks. If you want big odds, here is a big chance. Fakirs, curiosity mongers, mamelons, welchers and pikers not desired in this syndicate. A square deal for the small investor. Address T, box 474, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

Development News

Continental Oil and Refining Company

Continental Borealis Operations.
Kansas News.

The president of the Borealis Oil and Gas Company, reports the purchase of a 40-acre lease in Butler County, Kansas. A deep sand well will immediately be drilled on this acreage.

The final details on the 1475 acres in Chautauqua County, Kansas, acquired from the White Eagle Oil & Refining Company, have been closed and the lease acquired by the Borealis Oil and Gas Company. The drilling of a well on this acreage has already commenced.

The above two drilling wells when brought in, will prove up exceptionally valuable acreage. However it should be noted that producing wells are in the immediate vicinity of the locations above mentioned.

Mr. Wilson, superintendent of the Stone lease, located in Butler County, owned by the Continental Oil and Refining Company, reports that the Company's ten producing wells on this property are maintaining a [illegible] average production.

With the coming in of substantial wells in many new districts in Kansas it is predicted that at least [illegible] of the fourteen wells to be drilled by the Borealis Oil and Gas Company will be drilled in Kansas.

Continental Borealis Operations.
Texas News.

The Continental Oil and Refining Company should have interests or individual drilling operations of at least fifteen wells within the next thirty to sixty days.

The Company wants to call the particular attention to those interested in the Company's development, that two or three property acquisitions of unusually substantial character are now in progress of negotiation. Interests representing the financial agents of the Company are now en route to Texas to confer on these matters.

Louisiana.

A representative of the Continental Oil and Refining Company is now en route to Homer, Louisiana, to inspect conditions there, and the advisability of drilling on the Company's Clairborne Parish acreage. The bringing in of a large well estimated at over 5000 barrels daily in Clairborne Parish by the Standard Oil Company is attracting the larger operating oil companies to this section.

General News.

The regular monthly dividend of 1½ per cent. on all outstanding stock of the Continental Oil and Refining Company was paid on the 15th of September.

Mr. Wm. J. Bosse, president of the Continental Oil and Refining Company, is planning a trip of inspection to the Stone lease properties at Butler County, Texas.

It is reported that within the next thirty days two new directors will be added by the Continental Company. The addition of these men will mean the strengthening of the executive body of the Company, since they are business men unusually strong financially and have been and are now at the head of large enterprises in New York City.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; New Oil Field, Maybe; Growing Local Industry; Coffee.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Sometimes the business index of the week may be correctly indicated by the trend of the stock market. Oftener it cannot. The last week proved one of the exceptions for the market accurately reflected the general conditions which were fundamentally strong with a comparatively inactive surface.

There was every apparent reason for a break in the solidly advancing line which has been presented for several months. The long threatened steel strike became a reality; the peace treaty remained an unfulfilled obligation; foreign exchange continued on a low level, production was somewhat interfered with and conditions came into being which would have broken the heart of any market a year ago.

The effect, however, was surprising, for stocks and bonds, slightly hesitant at the beginning of the week soon took courage and closed strong and active, a distinctly bull market being reported yesterday from New York and finding reflection in Los Angeles.

In the face of the strike which is rapidly fizzling to a ragged end, steel stocks took on new life, and industrials generally were in better technical tone at the end of the week than they were at the beginning thereof. This was also true of bonds and retail business.

The rain was a tremendous local stimulant, not only putting an end to the disastrous forest fires but clearing the business as well as the climatic atmosphere. There was a natural boom in rubber goods and umbrellas, and merchants said that the early storm would definitely mark the line between the summer and fall season.

Railroad offices report record-breaking inbound reservations, and although this is ordinarily an intermittent period, nearly every hotel and apartment-house in town is filled, with the outlook for the real season, when it comes, decidedly uncertain as to housing limitations.

As predicted in this column several weeks ago, in a survey of office accommodations sharp rent advances have recently been made, without appreciably halting the demand for office space in well-located and modern buildings. The agitation against high rentals is having no effect upon landlords and it is estimated that rates will be forty per cent. greater than they were a year ago. Considerable building is under way, but it is entirely inadaquate to meet the growing demands of the community.

In a financial way we are in good shape. Banks show ever increasing deposits and loan money is plentiful at rates between 5 1-2 and 7 per cent, according to amount and conditions. There is some complaint on the part of would-be home builders without much capital that they find difficulty in securing funds unless they can show a fifty per cent. equity, but to offset this a number of concerns are offering propositions which sound attractive, involving small cash payments and installments thereafter. It is true, however, that it is no longer as easy to get desirable homes for as little down as it was a year ago. This condition is justified by real estate dealers by the law of supply and demand.

Several important bond offerings were made during the week, and in every case found a good response from a public apparently eager to participate. In no branch of financing has there been so marked change as that which has come over the face of the bond market since the war. The selling of first class securities is almost as easy as disposing of ice cream cones at a Sunday-school picnic.

Industrially the most important occurrence was the taking out of the first building permit by the Goodyear people and the promise of rapid progress in the construction of the first units in the big Ascot Park plant. There are persistent rumors of the probable early location in or near this city of other tire companies, the ones most frequently mentioned being the Goodrich and Firestone.

Liberty Bonds are stronger than ever and fewer of them find their way into the open market. The holders have evidently come to the conclusion that they did themselves a greater favor than they did the government when they invested, and realize that it is only a question of a short time before all of the issues are selling at par or better.

Edward H. Hurley, former chairman of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, struck the proper forward note of the week when he said: "We have been exceeding the speed limit in this country. There has been an orgy of spending, but I believe that within three or four months we will have emerged from this state of living. I am quite sure that the people of this country will assert their common sense and remove the present undesirable state of affairs. Labor will soon become more settled, and I do not anticipate any serious difficulties in the future from that source."

The price question is a difficult one to analyze or even to follow intelligently because it varies so widely in different parts of the country, but on the other hand, this is a sure sign that a readjustment is going on and that out of the present unsettled state of the market stability will come. As indicated last week the trend is undoubtedly towards lower prices, but this trend has not yet manifested itself in any violent reductions. Reports to the Department of Justice indicate that there has been a decline in food prices in twelve States of from 10 to 15 per cent., and in half a dozen others of from 2 to 5 per cent.

These reports are taken from communities in different parts of the country and are said to be fairly representative of the general trend. So far as other commodities are concerned, especially clothing and shoes, but few reductions are noted. There are rumblings, and rumors and prospects, but up to the present time the price tags are as able-bodied as they have been for a year.

Government officials and local dealers think that the results which are now beginning to manifest themselves will be cumulative at the season advances, new declines in wholesale prices being reflected in retail prices and additional reductions coming from the campaign against hoarding and profiteering.

The Stock Market.

The week closed locally on a rising market with bullish tendencies, which may reasonably be expected to manifest themselves more thoroughly when the clouds of last week are rolled away. Trading was not very active, but that was because holders could not be induced to part with their stock even under the stimulus of advanced prices. The market was flooded with buying orders, which could not be executed. This made for few sales but a strong market.

Oils continued to dominate, Associated featuring the list and opening a point up at 94. There was plenty of buying demand at this figure, but it failed to bring out much stock and the price was advanced to 94.50; then to 94.62½ and finally, just after the close, sales were made at 94.75. The absorption power behind this stock seems to be still unsatiated, and a small group of insiders are taking everything offered. Union, after closing Friday at 171.62½, opened yesterday strong at 172 and held that figure throughout the morning, but little stock coming out. United recovered slightly and closed with sales at 68.75. Other oils were quiet over

PRODUCE EXCHANGE CLOSES AT STEADY.

RAIN KEEPS MANY DEALERS AWAY BUT PRICES HOLD ON MOST LINES.

The Produce Exchange yesterday followed the usual rule of the Saturday markets, local dealers buying light, in order to avoid being left with stock on hand over Sunday. Due to the rain, however, arrivals from the local producing sections were lighter, and consequently the dealers who appeared on the floor of the exchange were able to dispose of their stocks on a fairly steady market. At the end of the session little produce was left on the floor of the exchange, and the market closed steady on most lines of produce, with fractional decline in price noted on comparatively few.

The peach market is weak, owing to the inferior quality of the recent arrivals on the market, and to the rain, which had a tendency to unsettle this market. Yesterday prices for peaches averaged 5 and 6 cents per pound, with the tone of the market unsteady and movement sluggish. First-class Bartlett pears also declined on yesterday's market, with demand slow, and weakness in evidence. Hungarian plums sold yesterday at prices ranging from 5 to 7½ cents per pound, on a weak market. The arrivals for the most part were in poor condition, which had a tendency to drag the market down.

The potato market continues slow despite very light arrivals during the past three days. The top price on the carlot market yesterday was $2.60, the poorer grades selling at prices ranging from $2.40 to $2.55. A carload of potatoes from Idaho, the first of the season, sold at about $2.60.

The market is heavy on cucumbers, which took a sharp slump averaging 30 cents on yesterday's market. A few best sold at $1 per lug, but local stock sold at from 50 to 70 cents per lug. The demand for pickle stock remains active, however, and on account of the scarcity of this grade, and advance of 50 cents was noted yesterday.

Lemons declined sharply yesterday, falling from Friday's quotations of $6.50 for the fancy valley stock to $6 and $6.25. Heavy supplies and cooler weather of the past few days are given as the reasons for the decline in price of this commodity. Local loose pack sold at $3 to $3.50, a fall of 50 cents per box.

Apples remain firm for all varieties, at Friday's quotations. Two cars of northwestern apples were sold on the local market yesterday, bringing from $2.75 to $3.25 in a jobbing way, while to the retail trade they sold in small lots at about $3.25, ranging up to $3.40. The demand for fancy grades of northwestern apples is active and brings a good price on the present market.

The market for onions remains firm. Carlot prices yesterday for this product were $2.50 for the white varieties and from $2.75 to $2.85 for the brown varieties. No Spanish onions appeared on the market yesterday.

GRAIN AND PROVISION PRICES TAKE ADVANCE

OATS DEVELOPS STRENGTH, WHILE RYE AND BARLEY BOTH FINISH HIGH.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Grain and provision prices advanced and closed at the highest of the day with corn up 2¾@3 cents on distant deliveries while September lost ¼ cent. Oats developed strength and activity with gains of 1¾ cents. Rye finished 1¼@2 cents higher and barley 1¾ cents higher. Long in September corn liquidated, while in December and May shorts were the best buyers. Cash prices were 2@4 cents lower with offerings light and taken mainly by elevator people. Outside markets were up about the same as Chicago and a little better on corn and oats. News on the whole favored holders, specially at the last.

Although lower prices were made during the greater part of the week the advance at the last changed the tone materially and although September corn is 3¾ cents lower than a week ago distant months are up 2¾@3¼ cents. Oats gained 2¾@2½ cents.

General covering by prominent local shorts made an active and higher corn market. The surplus was taken out of the pit early and while there was some selling by commission houses at no time was the December more than ¼ cent under the previous day's close. Liquidation in September was ignored the greater part of the day and the close was at the top with substantial net gains. December closed $1.26 and May $1.23¾.

September dropped to $1.41 early, or 10 cents under Wednesday's high, but was back to $1.43¼ at the last.

The close in oats was at the top with substantial net gains with September 68¼ cents, December 71 cents and May 72¾ cents.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Wall street expressed today its strengthening belief in an early settlement of the steel strike by heavy purchases of leading stocks, most of which rose to highest price of the week.

As a group, steels led the list, United States Steel making a gain of two points and Bethlehem, which rivaled it in point of activity, rose seven points. Crucible steel was the central feature, however, its extreme advance to the new high level of 217 being accomplished at the further expense of the shorts. Crucible made a net gain of 11½ points or a total of 26¾ since Thursday's final quotation.

Motors and allied specialities were next in speculative favor, almost a score of those issues finishing at gains of two to four points, equipments making improvement.

Sugar once more featured the food division, rising two to ten points and shippings rose two to seven points, the strongest issues being Atlantic Gulf, United Fruit and American International.

Recent favorites, notably tobacco and oil, moved uncertainly, while leather, textiles and rails embraced the less active, but firm to strong stocks, maximum prices in many instances being registered at the close. Sales amounted to 775,000 shares.

The bank statement reported an increase of almost $72,000,000 in actual reserves, canceling last week's record deficit and leaving a moderate excess.

Buying of Liberty issues was again the feature of the bond market, the list as a whole reflecting the strength of stocks. Total sales, par value, aggregated $6,400,000.

Old United States 2's gained ½ and the 4's 1-4 on call during the week.

FINANCIAL AND TRADE REVIEW.

scattered trading, but with prices slightly up.

Industrials were strong, but showed little activity. California Delta Farms sold to 62.50. Union Sugar was stronger and in demand at 48.62½. Goodyear, preferred, gained a quarter of a point over the preceding day and sold at 99.75. Small lots of L.A.I., changed hands at 89 cents, 87 being bid at the close.

Mines were unusually quiet, only scattering sales being registered in the Oatmans at prices practically unchanged from the level of the preceding day. Richmond declined to 48 cents under pressure of selling orders. Tom Reed sold up to 1.73½.

Liberty Bonds were in good demand at steady prices. The market as a whole held up remarkably well through a quiet week, the total volume of business approximating $750,000.

Bank clearings for the day were $7,706,409.36, an increase of $2,755,827.15 over the corresponding day a year ago.

Who's Who.

The Mission Baking Powder Company is an industrial concern which is doing much to put the Pacific Coast on the trade map and is one of the growing manufacturing plants of Los Angeles. Headed by Neal P. Olsen, the Mission is preparing to give its older eastern contemporaries a run for their money. In three years the sales have increased, according to a statement made by the president, 400 per cent., and Mr. Olsen does not hesitate to say that he sees for the product of his company a great future.

Mr. Olsen points out the fact that the Pacific Coast States consume 6,000,000 pounds of baking powder every year, the bulk of which is, at the present time, shipped in by eastern manufacturers. He argues that because Coast manufacturers buy ingredients in bulk and are able to take advantage of low freight rates they can secure a better quality for less money.

The Mission brand takes its name by virtue of the principle of purity for which the early missions of California were founded, as well as for the geographical significance. It is essentially a home product, owned and controlled by local people. Los Angeles, as Mr. Olsen sees it, is destined to be the manufacturing metropolis of the Pacific Coast, and he consistently urges the investment of local capital in local industries that this desirable end may be hastened.

All of the stock of the company is common, and all stockholders will participate equally in proportion to the amount they hold in the profit and management of the affairs of the company.

New Oil Field—Maybe.

Is there or is there not an oil deposit of commercial volume underlying Fish Lake Valley, Esmeralda county, Nevada? That is a question which is agitating several Los Angeles people at the present time, and the answer to which is being eagerly awaited by those who have pre-empted every inch of available land in the zone of probability.

The valley lies forty miles from Tonopah, Coledale being the nearest railroad station. F. W. Remey, a Los Angeles geologist, explored the valley thoroughly and returned with samples of the formation, which, when tested, were found to have a high percentage of oil. Mrs. Bessie Miller, who came from Pennsylvania ten years ago, where she was actively interested in oil, explored Fish Lake Valley at the time of her arrival in the West and, believing that it bore indications of oil, filed claims on a large part of the land. She was unable to interest any of the oil companies, however, and until recently no interest has been taken in the valley. J. F. Clark, a Los Angeles attorney, says he has mineral rights on 15,000 acres of the land, obtained two years ago, at a time when the demand by the government for potash was active. Mr. Clark claims that, in addition to the investigation made by Mr. Remey, government geologists have thoroughly explored the land and submitted favorable reports. Mrs. Miller, who is in the valley representing both her interests and those of Mr. Clark, has arranged for the drilling of the first well with a standard outfit which is now on the ground.

Coffee Stays Up.

S. M. Newmark, local manager of Newmark Bros., wholesale dealers in coffee and tea, predicts no reduction in the price of coffee until after the Brazilian crops are in, which will be in April or May of next year. In June of this year, says Mr. Newmark, green coffee was selling around 10 and 11 cents per pound. Owing to the fact that the Brazilian crops of this year were greatly reduced by frosts, prices for green coffee trebled in price to the roaster, selling during the early part of this months at 30 cents a pound. As far as possible wholesale dealers kept the price of roasted coffee down, feeling that it would be impossible to raise the price of roasted coffee in the same ratio as the price of green coffee had risen. Had this condition continued, the wholesalers would have been forced to increase their prices, but during the latter part of this month green coffee declined in price to 25 cents per pound and roasted coffee remains at the same price level. This price, says Mr. Newmark, probably will hold until the next Brazilian crop is harvested and put on the market, in the spring of 1920. Present indications point to a good crop, and if Brazilian growers refrain from holding the product for high prices coffee probably will come down in price. There are no indications of a fall in price in the near future, however, declares Mr. Newmark.

Farm Loan Bonds.

The importance attached to the exemption of farm loan bonds is shown by the great array of legal talent which has been retained to uphold the validity of the Federal land bank and joint stock land bank bonds when the issue is joined in the Federal court at Kansas City. The holders of Federal land bank bonds will be represented by former Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes. The United States has instructed the District Attorney at Kansas City to appear and defend. The joint stock loan banks will be represented by former Atty.-Gen. Wickersham, and by William Gibbs McAdoo, while parties who desire to continue the tax exemption will have legal representation almost as notable.

At the present rate of progress it is expected that the San Diego and Arizona Railway will be ready for operation between San Diego and El Centro by the latter part of November, and soon thereafter through service to Chicago will be established.

It is reported that the United States Sugar Equalization Board, which started with a capital of $5,000,000 will close this year with a profit of $25,000,000 or 500 per cent.

Last week Frank Hervey Pettingell, president of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange had more applicants for membership than during any similar period this year. There is now a considerable waiting list and the current price of seats has gone up about $650.

There has recently been a revival of the move to erect a big office building on a South Spring street street site to be known as the Stock Exchange Building and which will provide adaquate quarters for the growing activities of the local exchange.

At the end of the current bond-purchasing year, May 9, the aggregate purchase of Liberty Bonds in the market for account of the sinking fund may exceed $1,000,000,000.

Consumption of sugar in the United States for the first seven months of this year was 362,000 tons greater than during the corresponding period last year. This represents an increased per capita consumption of one pound per month.

Much Excitement Created During Recent Developmen
Continental Oil & Refining Company

The recent added developments which have been pending for the past ninety days and which ar now coming to a successful head is creating unusual interest among investors at this time.
We cannot over-emphasize the fact that the following information will mean a great deal and wi tend to have a material effect on both the market value for the stock as well as an increase in divi dend returns.

This information just received will no doubt receive a very unusual welcome more especially wh considering that the company was already earning approximately 100 per cent. on the stock ou standing, with only 1200 barrels daily production.

Advices just received state that the Continental Oil & Refining Co.'s Borealis We No. 1 will do better than 2000 barrels.

New Properties being acquired by Continental Oil & Refining Co. upon which ther is assured a profit of approximately $1,000,000.00 in about 60 days to the Con tinental Oil & Refining Co., has five wells with four more locations available. It potential production should run 8000 barrels daily.

This new added development places Continental Oil & Refining Co. among First Rank of the Pro ducing class.

The tremendous large earnings in proportion to the small amount of stock outstanding should no be lost sight of at this moment.

We wish again to call attention to an important factor regarding the Company's drilling campaign which is conducted through the Borealis Oil & Gas Co. of Wichita, Kansas, which is a subsidiary company to the Continental Oil & Refining Co., controlled through stock ownership.

The President of the Borealis Oil & Gas Co. is Mr. L. L. Marcell who is also president of the White Eagle Oil & Refining Co., which is one of the largest independent oil companies operating in the Mid-Continental Field. This company being a complete cycle in the oil industry, including pro ducing, refining and marketing.

The success of the Continental Oil & Refining Co. is due to having a man of such wide experience in charge of their drilling operations.

We are sincere in stating that we believe an investment in the shares of Continental Oil & Refinin Co. will result in a handsome profit in due course both in dividend returns and market value.

From present indications and contemplated developments in the Continental Oil & Refining Co., we would not be surprised to see this stock within a reasonable time selling as high as $5.00 pe share.

Texas Leases
AT WHOLESALE PRICES
$4 Per Acre

The entire Southwestern part of Texas is being looked upon by experienced oil producers as the coming center of production. Nearly every county has a number of deep tests now being driven—some have reached beyond the 2000-foot depth and a real gusher is expected at any time. Indications are that when development has gone a little further, leases will double in price and maybe many times higher. We cannot hope to deliver leases at the above price for a very long time.

However, until further notice we will sell you a 40-acre lease in any 5 counties you may select from a total of 18 different counties at the above price of $4.00 per acre.

McCulloch, Val Verde, Kinney, Culberson, Brewster, Terrell, Starr and Webb Counties are having a very active play and "the looked for" may happen at any time. A 40-acre lease in these 5 counties for a total outlay of $1280.00 may make from one to several fortunes for those fortunate enough to buy at present prices.

We quote you from yesterday's telegram from our Texas connections: "Great activity in McCulloch County; you must wire your order quick—deep tests on survey 42 down 500 feet." Place your order now for a minimum of 40 acres in 5 counties out of 18—call for map showing the 18 counties and locations.

We also have a miscellaneous assortment of leases and fees in large bodies from 50c to $350 per acre.

CITRUS REVIEW FOR WEEK.

As a result of the shortage of refrigerator cars, shipments of Valencias were again decreased this week. A total of 345 cars were sent to eastern markets as against 448 cars the previous week. The cutting down of supplies for eastern markets has strengthened the demand and quotations have been advanced 25 cents per box the past week.

F.o.b. California quotations are now on a basis of $5 per box on Orange county Valencias and $4.75 from other districts. A good business is reported on this basis.

Latest estimates place the remaining supply of Valencias at between 3500 and 3600 cars. At the corresponding time last season there were only 500 cars of Valencias remaining for shipment.

Growers report new crop navels sizing up rapidly, but it is too early for anything definite.

It is generally believed that the crop will be later than last year because of the dry season.

Latest advices from Florida are that the new crop of oranges in that State promise to be later in maturing this season and it will be well along in November before shipments begin to go forward in considerable volume.

Porto Rico oranges are in light supply. Prices in eastern market range from $2 to $2.38 per box. The fruit is green and generally undesirable.

LEMONS.

The shortage of refrigerator cars cut lemon shipments down to 76 cars the past week and has stimulated the demand throughout the entire eastern country.

F.o.b. California quotations are on a basis of $6 to $6.50 per box.

The market is strong with a tendency toward higher prices.

There are on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days, 55,000 boxes foreign lemons.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DECLINE OF 21 POINTS IN COTTON MARKET.

STRIKE ON ENGLISH RAILWAYS, WEATHER RESPONSIBLE FOR SETBACK.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Cotton market opened steady, a decline of 12 to 21 points, recovering the loss almost immediately. Southern selling orders on the call in connection with the strike on the English railways, favorable weather and week-end realizing were responsible fo rthe initial setback. The list eased again after the first 15 minutes on future profit taking and at 10:15 o'clock was about 10 to 15 points under yesterday's close. The market showed continued activity but very irregular fluctuations after the big advance of yesterday. There was naturally a good deal of realizing for over the week-end and considerable southern selling with prices opening at a decline of 12 to 21 points. December sold off to 32.50 cents, or 40 points from yesterday's high level.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF WALL STREET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The steel strike dwarfed all other developments of the week in the stock market, but the upward course of prices in the later dealings indicated strong hopes that normal conditions soon would be restored.

Shares of the many manufacturing concerns dependent upon stability in the steel trade maintained a firm tone, with several sensational advances in specialties.

Metals reflected a moderate revival of speculative interest, although trade conditions, indicated by the poor earnings of the American Smelting Company and lower prices for refined copper, were not encouraging.

Rails were again the one important group to show little animation.

Industrial unrest retarded new financing, the one large offering consisting of American Telephone notes amounting to $50,000,000 taken by a prominent banking syndicate. Several foreign loans and commercial credits are reported nearing consummation.

General domestic trade as reported by the mercantile agencies continues to be adversely influenced by strike disorders, these having already caused cancellation of orders and in other ways checked commercial expansion.

SILVER

Over thirty million ounces of silver per annunm are consumed in moving pictures. The world demand for silver constantly increases, but the production decreases.

Silver advanced to $1.18⅜ per ounce last week. With the British pound sterling at par in New York, the market price for silver would read $1.38 per ounce, or about nine cents higher than coinage value on a 16 to 1 basis.

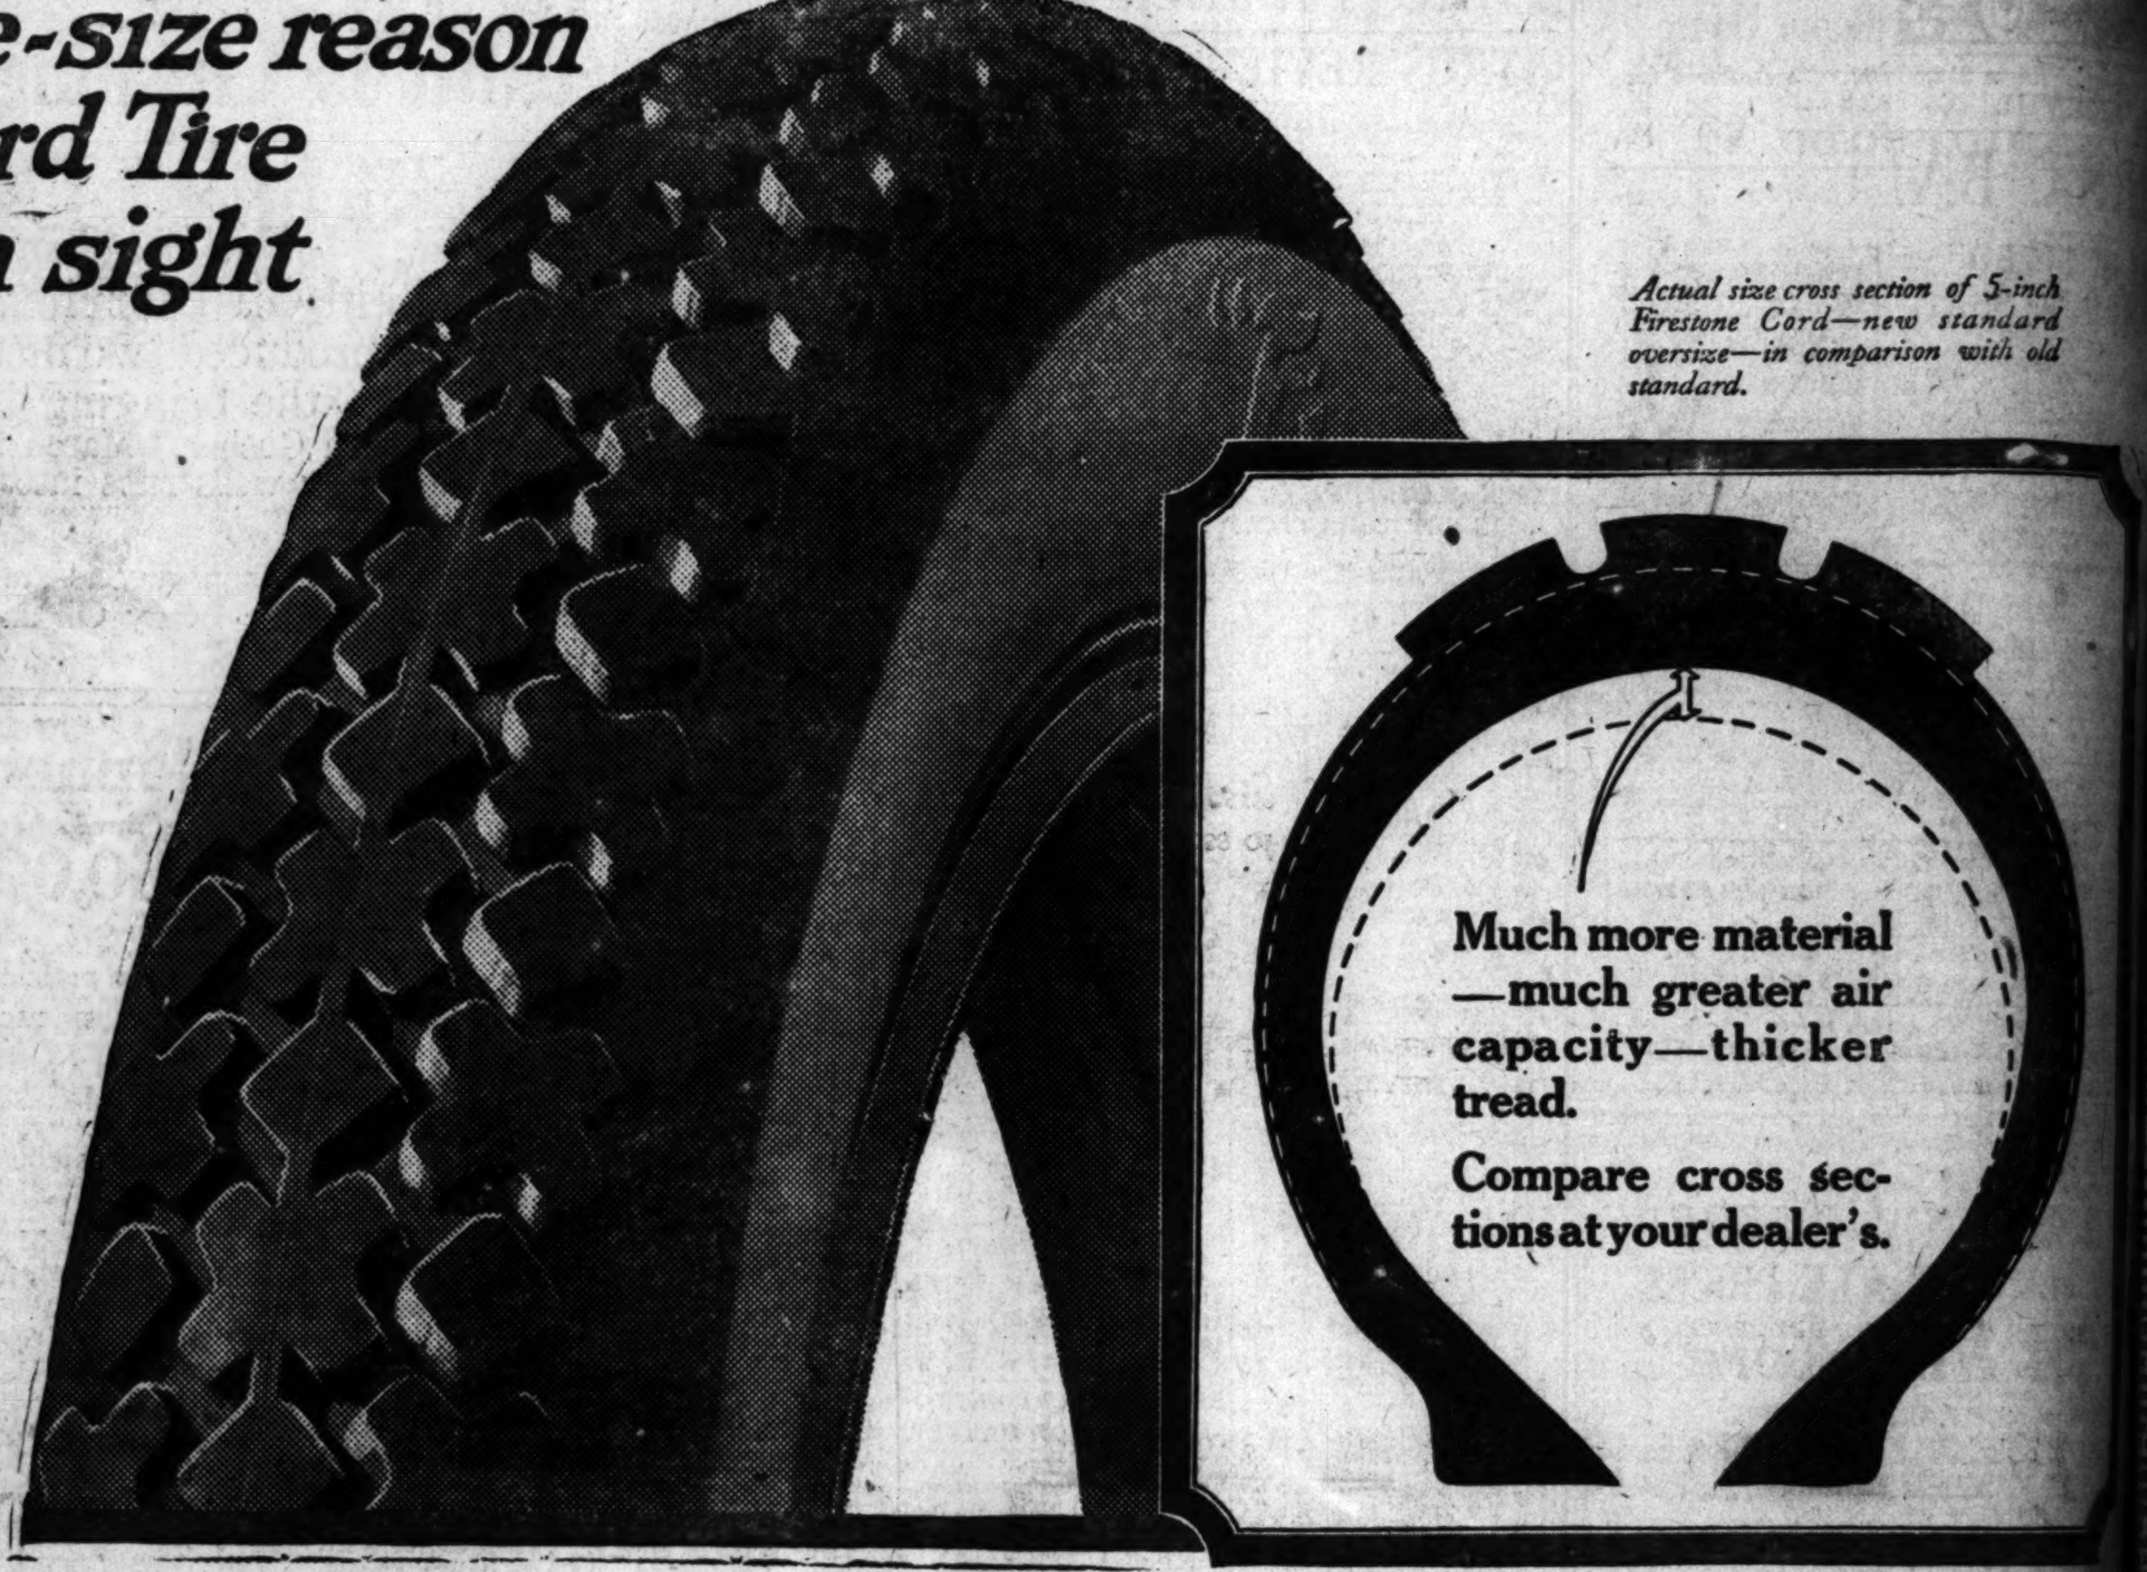
One Life-size reason This Cord Tire Sells on sight



Actual size cross section of 5-inch Firestone Cord—new standard oversize—in comparison with old standard.

Much more material—much greater air capacity—thicker tread.

Compare cross sections at your dealer's.

The New Standard Oversize Cord Tire with extra heavy Non-Skid Tread

This is called "the Firestone year" in the tire business because Firestone has accomplished so many things that mean better tire service and more mileage per dollar.

The illustration above shows what Firestone has done for users of cord tires, for instance.

The Firestone Cord is built to the largest size established by the industry.

It is so much bigger than usual standards that there is no comparison. Dealers everywhere say "it sells on sight."

And it is just as big in service as it is in size.

The mileage adjustment basis on this tire has been raised to 8,000 miles, but that is still only a starting point—a minimum from which to begin to figure your extra mileage.

Examine the new non-skid tread. Note the extra volume of rubber and the quality of it. The unusual thickness of tread and toughness of rubber means extra mileage.

More fine rubber combined with greater air capacity gives this tire added resiliency. This means fullest comfort. It means more car protection. It means less drag on the engine. It means less gasoline per mile.

The new non-skid design is another superior feature. It does prevent skid or spinning of wheels. Yet it has no suction to retard speed, waste power or create noise. For the same reasons this tire makes steering easy and true.

Put this tire on every wheel. You will save tire money, your gasoline will go farther, you will be more comfortable, confident and safe. There is a Firestone dealer near you.

This is the Firestone year have very little trouble with experienced drivers or with pro driving drivers. I know men who ten years ago speed demons and who as careful and considerate They all admit the fast pay. When you see a driv down Broadway or waking with an open cut-out you he's a new one at the game. The better and experienced motorists don't do it that way.

Most accidents in the city are caused by drivers speeding up to a crossing and trying to bluff the other fellow out of the right of way, and by drivers turning without giving the proper signal or giving it too late. If everyone would look back before starting to turn, a great many accidents in this city would be stopped. Using their horn instead of their brake is another thing that motorists ought to get away from.

ON THE BOULEVARDS.

Most accidents on the boulevards are caused by drivers attempting to pass a car without being sure that the road ahead is clear. If a machine is coming in the opposite direction there is a smash and usually a bad one. Hugging the center of the road is responsible for smashed fenders daily. Glaring headlights at night are always a danger and we are going to start arrests for this offense at once.

The worst nuisance we have to contend with and the one for which there is the least excuse is the cut-out or open muffler. Boys on motorcycles and would-be sports with some old car cut down to look like a racer are the ones we are gunning for.

There are other drivers who think they can't get up a hill without opening the muffler. They believe more noise, more power. I have actually had them tell me that it is necessary to have the cut-out open in order to pull the grade. They all know it is a violation of the law but when they are arrested they either plead ignorance or get very indignant because we don't get everybody else instead of them.

TRUCK PROBLEM.

The truck problem is a hard one. Apartment house owners are continually sending in complaints about trucks hauling heavy loads by their places with mufflers open to the great annoyance of their tenants. These complaints usually come from the hilly districts along the route taken by contractors' trucks hauling from some excavation. Now heavy trucks make a great deal of noise even with muffler closed, especially on a hill which they have to pull on low gear. We try routing them another way and then we get a kick from the landlords along that route. That's why I say the truck problem is a hard one.

As a whole the motorists of Los Angeles drive carefully and pay strict attention to the laws. But there are some who are continually breaking the ordinances and who are always causing trouble and those are the ones we are trying to get.

PREPARE FOR FIRES IN ANGELES FOREST.

NO TIME TO BE LOST IN GETTING SUITABLE HIGHWAYS THROUGH RESERVE.

With no tears for the unfortunate past, but with an eye cocked toward the future, road builders of Southern California are considering mountain highway development.

Officials of the Forest Reserve service stated yesterday that if there had been roads in the Angeles forest the fires which raged there could have been stopped in their early stages.

NO HIGHWAYS.

But there were no highways reaching up into the Arroyo Seco nor to the strategic points from which the flames could have been conquered, despite the fact that motorists, through the Automobile Club of Southern California, have been urging the building of mountain roads for several years.

It is not a question of "locking the stable after the flivver has been stolen," say club officials, in strenuously endeavoring to secure funds now for an Angeles reserve road, even if more than 160,000 acres of watershed has been burned off, for the need of a serviceable route into the reserve is only emphasized and not done away with because the fire has come and gone.

If motor trucks, laden with men and supplies, could have tooled into the areas where the fires were first discovered, there would have been no gigantic loss. It would have been the motor-driven vehicle which would hae averted the catastrophe.

FACILITIES LACKING.

Fire fighters, during the recent holocaust, were tired before they ever reached the fire lines, say the authorities, from the long hike on account of there being no roads, and later became exhausted from long waits for supplies, which had to be taken in on pack animals. Furthermore, there are not enough pack

PLAYERS IN WORLD SERIES.

Thumb-nail Sketches of Baseball Stars on Teams of White Sox and Reds.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—With close to fifty players from which to select the teams which will meet for the premier baseball struggle of the year, the Cincinnati Nationals and the Chicago Americans are certain to be represented on the diamond by combinations which will uphold the high-class standard of play which has marked the world series of recent seasons. A complete list of the eligible players of the two competing clubs, with their physical statistics, follow:

"KID" GLEASON.

William "Kid" Gleason, manager of the Chicago White Sox, has been in major-league baseball thirty-three years. He was born at Camden, N. J., October 26, 1865, and began his baseball career in 1886 at Williamsport, Pa. While James Callahan was manager of the Chicago American League team, Gleason was assistant manager and coach, and after Callahan was replaced by Clarence Rowland in 1917, Gleason continued with the club as aide to Rowland, and it was said that much of the success of the White Sox that season was attributable to the work of Gleason.

The next season, 1918, Gleason stepped out of baseball, and went into business in Philadelphia, where he and Otto Knabe, of the Chicago Nationals, are partners. Before the present season was started, Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, decided upon a change of manager and Gleason was re-engaged.

Although Gleason is old enough to be father of a majority of his players, he is as active and handy with boxing gloves as any man on the team, not excepting Kerr, who is a pugilist far above the average.

Edward V. Cicotte is one of Manager Gleason's pitching "aces." This wonderful knuckle ball pitcher, who was thought to be slipping last season, has become one of the best pitchers in the league. He has been accused time and again of using the "shine ball," which is nothing more than a myth. Ball after ball has been taken out of the game and brought to the headquarters of the league for examination and there never has been found any foreign substance on the sphere.

Eddie was born in Detroit, Mich., June 19, 1884. He entered professional baseball in 1904 at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He has had a varied career. He was a member of the Augusta, Ga., team of the Southern Association at the time Tyrus Cobb was playing there, and both went to the Detroit Americans. Cobb was retained by Detroit, but Cicotte was sent back. He later joined the Boston Red Sox, and was found wanting. He was released to the White Sox about eight years ago. He began to show he could pitch and became a fixture on the club. He bats and throws right handed. He is married and resides in Detroit.

Cicotte is one of the headiest pitchers in the game. He has a varied assortment of curves and uses his head throughout a game. He is a good judge of batters and much of his success is due to this fact. Cicotte's checkered career in the major leagues extends over about twelve seasons. He is 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighs about 160 pounds.

Urban "Red" Faber, who was "discovered" by Clarence Rowland before he became manager of the White Sox in 1917, has been more or less of a disappointment this season. He joined the navy at the Great Lakes last fall after the season closed, and since returning to the club he has not been able to put the same snap in the ball which enabled him to make such a wonderful showing against the New York Giants when the White Sox defeated them for the world's title in 1917. However, Manager Gleason has faith in Faber, and he may take part in the coming series. Faber was born in Cascade, Iowa, September 6, 1888. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. Faber is not married and makes his home in Cascade.

Claude Williams is one of the best, if not the best, left-handed pitchers in the American League. He is another of Gleason's aces. He was born March 9, 1893, at Aurora, Mo., and broke into baseball at Nashville, Tenn., in 1912. This is Williams's fourth year in major league baseball, always as a member of the White Sox. He bats right handed. He is married and resides in Springfield, Mo. He is 5 feet, 8½ inches tall and weighs 160 pounds.

Richard Kerr, pitcher, has developed into one of the best left-hand pitchers in the league. Kerr was born twenty-six years ago at St. Louis. He was obtained by the Chicago club from Milwaukee. He broke into professional baseball in 1909 as a member of the Paragould, Ark., team. "Dick" bats and throws left handed. He is married and lives in Paris, Tex. He weighs 160 pounds and is 5 feet, 8 inches tall.

Grover Loudermilk, pitcher, was born in Sandburn, Ind., January 15, 1888. Loudermilk has had a varied career since starting professional baseball at Mattoon, Ill., in 1908. He is playing his first year with Chicago. Loudermilk weighs 170 pounds and is 6 feet, 3 inches tall. He bats and throws right handed. He is said to possess a great assortment of curves, but his big fault has been wildness. Under Gleason's instruction he has overcome this failing to a certain extent. His home is in Odin, Ill. Loudermilk is not married.

Arnold "Chick" Gandil is the regular first baseman. He was born in St. Paul, Minn., January 15, 1889, and started baseball as a profession

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS SUGGESTIONS.

VIOLATION OF TRAFFIC ORDINANCES BY MOTORISTS SOURCE OF DANGER.

Fire fighting in Los Angeles is "gummed up" by the continuous violation of the city traffic ordinance by automobile owners here, according to a communication submitted by the fire department to the Automobile Club of Southern California, asking for co-operation.

Motorists failing to stop upon the approach of fire apparatus, running over stretched hose lines and chasing engines, are not only endangering their own lives, but more particularly the lives of the men on the fire engines and trucks, according to Charles B. Casey, acting chief engineer of the department.

DANGER ENOUGH.

It is pointed out to the Automobile Club that the lives of firemen are placed in jeopardy from the time they leave the engine-house, responding to an alarm of fire until they return to quarters.

Delay in reaching fires, because of the carelessness of motorists in stopping or getting out of the way of the engines, causes thousands of dollars in loss every month, as well as loss in damaged apparatus. This carelessness has increased every week here, says the department, and the Automobile Club has been called upon to check it as far as possible.

When fire apparatus is approaching a fire, automobiles crowd in behind the engines and very often prevent second or third alarm companies getting to a fire hydrant without delay. The Auto Club asks all automobile owners to be particularly careful to refrain from doing this, as it is extremely important that all routes to a fire be left open for the fighting apparatus.

SAFETY FIRST.

Again "safety first" is the keynote which the club is sounding in behalf of the men who are in a position to avert disaster by their bravery during conflagrations.

The fire department itself has issued a broadside to all employees, calling upon them to secure data in cases where motorists violate the traffic ordinance by failing to stop upon the approach of apparatus for the purpose of prosecution. A report is called for where firemen observe any such violation.

Names and addresses of motorists who drive over fire or chemical hose when the same is being used to fight a fire will also be secured. These reports will be secured and turned in, regardless of whether damage is being done or not.

CO-OPERATING.

"Unless the situation had reached the breaking point, I am satisfied that the fire department of Los Angeles would not have called the club's attention to the matter," stated Secretary Mitchell yesterday, "and for that reason, all club members are co-operating to preserve the necessary 'safety first' rules.

"When the engine bells and whistles are heard, no matter in what direction, every automobile within hearing is required to draw up to the curb at once and ascertain whether or not the apparatus is coming in the direction of the car. If it is, then that machine must remain stationary at the curb until the engines or trucks have gone by.

"Swinging in behind the first truck which passes only gives ground for an accident, as other apparatus is usually close behind. It is apparent that prosecutions are going to follow further violations of the rules governing conduct during a run to a fire and for that reason the Automobile Club calls upon every local and visiting automobile owner to observe to the letter the traffic rules in this case."

JACK FRENCH IS VISITOR IN CITY.

Jack French, district sales representative for Dodge Brothers, was a visitor in Los Angeles last week at the headquarters of the Albertson Motor Company, and while here took occasion to inspect the progress on the huge new building that is in process of erection at Sixteenth and Figueroa streets for the local Dodge representatives.

PRODUCTION IS STILL NORMAL.

Steel Strike Fails to Slow up Motor Car Industry.

Sufficient Stocks on Hand to Last Through Emergency.

New Cars on Market Create Decided Interest.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Sept. 28.—Reports that 4000 Ford employees had been laid off, owing to the steel tie up, are branded as untrue by company heads. Emphatic denial that a single employee has been discharged was made by Frank L. Klingensmith, vice-president, when questioned concerning the rumor.

"We haven't discharged anybody and do not intend to," said Mr. Klingensmith. "A few men in the spring department were laid off for about two hours for readjustment of the stock one day this week. They were paid for their time just the same and returned to work again."

Mr. Klingensmith declined to say as to how the Ford company is fixed with regard to a supply of steel.

IN A QUANDARY.

Most of the larger Detroit automobile plants, however, are in a quandary as first results of the steel strike. It is a case of the manufacturers using up their stocks of raw material with little hope of obtaining any more in the immediate future, or curtailing production in an effort to keep the wheels of industry humming as long as possible, according to one authority.

To accept the first proposition is calculated to keep the big factory organizations intact for a limited time with the consequent limited retention in employment of thousands of workers. Also such a course will satisfy the dealers and public, who are clamoring for cars. To bow to the alternative would give employment to a limited number for an indefinite period, but it would bring a storm on the heads of makers, who, for many months, have been straining at production in order to appease as far as possible the apparently insatiable public appetite for automobiles.

DEFINITE STOCKS.

According to this authority, practically all the larger motor plants have definite stocks of raw material, sufficient to last several weeks or several months, either on hand or in transit. Several of these discounted the strike by laying in as large stocks as possible during the last month or six weeks. At any rate it is a certainty that the city's mammoth automobile establishments are straining every effort to get back to pre-war production and were not caught napping, and with conservation of material will be able to hold out a considerable time.

This situation exists, of course, only in plants which make most of the parts entering into their com-

Schools Save Money With "Speed Wagons"

In his annual report, the superintendent of schools of Fillmore, California, states that the REO Speed Wagon used for carrying pupils and teachers operated for $650 less than was estimated for the year.

The report also states that the REO cost five cents less per passenger than other makes of motor vehicles used.

Many other school districts in California are using REO Speed Wagons and effecting as great economies.

For quick delivery service and suburban stage work the REO records for economy and time saving are unequaled.

LOOKS LIKE DEATH LEAP.

Miss De Villiers Ready to Step from an Airplane at Stampede.

It may never be done again. There are possibilities that it may not be done even once—successfully. For that reason the first attempt is to be perpetuated in films at the Stampede.

When Elsie de Villiers, the twenty-year-old miss, goes aloft to step off of an airplane at an altitude of 3000 feet, a second plane will be close by with two cameras and operators. They will follow as closely as possible and maneuver into position so they can get the start, at least, of the wild jump.

Whether the cameras will get anything more than the start is problematical for Miss Villiers calmly figures that she will drop like a rock for at least 500 feet before the parachute opens.

RIGHT WITH THEM.

In the Hun army shortly before peace was declared, the German aviators devised a way of leaving an airplane by parachute. The plan, in brief, was to strap themselves to the parachute and then let it trail out behind. As the rush of wind would catch it, the parachute would open and literally lift the aviator out of the plane. Ingenuous Yankee aviators have used the parachute but under special conditions.

Miss DeVilliers, who is the first young woman in the world to make such an attempt, declared yesterday that she would do nothing more than step off with a rope in her hand. This rope will be attached the parachute which will be carried in a conical receptacle beneath the airplane. The jerk of the rope as she plunges earthward toward Ascot Speedway is calculated to pull the parachute from its moorings.

"But Miss DeVilliers can not possibly fall straight down as from a balloon," said an army officer yesterday at the Arcadia Balloon School. "The speed of the machine will hurl her forward. I don't think that she can ever keep her head up. I would not be surprised to see her sent twirling, head over heels. It is a very hazardous thing that the young lady is attempting. I hope that she has success."

CALM ENOUGH.

Meantime, Miss DeVilliers is calmly preparing for the leap and "hoping for the best" as she expects to "step off" not only once, but three times at the Stampede which is to be held at Ascot Speedway October 10, 11 and 12. She says that she will alight within the speedway grounds although this would require some very skilfull maneuvering for at an elevation of 3000 feet Ascot would look as small as a tea cup.

The Stampede entry list is swelling rapidly. Entries have been received from Calgary, Pendleton, Cheyenne, Miles City, Bozeman, Boise and Walla Walla. In most instances entries have been made by the Chambers of Commerce, an indication that sectional pride is keen. The Stampede is regarded as deciding the cowboy champion of the year.

PREPARE FOR FIRES IN ANGELES FOREST.

animals to supply the men fighting forest fires.

The question of mountain road building for Southern California brings to light the fact that of the funds available for forest road work in this State, 80 per cent. have been apportioned to regions lying north of San Francisco. This statement is made on good authority by the consulting engineer of the automobile club, J. B. Lippincott.

Twenty per cent. of forest reserve road funds, then, have been apportioned by the Secretary of Agriculture and the forest service for use in the great reserves of the southern part of the State.

GETTING BUSY.

United States Senator James Phelan has been called upon by telegram to get busy and stir the officials in Washington to some action in seeing that a specific fund is appropriated to save Southern California forests from total devastation. Senator Phelan, according to Mr. Lippincott, has already interested himself in the Angeles reserve project, being concerned in the securing of $31,000 for the road already, which, however, is not a drop in a bucket.

Telegrams have been sent to the Senator and the Secretary of Agriculture by the automobile club and other organizations showing the hopelessness of trying to protect $100,000,000 in ranches and homes with no roads leading into the watersheds.

With $2,000,000 needed to complete the circuit of highway through the Angeles forest, only approximately $417,000 is available from State, county and municipal sources. Of this sum the government, through the Forest Reserve Department, has appropriated $21,000.

So great is the economic need of such a mountain road, as shown by the forest fire menace, that officials are not even pointing the great advantages of developing the route from a touring and scenic standpoint, in itself is incontrovertible.

TREASURES NOTE FROM PRESIDENT.

Al G. Faulkner, State distributor for the Marmon, is treasuring a note he received early last week on White House stationery. It carried the following message: "The President and Mrs. Wilson wish to thank you for the courtesies you extended to them during their stay in Los Angeles and also for the beautiful roses."

Faulkner furnished the big Marmon that carried the President during his stay here, and saw that its equipment included a huge bouquet of roses which Mrs. Wilson carried during the parade. He prizes the Presidential note of appreciation very highly.

PUTTING RUMORS TO SLEEP.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The War Department, announcing today that it had transferred or sold 19,078 motor vehicles to other departments of the government, and had sold yesterday at Camp Holabird, Md., fifty-eight motor cars, five trucks and eight motorcycles for $12,027, issued a statement, hoping to end forever the oft-recurrent rumor that it had hosts of cars waiting for the public at cheap prices.

"The selling of this equipment by the Motor Transport Corps," said an official statement, "is expected to put at rest finally the many reports of the sale of army trucks and Dodge cars at ridiculously cheap prices. This report had its origin in the operations of a certain self-styled officer who took orders for vehicles, with deposits from trusting citizens desirous of getting something for almost nothing. The police cut short his career, but not before the news of the wonderful generosity of the government had been well started on its journey through the country, and since then no amount of denial, official or unofficial, has been able to check its progress."

GUNNING FOR ROAD HOGS.

Fron a stranger in Los Angeles has come a criticism that concerns every driver of a motor car. The stranger is Clay Vance, of Mackay, Idaho, a prominent cattleman in that State and president of the Cattle raisers' association. He says that on the trip from his home town to Los Angeles, which was completed a few days ago, he did not encounter the species of 'road hog" any place on the 1097-mile journey that he did when approaching this city. And Mr. Vance adds that "up in my country they would hang a fellow who drives like they do down here."

Mr. Vance is not as harsh in his criticism of what native motorists term "rotten" roads, however, as he is of some of the drivers. He was asked what kind of road conditions he encountered and was kind enough to say they were good. His itinerary included coming from Bakersfield by Mojave and the stretch of road in the vicinity of Mojave that is condemned by practically everyone who drives over it he spoke of as not being "very bad," although dusty.

The Idaho cattleman and four others made the drive to Los Angeles in a brand new Chandler touring car. It had been driven less than 100 miles before the start was mde for this city. The run was made in exceptionally good time and although a bit of sand that penetrated to the carburetor gave some trouble there was nothing else about the car's performance that could be criticised. In fact, the owner was very strong in his praise of the Chandler.

LOUIS CHEVROLET IS IN THE GAME.

An announcement of importance to the motor industry and motorists is that made by the William Small Company—Indianapolis manufasturers of Monroe automobiles—of the appointment of Louis Chevrolet, famous race driver and designer of racing cars, to the position of consulting engineer.

In his new connection, Chevrolet will devote his efforts to engineering investigations and experiments in order to perfect the William Small Company policy of continuous advancement of their products.

A Sensation—A Cleveland.

Miss Mildred Powell and her new Cleveland six, several of which appeared in the salesrooms of the W. P. Herbert Company last week and were immediately surrounded and carried off by enthusiastic owners. Above, Don Smith showing the clean-cut lines of the power plant. Unusually wide doors on the new car afford comfortable entrance to both the front and rear compartments.

STUNT FLYING IS TOO MUCH.

Commercial aviation as a means to quick transportation in connection with business requirements is a wonderful advancement but when it comes to doing the fancy stunts that aviators appear to delight in and that make spectators gasp with astonishment is an altogether different proposition, in the opinion of Don Smith, general manager for the W. P. Herbert Company, distributors for the Cleveland six.

URGENT CALL.

An urgent business transaction required Mr. Smith's presence in Brawley. Profiting by the experience of Glenn Calkins, who came to Los Angeles from Riverside by airplane to sign his contract as a Cleveland dealer, Mr. Smith drove to Riverside with the intention of making the rest of the Brawley trip by plane. Lieut. Payne, a friend, agreed that it would be an excellent demonstration and it was not long until they were under way.

"Straight flying was a wonderful sensation," as Mr. Smith describes it, "and I like it very much." But that just about lets him out. As they approached Palms Springs it could be seen that there was a considerable throng of people about and Lieut. Payne decided to put on an exhibition of fancy work. They went into a loop, the side slip, the tail spin and other gyrations, but the falling leaf took all of the exhiliration out of it for Mr. Smith. A peculiar feeling of sickness overtook him and landing was made at Calipatria. The rest of the trip Mr. Smith made by train.

MOTOR THIEVES UP AGAINST IT.

Fine and Imprisonment to be Handed Out.

Senate Expected to Pass Bill in Near Future.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Early and favorable action is expected in the Senate on the bill providing a punishment by fine or imprisonment or both for the transportation of stolen motor vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce.

The bill, introduced by Representative Dyer of Missouri, was passed by the House of Representatives. It is to be known as the national motor vehicle theft act, the term "motor vehicle" including an "automobile, automobile truck, automobile wagon, motorcycle or any other self-propelled vehicle not designed for running on rails."

A fine not exceeding $5000 or imprisonment of not more than three years, or both, may under the terms of the bill be imposed for the wilful transportation across State lines of a stolen automobile, as well as for the reception and disposition of the machine, and "anyone violating the act may be punished in any district in or through which such motor vehicle has been transported or removed by such offenders."

"There has been and is now a most widespread demand for such a law," said Representative Dyer in urging the passage of the measure by the House. "State laws upon the subject have been inadequate to meet the evil. Thieves steal automobiles and taken them from one State to another and ofttimes have associates in the crime who receive and sell the stolen machines. The loss to the people of the United States by reason of this stealing amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. It is growing worse

STOLEN CARS.

"The total number of cars reported stolen in eighteen western and middle-western cities during 1918 was 22,273. The city of Detroit headed the list with 2637 cars stolen; Chicago, second, 2611; St. Louis, third, 2241. Kansas city led in the list of a total percentage of stolen cars not recovered, 46 per cent. St. Louis was second with 40 per cent. of stolen cars being lost absolutely.

"The following table submitted by Representative Dyer gives, in addition to the cities mentioned, the record of the other eighteen cities referred to:

	Stolen.	Recovered.
Chicago	2,611	1,954
St. Louis	2,241	1,334
Kansas City	1,144	626

HUGE HARVESTS.

"With approximately 6,500,000 automobiles now in use in the United States, the total estimated value of which amounts to $7,800,000,000, Mr. Dyer said thieves found the automobile field one in which they can reap huge harvests. So actively have they worked that it is difficult for the owners of the cheaper cars to obtain theft insurance, which has risen 100 per cent. during the past year on this class of cars, due to the great loss sustained by insurance companies.

"Automobile thieves who make a specialty of this crime do not steal many of the high-priced cars," Mr. Dyer explained, "the reason being, of course, they are not so easily sold."

TRUCK HIGHWAYS FOR HEAVY LOADS.

SPECIAL CONSTRUCTION NECESSARY TO HANDLE CAPACITY LOADS ON BIG CARS.

The building of the truck highway between Los Angeles and the harbor is the first step in the solution of a very difficult problem faced by modern road builders, in the opinion of Walter H. Fisher, Haynes distributor for Southern California.

"There can be no question that constant and extremely heavy motor truck traffic demands a road of heavier construction than the ordinary type of paved road which we build," said Fisher last week. "In my opinion, we should build a few main trunk line roads such as the harbor boulevard, of extremely heavy construction, able to stand up under any sort of traffic.

"These roads would carry the bulk of the motor truck traffic, and trucks of any capacity would be allowed to use them. On the ordinary roads, truck weight could then be limited.

"In this way the expense of road building could be kept within a reasonable figure. It is manifestly impossible to build all our roads of a sufficiently heavy construction to accommodate the extremely heavy loads that the largest trucks carry. There is manifestly no defense of the proposition of letting a very few users of extremely heavy trucks ruin an investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars in roads that are amply strong enough to take care of the average traffic.

"The heavy trucks could thus be limited to certain heavily built roads. To reach points elsewhere, their loads could be transferred to trucks of less capacity."

BETTER CONDITIONS DUE TO AUTO TRUCKS.

Co-operation of the government is a reality now that the real value of interurban lines of motor trucks is realized, for the farmer and for the city dweller. Motor trucks are going to be a great factor, according to Arthur T. Murray, president of the Bethlehem Motors Corporation, Allentown, Pa., in developing city pride and in bettering living conditions, both in the city and in the country.

the man power of the United States was somewhat taxed during the absence of the boys who fought 'over there,' the motor truck not only proved its adaptability to the short haul, but also to lengthy trips. At that time, the inadequacy of the railroads was clearly proven, and now, with the increase of business which calls for increased transportation facilities, the motor truck is firmly established in the realm of transportation.

CLOSE TOUCH.

"Motor transportation companies are found in every part of the United States. Sections of country which heretofore were rarely heard from because of being off the main line of a railroad, have been brought closer to the city. The farmer who was only able to ship to market once or twice a week now has his products in the market every day. In addition, motor trucks deliver commodities to farmers and those people who reside in suburban districts on regular daily schedules, thus enabling them to come in closer contact with the business activities of community.

"Extensive utilization of the motor truck works for the construction of new and better roadways. It is a known fact that the status of a community is largely based upon the highways and the quality of the roads that pass through it. Thus, with the expansion of motor transportation, more work is provided for all, farm products find a daily market, while the city business man is enabled to place his commodities more readily in the homes of the farm folk and suburban dwellers. The scope of the motor truck is unlimited and should be encouraged to the utmost."

Relative to the expansion of the motor truck the West must mark time with the East. Around Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Omaha and St. Joseph, Mo., advancement has been very rapid, unloading platforms and many other installations necessary for the promulgation of the motor transportation idea having been in use for a number of months. In one city a few months ago, according to word received here, more than 575 motor trucks waited from midnight until late next morning to get to the unloading chutes. This difficulty has now been remedied and the same number of trucks are easily handled in a few hours.

Because of the good roads that abound in this State, motor transportation will continue to expand as long as legislative action does not interfere, for the people of this State are cognizant of its great importance to the community as a whole.

GASOLINE PLAYS BIG PART IN RACE.

Comparatively few race goers among the thousands that are thrilled at the great speedway and road races in America appreciate the importance of "gas" and its bearing on the outcome of the contest. Gasoline is just gasoline to them and the race driver fills up and is away on his mad dash for victory.

Few know that nearly every driver has his favorite brand of gasoline and that the fluid that is well adapted for ordinary road driving wouldn't do at all for use in a racing car.

An interesting illustration of this fact was given by Roscoe Sarles, the brilliant young California driver, who came East to open his campaign at Indianapolis last spring. For his special use the Richfield Gasoline Company, of Los Angeles, forwarded 150 one gallon cans by express, each can being packed individually to comply with the express shipping requirements. This supply was sufficient for the season.

MISSIONARY WORK AHEAD FOR CONVOY.

Conclusive demonstrations of the superiority of motor trucks over horse-drawn methods of transportation have been made repeatedly in connection with the motor truck development tour that has been covering the States of Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

While the same opportunities will not be given the Southern California truck tour that will leave Los Angeles next month, it is the belief of the participants that there may be some chance for truck missionary work, according to W. O. Gates, of the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company, entrants of Jumbo-All-American and Smith trucks in the run.

MACK PERFORMANCE COUNTS

Around the World By Mack Truck

Capt. A. E. Ritchey, commanded Co. E, 5th Engineers, U.S.A., that crossed the continent with the first Motor Transport Convoy, using Mack AC trucks.

Capt. Ritchey says:

The Mack Bull Dogs got mixed up in something like 60-odd bridges and a great many culverts. In one day we broke up something like 16 regular bridges, and when I say we I mean the engineers who had the five Macks, and yet on the entire trip we broke but one front spring. In all my experience with motor trucks I have never seen equipment stand up under the hard use, and I might say necessary abuse, that these Macks did from North Platte to the Coast. There is not a member of the whole company but who has acquired a sort of sentimental fondness for the old Bull Dogs by reason of what they did and the way they did it.

We were all overloaded and whenever there was anything hard to do the Macks got the job. We helped everybody and received very little help ourselves. In fact we did not need it.

Give me the kind of roads that trucks should run over and I would consider it a real pleasure taking a fleet of Bull Dogs around the world.

STOPPING WASTE OF PERISHABLE FOODS.

MOTOR TRUCKS AND RAPID DELIVERY EFFECT BIG SAVING IN FOODSTUFFS.

It was estimated by the national Food Administration last year that about one-half of the perishable food products of the country went to waste because of the lack of transportation facilities. This information was given wide publication through the press and the result has been a nation-wide demand for trucks that has literally swamped the factories, according to O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, Southern California distributor of the White truck.

"Data gathered by the White factory through its branches and agencies shows by convincing figures that the farmer and the rancher have come to a realization that the truck is a necessity if they would market all that they raise and hit the market at its best. The man with a truck can haul his beans and his grain and other material to the warehouse or to town in one-third the time it takes his neighbor with horses and wagon," said Fuller.

GOOD OIL PAYS ON LONG EXCURSIONS.

PROTECTION TO VARIOUS PARTS OF MOTOR WELL WORTH EXTRA COST.

While in many parts of the country, especially in the East and Middle West, motorists are putting their cars in the garages, jacking up the wheels and tucking them safely away for the winter, and then looking expectantly at the bob sleigh rusting there in the barn, a silent warning of snows, in California the best motoring season is just beginning.

When the sun loses a little of its vigor and the cool breezes of fall and winter begin to freshen the motorists, it is then that they begin to think of the year's vacation, accordingto L. H. Johnson, president of the Panama Lubricants Company, distributors for Pennzoil. And with the thoughts of a vacation come the thoughts of a motoring trip to some of California's show places.

It is on the road, on a tour, according to Mr. Johnson, that the motorists finds the difference between cheap oil and good oil. In ordinary running cheap oil will do after a fashion, but usually in a long run the cheap oil breaks down quickly. Good oil pays for the slight difference in price by protecting the wearing parts of the machine. That is why, Mr. Johnson says, the motorist should be willing to pay a little more to get something more than just oil—to get good oil.

SLACK SEASON IS DIFFICULT TO FIND.

USUAL PERIOD OF QUIET IS RUSHING THIS YEAR AT TERRIFIC GAIT.

P. H. Stortz, formerly salesmanager of the Pacific Rubber Company, distributor of Horseshoe pneumatic and Polack solid tires, for California and Arizona, was entertained last week by members of the selling organization of that concern, before leaving for San Francisco, where he is now manager of the new branch opened at 150 Mission street.

"This time was chosen for the opening our northern branch, because usually business in this line is lighter than during the summer or winter. It is between seasons. This year is an exception however. Although many tourists have returned to their homes with the conclusion of the vacation period, almost as many are arriving. We have found that there has been little diminution in the demand for both Horsehoe and Polack tires. Unless all signs fail, the volume of business that practically all lines of business will enjoy this winter in Southern California, should break all records," said Stortz.

ALLEY PARKING IS PROHIBITED.

All downtown alleys in this city will henceforth be closed to "parking," according to an announcement served the Automobile Club of Southern California from the local traffic bureau.

There is a city ordinance which states "there will be no parking in any alley in the city of Los Angeles," but some motorists have been getting away with it.

From now on, warns the Auto Club, all cars parked in any alley here will be "tagged" and the owners will pay a fine for the offense, so don't park even for a minute in an alley.

PRODUCTION IS STILL NORMAL.

pleted product. Those which are dependent largely on parts and accessory makers are bound to be hard hit, for the reason that many of the accessory makers do not buy in large quantities and pursue a sort of hand to mouth purchasing policy. Manufacturers whose product is made up largely of parts made outside their factories are now busy checking up to see where they stand and they hope by the end of the week to know definitely how long they can continue operations.

STILL AT IT.

Several of the larger auto plants who are dependent on others for fabricated parts are not likely to cease production as long as their own stocks hold out, it is said. They will continue to turn out cars and ship them without complete equipment if necessary, sending the missing parts to branch factories and dealers at a later period.

Reports from Grand Rapids, Jackson, Flint, Pontiac, Lansing, and Muskegon, other Michigan centers of the automobile and accessory industry are to the effect that production is proceeding merrily despite the steel strike and that there are no indications of immediate shut down for lack of material.

Details of the the new motor car which is to be manufactured in Indianapolis by D. McCall White are awaited with interest by the trade. Mr. White is acknowledged to be one of the foremost automobile engineers in the world. He designed the original Cadillac eight engine. Associated with Mr. White in his new enterprise is E. C. Howard, who, for twelve years was one of the big men in the Cadillac Motor Car Company. While nothing definite is being given out, it is reported that the new car probably will be an eight, possibly a twelve, and that it will retail around $5000.

ALL GUESSING.

Guessing the details of the Lincoln Motor Company's forthcoming car is again rampant in automobile circles. The company's formal announcement is expected almost any day now. Contrary to popular prediction, it is hinted the new vehicle will be a lightweight car.

Rumors that the Packard Motor Car Company will discontinue the manufacture of its twin-six models when the new Packard six is launched are entirely unfounded according to officials of the company, who assert that the twin-six will never be abandoned. It will be some months before the new car—the six—will be ready for the market.

In an effort to alleviate the increasing seriousness of the automobile freight car shortage, the Detroit committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with the Detroit Freight District Traffic Committee, has taken steps to assure a closer and more accurate apportionment of the cars among the motor car factories.

EQUITABLE BASIS.

It was decided that the most equitable basis for the apportionment would be that of each factory's production in relation to the total production for the district. Effective immediately, the apportionments will be made on production figures supplied by the factories each month instead of every four months, as was the case during past shortages.

E. N. Hodges, traffic manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, and chairman of the Detroit District Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who was chiefly instrumental in obtaining the improved methods of apportioning automobile freight cars, holds forth a gloomy outlook for the coming winter.

"The new method of apportioning freight cars will assure more fairness in the distribution of the cars, but it will not increase the total number of cars available for this district," he said. "It looks as if the coming winter will be a bad one from our standpoint, and we may expect to see a great many cars sent out over the highways under their own power."

PERFORMS WELL ON MOUNTAIN GRADES.

All motor cars look good in the showrooms, and they all perform well on smooth boulevards, but when they get down to real action on a rocky mountain road then is the time the discerning motorist is able to tell the car that is honestly built for real work.

This is why G. R. Keith, secretary and treasurer of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, is so enthusiastic about the Standard eight, since his return from a month's vacation in California mountains. He is back again at his office in the Standard Steel showrooms.

CADILLAC FILLS NOVEL PLACE IN INDUSTRY.

A power plant for digging ditches and a portable home for six workmen, are two novel uses of the Cadillac motor car, originated by Art Eversull of Stuart, Ia.

Mr. Eversull is a drainage expert. In laying underground tiling on farm lands the old system of hand digging lacked the necessary element of speed. A modern ditch digger was purchased, and a "53" Cadillac engine was installed as power.

CROSSES HIGHEST DIVIDE.

When L. B. Netzley of Glendora, arrived at Raton, N. M. for the crossing of the continental divide recently he was told that the pass through the mountains was impossible to automobile traffic. He saw cars stuck in the mud that had remained there for several days because their owners had given up in the effort and had proceeded to the nearest town to await the coming of better weather conditions. It had rained and a light snow had fallen but the Californian had been driving his new 1920 model Apperson touring car thousands of miles without being compelled to stop and he was determined to continue at Raton.

The situation was such that it required a careful survey and after looking the road over afoot Mr. Netzley announced that he had owned five Apperson cars and none of them ever got stuck and he did not believe his new one would either.

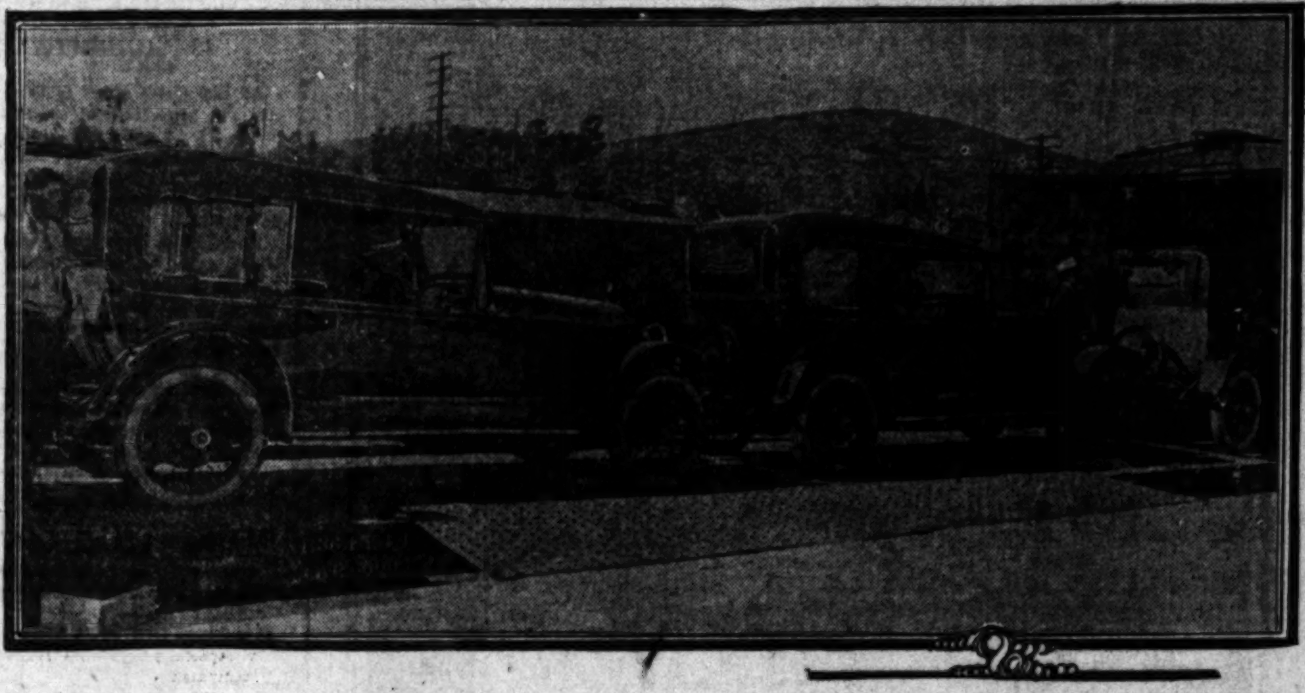
There were other motor tourists who had not his same courage and they gathered around expecting to see him fail to make good or probably meet with disaster. "I just slipped into low gear, went into it slowly and pulled right on through. I did not try any rushing tactics as to spin the wheels would lose traction and cause the car to wallow deep into the mud and the whole thing was easy," Mr. Netzley told Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the Los Angeles Apperson branch.

When Mr. Netzley reached Los Angeles his 1920 Apperson showed it had been driven 3400 miles. The owner accepted delivery of the car at the factory and starting at Kokomo drove east to the Atlantic seaboard, then turned back for home. He says he encountered about everything there was to offer in varieties of touring conditions but without particular incident until Raton was reached.

BOX TO DRAW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19. — Joe Lynch of New York fought twelve fast rounds here tonight against Frankie Mason of Fort Wayne, with the honors even. The referee was criticized when he called the bout a draw. Mason had a shade the better of it in the third and fourth rounds but after this Lynch rained home right crosses time and again with telling effect and from the fifth to the eleventh round had the advantage.



First Shipment of Los Angeles-made Motor Cars.

To Miss Jane Morgan fell the honor of driving three Leach Power Plus Six cars aboard a freight car at River Station the past week. The machines were constructed in the local factory and are being shipped to Ranger, Tex.

FIRST SHIPMENT EN ROUTE.

Industrially speaking, an event of epochal significance was the shipment last week of the first Los Angeles-made automobiles, when a carload of Leach Power Plus sixes was made up at the Southern Pacific's river station for Ranger, Tex.

The management, sales organization and factory forces of the Leach Biltwell Mortor Company celebrated the event as signalizing the first of regular weekly shipments by the plant. Cars are now being allotted, according to M. A. Leach, president of the company, in the order in which dealers have placed their orders.

"Notwithstanding the pronounced demand, which has developed right at home for the Leach Power Plus sixes, we expect to be able to satisfy in part, at least, the outside demand," Mr. Leach said.

"We have orders now from as far East as Oklahoma and as far north as Vancouver. These, our representatives inform us, are but the forerunner of a business, which without the facilities our new factory will give us would more than tax the capacity of our present plant.

"However, we expect within less than six months to be operating the first unit of the proposed new factory of the Leach Biltwell Motor Company, when the company will be in a position to expand even into the export trade."

To Miss Jane Morgan fell the honor of piloting the new Leach sport models to the Southern Pacific's freight house for transport to the town of Ranger, Tex., which boasts more millionaires to the square mile than any community of like size in the entire country.

TO START RACING SEASON.

Fastest Cars and Drivers in the World Promised for Local Speedway.

The 1920 motor racing season will officially open on the new Los Angeles speedway at Beverly Hills next Washington's Birthday. The Los Angeles contest will be the first of the season which the A.A.A. will recognize as a major racing event, and which will count in the scoring system to be kept next year by the national racing board to determine the speedway championship of America. All of the high officials of the Three A are keenly interested in the new Los Angeles speedway project, and all have given their promise to be present at the opening race in February.

SUPPORT PROMISED.

These are some of the high lights of the report brought back to Los Angeles last week by Al G. Faulkner, prominent motor-car dealer of this city, and who is likewise a director in the new speedway enterprise, after a trip to New York City, where he was in conference with Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the A.A.A. contest board, and other prominent racing men. Faulkner reports that every possible support has been promised the Los Angeles track by the men in whose hands the direction of the sport lies, and they assured him they would do everything in their power to see that the races on the Los Angeles track should assume a national importance second to none in the United States.

Just prior to leaving New York Faulkner gave a luncheon at the Waldorf which was attended by Sinsabaugh, editor of Motor Life; F. A. Croselmire of the contest board, and J. M. Danziger of Los Angeles. On this occasion Kennerdell gave Faulkner the details of the proposed speedway championship contest that will be determined at the end of next season's races by the standing of the drivers who have won in the various events. Points will be awarded only in the speedway events that are judged of major importance by the contest board, and the Los Angeles race next February will be the first on the list. This will unquestionably serve to bring the entire field of the fastest pilots in the world to Los Angeles next February, for in addition to a highly-prized trophy cup, it is probable that a cash prize of not less than $10,000 will be awarded to the speedway champion at the end of the season.

"Mr. Kennerdell told Mr. Danziger and myself that the contest board looked to Los Angeles to establish a prestige for their contests on the new speedway second to none in America,' said Mr. Faulkner last week. 'You will have a new track of the most modern character,' he told us after hearing our plans. 'You are located in America's greatest playground, with thousands of visitors seeking amusement. Los Angeles has been famous for the motor races held there since the days of the first Santa Monica contests. You have more people interested in automobiles than perhaps any other State in the Union. We are thoroughly confident of the ability of the new speedway association to make its races big-league affairs of the highest order and any co-operation that we can give you will be yours for the asking.'

MANY ENTRIES.

"We were more than delighted at the reception which our plans for the speedway received among all the prominent eastern racing men. We were promised co-operation everywhere in the matter of securing entries of both American and foreign cars. There is not the slightest doubt that the first race on the new track will see by far the fastest field of cars assembled on an American track."

If further inducement to bring the best drivers in America and Europe here next February were needed, it came in the shape of an announcement by Manager A. M. Young of the speedway association, to the effect that the prize money offered by the association for the opening race will be $25,000. In addition to this, there will be the customary prizes offered by tire companies, accessory men, etc., so that the February race will offer far more inducement in the way of money rewards than has ever been offered on the Pacific Coast before.

Just how the prize money will be divided has not yet been announced, nor can it be until the entry blanks for the first race have been approved by the contest board. The blanks have already been prepared by Manager Young and are now in the hands of the contest board for its approval.

SUDDEN BRAKING IS HARMFUL TO TIRES.

LOCKING WHEELS IS WORST PRACTICE ON SLATE FOR WEARING OUT CASINGS.

Thousands of tires are destroyed each year by severe and sudden application of the brakes. One application often scrapes and grinds the tread rubber off entirely and renders the casing beyond repair. Some valuable hints on brake application are offered by the Diamond Rubber Company, who have instituted a more mileage campaign for tire users.

Both new and experienced drivers are guilty of the misuse of foot and emergency brakes. Locking the wheels will not, in all instances, immediately halt the car; the momentum and weight very often cause the rear wheels to slide along a considerable distance and gouge off the tread rubber until the fabric is bared and ruptured. However, if the damage has not been too great the owner may still save his tire by giving it early attention to protect the fabric from decay and weakening effect of moisture, and to prevent dirt from working under the rubber. The inside of the casing should be carefully inspected and any threads or plies of fabric broken from the strain should be repaired.

Quick, sharp turns or fast driving at curves usually causes rear wheels to slide and skid sideways. This practice will wear off the tread rubber rapidly and is extremely harmful to the fabric body of the tire because of the abnormal stress and strain.

HIGHEST SPEED NOT ALWAYS ON BOARDS.

A performance which indicates that the attainment of high speed in automobile races is not limited the contests held on specially-constructed speedways is the one that has just been accomplished by O. W. Smith of Thomasville, Ga. In a Cadillac car equipped with Goodyear cord tires, Smith won the free-for-all 100-mile race held at Pablo Beach, Labor Day, at a speed of 85 miles an hour.

REDUCING THEFTS UP TO CONFERENCE.

Ways and means of reducing automobile thefts will be the subject of a conference of American motor car manufacturers during the New York automobile show, according to George M. Dickson, president of the National Motor Car and Vehicle Corporation of Indianapolis.

The meeting will be held to consider a plan submitted by George Oliver, chief clerk of the magistrate's court of the city of New York, for the co-operation of automobile manufacturers with police departments and detective bureaus throughout the country for the checking of automobile thievery.

PLEASURE CAR IS USED FOR TRUCKING.

CARRIES TON LOAD EACH DAY AND IS GOOD AS NEW AT END OF YEAR.

To date the pleasure car has had the reputation of being the frivolous member of the automobile family—called upon only to contribute to the pleasure jaunts of its owner—never considered where real work was needed, until a San Gabriel farmer discovered a potential truck in his Nelson pleasure car.

Changing a passenger car into a one-ton truck without ever lifting the top was effected by E. A. Chubbuck, the San Gabriel farmer referred to above, with his Nelson car—and the remarkable part of his performance is that, after a year of service, his car is not only running, but is in the best of condition, and not one cent has been expended upon repairs.

Mr. Chubbuck has attached a trailer to his Nelson in which he carries 1400 pounds of milk twice each day to Los Angeles. In addition to the heavy load on the trailer, Mr. Chubbuck also places on each trip a load of nearly 1000 pounds of fruit and vegetables to be brought to the Los Angeles market. The combined load makes a good ton to be drawn twice each day from San Gabriel to Los Angeles.

The heavy work put on the Nelson car has caused no ill effects to the machine. It performs its dual duties, both as a pleasure car and truck, remarkably well, according to Mr. Chubbuck, exceeding in its performance the records of cars used only for pleasure. Mr. Chubbuck obtains, according to the details he related to Frank Nelson, distributor in Southern California for Nelson cars, more than 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 300 miles on a quart of oil. He has had no trouble, even, with the tires of the car.

SYSTEMATIC USE OF TRUCKS IS NEEDED.

EFFICIENT ORGANIZATION SOLVES MANY MOTOR VEHICLE PROBLEMS.

Systematic organization of motor-truck express lines already in operation and intelligent inauguration of new routes will afford at least a partial solution to the present living problem, according to men prominent in industry and commerce.

Lack of adequate transportation is one of the chief reasons offered for the present crisis. In many cities, government and State officials are investigating food waste, which, according to the commission men, may be traced directly to transportation delays.

There are numerous instances of commission firms having been indicted for the wholesale disposal of foodstuffs, which, the commission men claim, were delivered by railroads in unsalable condition.

Efficient organization of the motor-truck lines in various communities with the idea of eliminating the possibility of idle trucks and light return loads will go far toward solving this transportation problem and reducing transportation costs, in the opinion of many who have given this phase of the matter careful consideration.

"To obtain maximum returns from motor-truck transportation, the numerous lines now operating should be systematically organized," according to E. A. Williams, Jr., president of the Garford Motor Truck Company, who has devoted considerable time to the study of the transportation problem.

"Without a unity of purpose there is a capacity waste in every community. This naturally results in a loss of tonnage and increased costs. It has been said that 70 per cent. of the motor trucks operating in the United States during 1918 traveled empty one way. From these figures it was estimated there was a capacity waste of 283,500,000 tons during the year.

"With the establishment of highway transportation commissions in the various States and the organization of transportation bureaus in many of our cities this tonnage waste is being eliminated. In several cities the haulage concerns have formed associations and have established central offices from which the motor-truck transportation activities of that particular community are directed. These associations are affiliating with associations in near-by cities in order to further decrease the possibility of idle trucks and light return loads and to increase the general efficiency of the service."

MEN IN THE MAKING IS LATEST FILM.

"Men in the Making" is the practical title of a three-reel moving picture film just completed by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, featuring the activities of the Boy Scouts of America.

SOMETHING NEW IN TRUCK RUNS.

MACHINES ARE TURNED INTO TRAILERS IN ORDER TO SPEED DELIVERY.

Something new in the annals of truck drive-aways was undertaken last week by a host of G.M.C. dealers from Hooper, Neb., when six drivers started with twelve G.M.C. trucks overland from the G.M.C. factory at Pontiac.

The front wheels were removed from three of the trucks and the front axle was placed on wooden stringers at the rear of another model of the same type and weight. The rear wheels of one model rested on the ground and the front was fastened to the rear axle of the other truck with a swivel, so that it could turn. This virtually made a two-wheel trailer out of the rear truck.

The long journey to Hooper was made in six days' actual running time without a mishap to any of the trucks. Anthony Tonberg, G.M.C. dealer at Hooper, upon arriving at his destination, wired the factory as follows: "Arrived here this morning in excellent shape. Could easily have made the trip in a day or two less by hard driving. The motors acted wonderfully well and we did not have the slightest bit of trouble. Our new method of truck transportation can be used without the slightest doubt of results."

AUTOMOBILES MUST OPERATE WITH EASE.

"Nowadays, as every roadway and city street is crowded to the utmost with motor vehicular traffic, the car that operates and handles with the greatest ease is the most popular," says John D. Mansfield, general manager of the Dort Motor Car Company.

"This is one reason why the Dort car has such an enthusiastic following. In traffic it handles with the least amount of exertion. it can be completely turned around in the ordinary street.

THE SMARTEST CAR OF 1920

Oldsmobile 8

THE sales record that the new Oldsmobile Eight has set since its appearance would be rightly regarded as marvelous were it any other car.

But, because it is the Oldsmobile, with twenty-one years of successful motor car manufacturing experience behind it, the immense popularity of the new eight is not to be wondered at.

It is merely the sort of a sales record to be expected from a car with the appearance, the performance and the pedigree of the Oldsmobile Eight.

Blaze in San Gabriel Cany Shows Urgent Need.

Objections to "Scenic Roa Now Out of Order.

BY D. V. STARR,
Manager J. W. Leavitt & C

All week long the sky to north of Los Angeles has been d ened with the smoke of the serious mountain fires known Angeles reserve for the twenty-five years. Incalculable d age has been wrought to the w sheds of the great San Gabriel C yon and of the Tejungas. The ering smoke columns have w a message in the sky that be plain to every resident of Lo geles county, viz.: the need of adequate system of mountain through the canyons of our forest reserves.

Rangers returning from a less fight against the fire blaze in the East Fork of the Gabriel declared that if they had an adequate force of fire ers at hand on the first day th broke out, it could have easily extinguished. If an auto bile road had existed that w have permitted the rushing of tr loads of fire-fighters to a point the mouth of Cattle Canyon is every probability that the could have been controlled at outset. No such road exists, and fire-fighters were compelled to for miles above Follows Camp.

Their food had to be packed Equipment for them was The fighters were exhausted before they reached a point w their work began. As a co quence the fire spread and through the tinder-dry hills, a will take years to restore the beauty of the canyons of the Gabriel, and their lost utility "sponges" to conserve the w rainfall.

Whenever a movement has started in the past looking to the building of mountain ro certain opposition has always raised on the grounds that they "scenic roads" for the "favored who have machines." INTERESTING.

"One of the most interesting facts disclosed was that less than one-half of Franklin owners ever carry spare tires and then, in the majority of cases, only when the tires are nearing the end of their long period of serviceability.

"Countless additional facts of tire usage of various models prove that Franklin scientific lightweight principles are correct in giving long tire life. The Franklin light total weight, light unsprung weight and shock absorbing qualities of construction again receive national vindication."

WANT TO PURCHASE OLDEST COLE CAR.

ORIGINAL OWNER STILL USING IT EVERY DAY AND HATES TO SELL.

Even though they are distributors of the Cole line of aero eight cars, Davidson, House & Meyer are in the market for a Cole, and, although the firm is receiving regular carload shipments of Coles, the particular one it is after seems farther away than ever.

The Cole they want is the first one ever built, which, though having been driven over 90,000 miles in its eleven years of use, is still in the hands of its original purchaser, P. K. Wilson of Jacksonville, Fla.

THE OLDEST COLE.

"We would like to have it in our salesrooms here," H. L. Perkins, sales manager of Davidson, House & Meyer, said, "for several reasons. One is that the original Cole unmistakably shows how the 'aeroline' lines originated with the Cole, which features it today."

"But do you think," Perkins added, "that the Florida man will part with his old Cole? Not so you could notice it. I wrote him a letter and here is what he replied:

"'We use the old Cole every day and it can be depended on for a good hard drive each time it goes out of the garage. The fact is, I need it in my business, for one of my salesmen uses it regularly every day. To me, one of the marvels of this old car's performance is the remarkably high gasoline mileage I get from it. My average is consistently from fourteen to fifteen miles to the gallon. The original magneto and carburetor are still doing efficient work. Practically all of the original parts are in the car. Even the original muffler is still muffling.'"

Perkins hasn't despaired altogether of getting hold of the car and he is trying to get the consent of the firm members of Davidson, House & Meyer to a trip in person to Florida to negotiate for it.

WEARS SMILE THAT REFUSES TO SLIP.

W. J. Hartman, general manager of the newly-opened western branch of the Advance Rubber Company at 721 South Olive street, is wearing a smile that won't come off since two carloads of the Advance Top Notch tires arrived in town. This shipment has been expected every day for nearly a month, but owing to the recent railroad strike arrived over three weeks late.

Mr. Hartman says: "We have been swamped with orders from dealers throughout the West for the new Top Notch casings and at last we are able to make deliveries on all sizes as this shipment gives us a complete stock of all odd and standard sizes."

BUSINESS DINNER FOR TIRE EXPERTS.

SERVICE EMPHASIZED AS MOST VITAL FACTOR IN WHOLE GAME.

Miller tire dealers in Los Angeles city and county were the guests of the Miller Tire Sales Company, at a business dinner given by this aggressive concern at the City Club last Wednesday night. More than sixty dealers were present and after the dinner, the remainder of the evening was given over to sales and service discussion.

The occasion brought out the fact that the Miller tire organization in Los Angeles is a remarkably strong and aggressive one and that the perfect co-ordination of the sales and the service departments, is essential to success, no matter how superior the tire may be.

"Service is one of the most important features of the automobile tire business and in order that purchasers in our territory may secure this conveniently and to which they are entitled, we have established a large number of dealers who will take prompt and efficient care of their requirements. Every dealer at the dinner was brimming over with enthusiasm. Miller tires are now being used by a majority of the large transportation companies, with which the tire cost per mile is an important feature," said L. S. Utler, manager of the Miller Tire Sales Company and who presided.

GUARANTEES ON ROAD TO DISCARD.

Concerning the discussion of the subject of mileage guarantee for motor tires that has now become a national issue among manufacturers, one of the most prominent men in the entire industry has made the statement that he believes there is not a tire producer in the country who will be guaranteeing tires on the mileage basis two years hence. A number will not wait that long, but some will be more or less delayed because of sales that now are being made under the guarantee plan and will have to be backed up.

J. B. Wood, distributor for Hewitt tires and tubes, is of the opinion that the public will not be hard to convince of the justice in the discontinuance of the mileage guarantee.

CARLOAD OF TIRES AND ALL ONE SIZE.

UNUSUAL SHIPMENT KNOCKS PINS FROM LOCAL CASING MERCHANT.

Receipt of a carload of tires the past week by Hawley, King & Co., distributors of Globe handmade, wrapped tread cord and fabric tires, occasioned one of the biggest surprises which H. H. Anderson, manager of the tire department, has yet encountered in his career in the tire business.

"Not that the receipt of a carload of tires surprises us," he remarked, "but to get a whole carload of one size, and those in 30x3½, knocked me off my pins for a minute.

"It only serves to illustrate how the company, which has but recently doubled the capacity of its plant at Trenton, N. J., is doing things. They wired me from the factory that they were sending out some Ford-size tires. And they ship a carload."

Anderson accepted the situation philosophically, not to say joyously, because of the numerous requests which have been received from the large number of dealers they are supplying.

FAST CAR NEEDS SPEEDY BRAKES.

"Have you ever watched a fast boxer 'pull' his wallop when mixing it with an inferior training partner?" The speaker was Edgar Apperson, well-known pioneer motorcar manufacturer of Kokomo. "It's one of the best illustrations I know of the way the Apperson eight takes the risk out of speed. A good boxer has the speed of his blow so well under control that he can slow a terrific swipe down to harmlessness in a few inches. The Apperson eight actually brakes to a dead stop from forty miles an hour in four seconds—forty years."

RUSH DELIVERIES BY AIR ROUTE.

The real efficiency of rushed deliveries of merchandise by airplane was convincingly demonstrated by Edward Hubbard, Seattle aviator, recently when he carried a shipment of automobile tires from Seattle to Everett, delivering the tires within less than forty-five minutes after the order had been placed by telephone.

L. A. Warford, publicity director in Seattle for the Diamond Rubber Company, Inc., arranged with Aviator Hubbard for the delivery.

YUMA OUT FOR BETTER ROADS.

Taxpayers to Vote on Large Bond Issues.

New Highways to Connect Many Parts of County.

Yuma-to-Mohawk Route as Desert Alternate.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Sept. 24.—If the recommendations of its highway commission be approved by the taxpayers, Yuma county will spend on the improvement of its roads the sum of $1,200,000, this in addition to $150,000 from the Federal government and the State. That a bond issue for the major sum is popular was shown at a street dance given in Yuma Saturday night under the auspices of the County Commercial Club, especially to secure funds for the campaign.

The county in area is one of the largest in Arizona, but is one of the lesser in the points of population and property valuation. Mainly desert, it is settled most thickly around Yuma, eastward along the Gila River Valley and along the line of the Arizona and California Railroad, in the northern part of the county. It is proposed to build a road of high class eastward from Yuma to Mohawk, from which point will branch roads toward Ajo and Phoenix.

The former is to connect with a thoroughfare planned by Pima county, giving an alternative way through the desert for through travel. It is expected the State will complete the road from Mohawk to a point near Agua Caliente, giving direct access to Phoenix over a route now almost impassable at points. A new thoroughfare is planned to Quartzsite, Bouse and Swansea, to the north, with a crossroad along the Arizona and California Railroad from Parker eastward to the county line. In addition, excellent highways are to be built to connect the settlements of the Yuma Valley.

REPUBLIC'S NEW EXPORT MANAGER.

Republic Motor Truck Company, Inc., of Alma, Mich., announces the appointment of Vernon E. Bush as manager of the export sales division.

Mr. Bush was for more than ten years engaged in the automotive field, handling tractors, general farm equipment and automotive products for export. For the past three years he was sales promotion manager (foreign department) of the White Motor Company, with headquarters in New York City. For seven years previous to that connection Mr. Bush was assistant general sales manager of the Advance Rumely Company of La Porte, Ind.

BATTERIES ON TIME PAYMENTS

With unqualified insurance of at least 18 months service without any repair expense whatsoever

Many motorists through lack of sufficent ready money are oftentimes forced to buy an inferior battery or resort to a rebuilt article. They know it is foolish to do so, but prefer to do it rather than borrow money or ask favors.

It is to do away with just this necessity that we have inaugurated our new time payment plan, enabling every motorist in this territory to get a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery and put the transaction on a purely impersonal business basis.

Willard Threaded Rubber Batteries sold by us mean longer service—no repair expense whatsoever for at least 18 months—they mean less battery grief in every way.

Threaded Rubber insulation is the answer and no other battery made (no exceptions) has it because it is fully protected by U. S. patents.

Willard Threaded Rubber Batteries with the 18 months' insurance are for sale — cash or terms — at any of the following places:

LATEST RULING ON FORD CARS.

State Vehicle Department Interprets Law.

Not Necessary for All Fords to Have Batteries.

Elimination of Glare is First Move of Officials.

A flood of inquiries by Ford owners at the Los Angeles bureau of the State Motor Vehicle department as to the simplest and least expensive method of complying with the new headlight law has prompted a ruling by the department at Sacramento.

"The most recent ruling of the California Motor Vehicle Department states that it is not necessary for Ford cars to be equipped with a battery in order to meet the requirements of the law," B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, said, adding, "every Ford owner should read the ruling, which is as follows:

ELIMINATE GLARE.

"'The attitude of the department is to carry out the intent of the Legislature to eliminate dangerous glare. Accordingly, we suggest that where a Ford owner does not desire to purchase a certified manufactured device, he can buy a Standard Rib glass, put in a 21 vacuum bulb or a 27 gas-filled type, tilt his lights four feet in 100, and rotate the rib glass 20 deg., clockwise, which is to the right of the perpendicular, 1½ inches.

"'If a Ford owner desires to purchase a manufactured device, any of the certified devices that will permit of the use of a 21 candlepower vacuum or 27 gas-filled lamp will meet the requirements of the law as regards dangerous glare. Inasmuch as there are no ten or twelve candlepower lamps available in the market, it will be impossible for owners using the plain glass to conform to the requirements of the headlight law, so Ford owners must use an approved device of some nature.

RIB GLASS.

"'The approved home-made device best adapted to Ford cars is the Standard Rib glass, or any of the certified manufactured devices set forth in our list. Of course, there are certain manufactured devices in our table that cannot be used on Fords, these including lenses where the candlepower of the lamps permissible is less than 21 vacuum or 27 gas-filled type. This for the reason that these are the only two types of lamps that are on the market in the nine volt.

"'We have gone into the reasons for our ruling on a previous occasion and it is not necessary to repeat them here. But we repeat again that the department's attitude is first to eliminate dangerous glare. After we have accomplished this, we will go into the other features of the act as to the minimum and maximum light; but to comply with the intent of the Legislature as regards dangerous glare, it will not tbe necessary under our rule for Ford cars to install batteries.

"'However, if the owner desires to do so they will get better results, but the department will not and has not made such a rule.'"

FALLING THROUGH BRIDGES NO JOKE.

CROSS-COUNTRY MACKS HAVE HARD TIME WITH FRAGILE STRUCTURES.

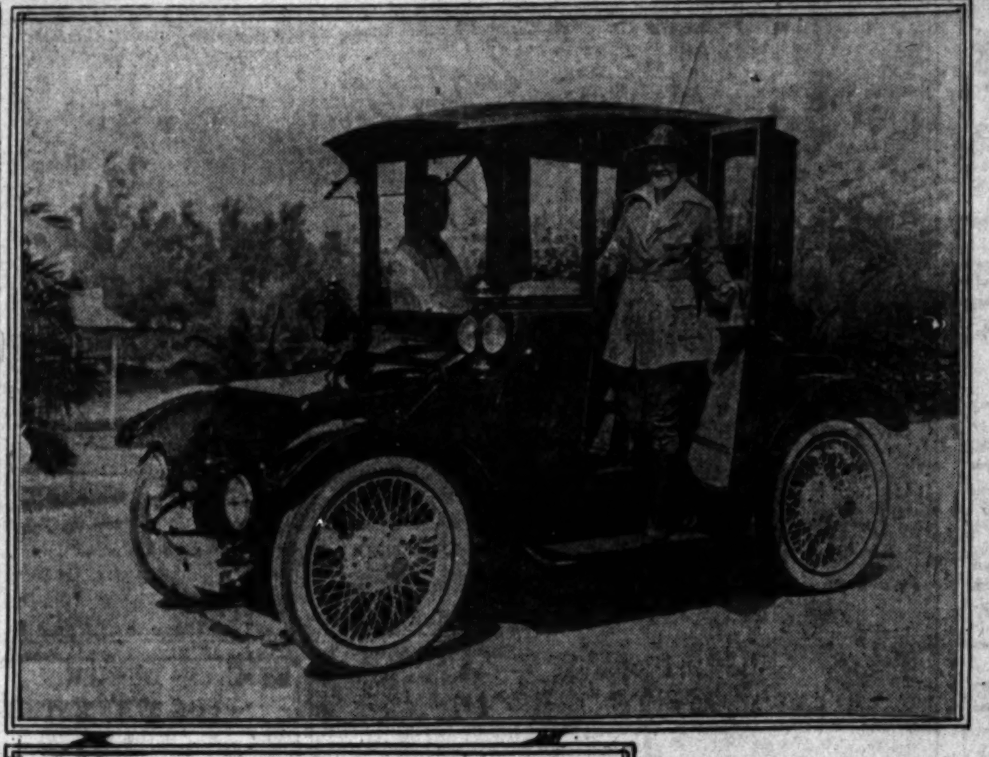
One of the most important developments of the recent United States Army Motor Transport Corps transcontinental convoy will come from placing before the country evidence of the actual need for permanently improved highways. The officers of the convoy have been convinced that the country's principal trunk lines must be so constructed that they can support any load and amount of traffic they may be called upon to do. Not only must the roads be built to stand up under heavy traffic but the bridges must be equally as strong. That approximately 100 bridges on the Lincoln highway, the country's best-known ocean-to-ocean route, should collapse under the weight of the army trucks was spoken of by officers as an unwarranted state of affairs.

Capt. A. E. Ritchey, who commanded Co. E, Fifth Engineers, the company that made the trip with five five and one-half-ton Mack trucks, was one of the officers most emphatic in his expression about the need for better roads and more substantial bridges. In a letter, a copy of which has been received by W. R. Stoner, manager of the International-Mack Corporation, distributors here for Mack trucks, Capt. Ritchey says:

"I have checked up the bridges the Mack trucks got mixed up in and I think we went into sixty odd, not including a great many culverts. In one day we broke up something like sixteen regular bridges and when I say we, I mean the engineers who had the five Macks and yet on the entire trip we broke but one front spring. In all my experience with motor trucks I have never seen equipment stand up under the hard use and I might say necessary abuse that these Macks did from North Platte to the Coast. There is not a member of the whole company but who has acquired a sort of sentimental fondness for the old bulldogs by reason of what they did and the way they did it."

FAST PROGRESS IN DIRIGIBLE FLYING.

Progress in dirigible instruction at Langley Field has been very advanced during the past two or three weeks. At the present time there is but one ship there, and this of the smaller type. However, it is expected that within a very short time, at least two or three more ships will be sent to Langley Field, and it is hoped that one of the latter will be the latest French designed dirigible, built by the Zodiac Company for the American navy during the war. This ship has a volume of 219,000 cubic feet, and has a length of 286 feet.



The Final Word in Electric Cars.

One of the new Raulang machines just received by the Gaffney Motor Sales Company of this city. The same firm handles the Milburn light electric and the Owen Magnetic. G. R. Beach, sales manager, and who has been in the electric car game for twenty years, is showing one of the big battery units which furnish the motive power for the Raulang.

IMPROVING SOLID TIRES.

After a long period of experimentation, a new solid truck tire embodying two entirely new principles of construction is now being placed on the market by the United States Tire Company.

The two new principles involved in the manufacture of this tire are so radically different from all other existing methods of manufacture that they are attracting close attention from tire engineers, according to C. K. Whidden, manager of the solid truck tire department. Many improvements in solid tire manufacture have been made since the advent of the motor truck, but for none of them have the broad claims been made which are made for this new tire.

One of the claims made is that a method has been discovered of eliminating the "grain" in the rubber and thus greatly reducing splitting and cracking, one of the chief causes of trouble in solid tires. The other is that a long step forward has been made in solving the problem of preventing tires from separating from the tire bands.

With regard to this second claim, it is pointed out that it has been the custom until now to fasten the rubber tire to the steel base by means of dove-tailed grooves in the steel band. This union was mechanical, and served the purpose of holding the rubber on the band with a varying degree of success.

The United States Tire Company's laboratories have discovered a new process which enables them to form a chemical union between the steel and rubber and at last are able to announce that rubber can be vulcanised to steel, provided the steel is treated in the peculiar manner developed by their chemists. This feature will practically eliminate base separation, one of the most bothersome of all solid tire troubles.

The other important improvement embodied in the new tire relates to the rubber itself, and is the result of long study of rubber and rubber compounds.

CONCRETE ROADS GIVE HARD TEST.

CONSTANT RUNNING, WITH HEAVY LOADS PUTS TIRES TO SEVERE STRAIN.

To every motorist, tire mileage is an important thing, but to A. R. Sanger of San Diego it is a vital, all-important factor in determining whether his month's business shall show a balance on the debit or credit side of the ledger. For Mr. Sanger operates passenger busses between San Diego and Camp Kearny, using several cars for this purpose.

To be able to make a profit on the passenger business that is handled, according to Mr. Sanger, both the automobile and the tires must give the best of service at all times and must be able to stand the wear, tear and grind of the concrete roads between the southern city and the camp. The requirements are necessarily difficult. The roads, while comparatively level, are of concrete and cause considerable grinding on the tires. In addition eight to ten passengers are hauled each trip and the heavy load makes an additional strain on the tires.

Even under such conditions Mason cord tires give excellent service, according to the tale told by Mr. Sanger on a visit last week to C. Fred Thompson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, distributors for Mason tires in Southern California and Arizona. After numerous tests with many brands of tires, Mr. Sanger said, he decided to stick to Masons as the one best bet. While other tires showed a mileage of from 5000 to 7000 miles all that they were guaranteed for, the Mason tire did not stop at its guarantee but two tires on his machine went 19,000 and 14,000 respectively without retreading or half-soling. They are still on his car, and according to Mr. Sanger, even under hard conditions are good for several thousand more miles.

ALWAYS MANAGE TO FINISH RACE.

STOCK CARS USED SUCCESSFULLY BY MANY FAMOUS RACE DRIVERS.

"Hurling a roaring, flaming mass of machinery around a sun-baked brick oval at a speed of nearly a hundred miles an hour is a sport for some men, while it is a grim business proposition for others," said Harold L. Arnold, distributor of Hudson cars for Southern California and Arizona, today.

GRIM BUSINESS.

"But, in any case, it is a flirtation with death, in which the players stake their lives and hopes of winning a fortune on their own skill, courage, knowledge of their cars and the endurance of the cars themselves. So it is but natural that no class of men should know automobiles better than racing drivers.

"Therefore, the number of these men who use Hudsons is a notable tribute to the quality and endurance of the super-six. In every case they have bought their cars from stock, paying list price just like every other owner. And in their races they receive no assistance of any kind from the factory outside of the service which is given to any Hudson owner. They pay their own expenses of every kind, take care of their own cars and drive them as they please.

SUCCESSFUL.

"Notable among these Hudson owners are Ira Vail, Denny Hickey and Ora Haibe, all of whom had such implicit confidence in their Hudsons that they entered them in the recent 500-mile race at Indianapolis, competing against a score of specially-built foreign and American racing machines. Although every one of these Hudsons was at least two years old, they all justified this confidence by finishing the race, Vail coming in with the money.

"All of these performances go to show the esteem in which the men who know automobiles best hold the Hudson super-six."

INSPECTION OF ROAD FOR EL PASO-PHOENIX RACE SHOWS IT IN GOOD CONDITION.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL PASO, Sept. 25.—Entries for the El Paso-Phoenix road race, which starts here November 2, will be closed October 20, according to announcement today by Robert H. Rinehart, official referee of the race. No entry fees will be received after midnight of that date. Drawing for position will be held in the evening of October 23. This will determine the order in which the racers will leave El Paso.

Mr. Rhinehart, accompanied by C. H. Lester, returned last night from a two days' trip over the roads of New Mexico. In the two days they covered 200 miles of road, which they found were in very good condition as a general thing. One bad stretch of road west of Deming in Luna county was caused by lack of culverts in a graded road bed, resulting in a badly washed out bit of highway. Another stretch of road sixteen miles north of El Paso in New Mexico could be repaired by a couple of days' work with a truck and a four man crew Mr. Rinehart reported.

Fred Sherman of Deming, proprietor of a garage at that place, named chief officials of the race for that place. Mr. Sherman will appoint and have charge of the checkers and timers for Deming, and will have the handling of any matters which may come up for attention at that town.

During their trip Mr. Rhinehart and Mr. Lester received three applications for entry—one from Silver City, one from Lordsburg, and one from a rancher residing near Deming.

BIG PURSE FOR DESERT CLASSIC.

El Paso-Phoenix Race to be a Record-Breaker.

E. C. Bledsoe Named for Bisbee Control Station.

Trophy Cup will Keep Interest in Future Races.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL PASO, Sept. 25.—Dr. Ed C. Bledsoe of Bisbee, one of the best known motor enthusiasts of Arizona, has been named the official representative of the Automotive Trades and Highways Department of the Chamber of Commerce of El Paso, in the coming road race from El Paso to Phoenix, and will have entire charge of the night control at Bisbee, where the racers will spend the night. Dr. Bledsoe's selection insures efficient handling of the racers at Bisbee when they make their morning start on the second day of the race.

SUCCEEDS HIM.

In previous races Joe Gray, secretary of the Bisbee Commercial Club, has always been in charge of the control, but Mr. Gray is at present in Honolulu, and Dr. Bledsoe is chosen to succeed him.

The coming event will be the third race to be run between El Paso and Phoenix, and in all probability it will be a record-breaker in every respect. Plans are already on foot to make it an annual affair, and it is probable that a trophy cup will be offered to stimulate interest in future events.

TO BOOST PURSE.

Several automobile loads of El Paso automobile men and race boosters will make the trip to Phoenix during the latter part of the month, and probably will be joined at Phoenix by a party of Phoenix men. The purpose of the trip will be to assist the cities en route to subscribe their end of the purse, and to advertise the race. Much interest is already manifest throughout the southwest, and when the racers pass over the course the road will be lined with sightseers and spectators throughout the greater part of its length.

MORE CASH.

Word was received today from the Warren District Auto Club at Bisbee guaranteeing $1000 toward the prize purse. This with the sums already raised by the Automotive Trades and Highway Department of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce and the State Fair Association of Arizona makes a total guarantee to date of $6000, with Phoenix, Douglas and Tucson yet to hear from. With the entry fees it is probable that the total purse will exceed $12,000, which compares very favorably with the $6100 and $7100 of former races.

VESPER STRONG FOR CALIFORNIA ROADS.

MAKES STATEMENT THAT PACIFIC COAST ROADS ARE FINEST IN THE WORLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Sept. 25.—"Highways mean automobiles and more automobiles," according to F. W. A. Vesper, president of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, who has just returned to St. Louis after a six weeks' trip on the west coast. Vesper visited Washington, Oregon and California while gone. Three thousand miles of Vesper's trip was made by automobile. The national president drove from North Yakima to Seattle, and then from San Francisco to Los Angeles and San Diego. The return from San Diego to San Francisco was made by automobile also, as the railroad strike in Southern California paralyzed railway traffic and forced Vesper's return to San Francisco after he already had his reservations eastward from Los Angeles.

"Never was the automobile's value as a carrier better demonstrated than in this California rail strike," Vesper declared. "There is a wonderful highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It takes two days to make the trip by automobile, driving steadily all the time. When the trains from Los Angeles were annuled thousands of persons were forced to travel by auto, truck and jitney bus. There was a continual procession of cars from Los Angeles to San Francisco and another stream back of Los Angeles residents marooned in the north.

"The Pacific Coast is positively made over highways. No finer roads exist in the world. Highways in turn mean automobiles, as evidenced by the fact that in Los Angeles alone there are 75,000 registered cars. One person of every four owns a car. And, it might be remarked, the other three will be found in the back seat.

"California makes a great appeal to the tourist trade. There are service stations and filling stations everywhere. The cities do everything to make the visitor feel at home. Each city has a free tourist parking reserve furnishing electric light, water and firewood free to the visitor.

"It is a common sight to see automobiles from a dozen different States camped in these parking places over night.

"Many of the highways are built entirely under the direction of the State highway department and with State money. As a result of my visit to Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego, California will correlate its expenditures with the Federal government: "match dollars" with the Federal highway fund. In this way a new $40,000,000 bond issue will in reality result in the expenditure of $80,000,000 for new roads.

"The dealers are highly prosperous on the Coast and while pinched on deliveries are taking advantage of the situation to interest themselves in association work."

Don't Know What's Coming.

A Real Exhibition of Class.

Elbe, president of the Elbe Motor Company, distributors for Hollywood, Beverly Hills and Sherman, listening to the praises of Puss Halbriter, who recently became the proud father of one of these cars.

PROVE PESSIMISTS WRONG.

The plight of the feminine motorist, uninitiated in the fearful and wonderful intricacies of an automobile, when the engine refuses to work, has been the stock joke of humorists heretofore. But, according to Louise Gude, if all motor cars proved as dependable as the Stearns there would be nothing to joke about—and surely Miss Gude, who is a vocal teacher, with studios in the Majestic Building, and Miss Hazel Henderson, her assistant, speak with authority.

Deciding to take a vacation and rough it alone through the primeval spots of California, they started from Los Angeles, according to the story told to Lynn C. Buxton, Stearns distributor for Southern California, in a Stearns car, bound for Huntington Lake for a three weeks' motor tour. Their friends were skeptical. They doubted the ability of the two young ladies to repair the car, for they were sure that repairs must be made at some time during the trip. The driving was difficult. It was hot—dusty, and uncomfortable. Gloom dispensers reveled in dire forebodings.

But the young women started and returned on schedule time. The trip was perfect. There was no mishap.

"It was marvelous," according to Miss Gude, "the way we avoided trouble. We made the round trip to Huntington Lake, in Fresno county, without a mishap, even without a puncture. It was hard. The heat in some of the central counties was terrific. We sweltered—almost overcome by the heat, but the motor purred on without the slightest sign of being affected by the heat. We had one trip of thirty-six continuous miles up grade, and even then the motor did not heat. In the 1270-mile trip there were roads full of "chuck holes," sand, and other obstructions, but the Stearns overcame them all without even the necessity of changing a spark plug. One does not need assistance in taking care of a Stearns on a long trip—it takes care of itself."

MOTORS PERFECTED BY TESTS IN WAR.

HISPANO-SUIZA TYPE PROVES ITSELF AMONG THE BEST POWER PLANTS.

The perfection of the airplane motor and carburetor during the war has been a source of wonder to automobile manufacturers, who watched with amazement altitude and speed records being broken and rebroken. Only since the signing of the armistice have the inner workings of the powerful aircraft engines been revealed, showing a motor distinctive from other motors and a carburetor which will function at extremely high altitudes.

"The Hispano-Suiza motor," according to Frank Nelson, Southern California distributor for Nelson cars, "the some type that is used in Nelson cars, was used very extensively by British, French and American air fighters. Such well-known aces as Lieut. Fouck, Capt. Guynemeyer, Maj. Raoul Lufbury, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Lieut. Nungesser and others. The Leoning plane, equipped with a 300-horse-power Hispano-Suiza motor, holds speed records with continuous speeds of 150 miles an hour. The altitude record was made with a Hispano-Suiza motor when it climbed to a height of 29,200 feet."

"The same type of motor is used in the Nelson car. In addition the Zenith carburetor is also used. That is the reason that the Nelson, the aerotype motor, can attain any altitude without showing the effect on the carburetor or on engine performance. No adjustments are necessary."

RECORD SET FOR TIRE CHANGING.

BIG RUSH IN SALE MAKES IT NECESSARY TO SHOW DECIDED SPEED.

What is claimed as a record for tire changing was set up last week by Sugarman & Greenberg, who are conducting a sale of tires in a downtown location, when a touring car was completely shod in ten minutes.

This time, according to Joseph Greenberg, who is directing the sale, included the jacking up of all four wheels, the removal of the old casings and the placing of new tires on the rims.

"We are so rushed," Greenberg declared, "that we are obliged to move fast. The success of our sale of the salvaged stock of the B. F. Goodrich Company of Spokane has kept us on the jump every minute practically since we opened our doors in Los Angeles."

The sale, which opened on the Tuesday following Labor Day, has resulted in the clearance of thousands of tires for pleasure cars and trucks, both pneumatics and solid tires, not to mention tubes and bicycle tires.

SAFETY OF COUNTRY DEPENDS ON TRUCKS.

"The safety of our country depends on transportation. Railroads are so congested that they cannot carry all our food and other supplies. Farmers hesitate to produce to capacity fearing their produce cannot be marketed. Large quantities of farm produce which do not reach the market because of lack of transportation are wasted.

"Farmers cannot haul crops on the road and work on the farm at the same time," these statements from George D. Wilcox of the Commerce Motor Car Company, Detroit, Mich., sound arguments as to why rural motor express lines now in operation should be extended and new ones organized.

HALF SOLE TIRES GAINING IN FAVOR.

If organization growth is any indication of popularity, then Gates half soles are gaining favor in Los Angeles by leaps and bounds. Although the plant of H. D. Warfield, authorized agent for Los Angeles, has only been opened for a short time, another former Gates' man has joined the local colony. The newcomer, whose name is W. H. Huyler, formerly of Redlands, has been added to the city sales staff.

Mr. Huyler has for a number of years been connected with the Gates organization, and is thoroughly familiar with its policy. In his acquisition, Mr. Warfield believes he has made another valuable addition to the local staff.

With Mr. Huyler entering the local field for the Warfield organization, three valuable Gates men have invaded the local territory. Mr. Warfield, who heads the Warfield organization, first a consumer, became such a half sole fan that he joined the Gates organization; R. G. Henderson, general representative for the Denver factory, has his headquarters in Los Angeles.

A SPEEDOMETER MORGUE.

It wasn't long ago when the automotive industry was in its infancy that the first speedometer was placed upon the market. It made an immediate hit. At that time, before accessories became necessities, many men of an inventive frame of mind, decided that they could build better speedometers than were being built and set to work. The result is obvious. A few years later the market was cluttered with many brands of speedometers, all of which were expected to revolutionise the entire speedometer industry.

A silent monument to their failures is the dumping room for discarded speedometers which forms part of the shop and showrooms of Harry Ungar's Stewart Products Service Station.

These speedometers failed. Most of them were failures in their inception. Some of them were built by struggling inventors who placed in them their hopes of fame and fortune. Some were placed on the market with a great blare of advertising, their sponsors determined to put them over if the money they had for backing sufficed. It didn't. Some were built modestly and placed on the market in small numbers so that they might have a natural growth if they deserved it. Their sales never grew. Others were pawns for promoters and high finance gamblers—they made money for a few chosen ones, and then failed.

This junk heap has been collected by Mr. Ungar for the past few months. It has been made possible by the new Stewart policy of accepting on exchange basis all worn out, out-of-date, unmarketable speedometers, which at one time cluttered the market but which cannot now be even repaired as they are no longer being made.

LEX-SEDAN JUMPS INTO LIMELIGHT.

Important among the early fall announcements of all-season motor cars is that introducing the Lex-Sedan, an exclusive inclosed model designed and built by the Lexington Motor Company of Connersville, Ind.

This new car is described as a decided innovation in closed car design. Its chief claim to distinction is that it has the appearance of being built in "one piece" or, as a single unit. For the first time, it is said, the body has been built for the top, reserving the former method of building the top to fit the body.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

This Will Help You

10,000 Owners Speak for Its Performance and Reliability

Decide for an Essex

What owners say of a car is a pretty good indication of its worth.

And when you add to that, the enthusiastic endorsements of thousands of moter-wise individuals the proof should be conclusive.

But the Essex has still another way of showing its value.

You Can Test It Yourself

Performance limitations have naturally grouped cars into classes. Certain cars may be depended upon for unlimited service. They know no frontiers of distance. They are dependable and require practically no attention.

But such cars are large and costly, costly to buy and to operate.

An exception is the Essex. Its performance qualities can be demonstrated at any time.

Take a ride with us to see how it can be driven just as easily, as fast and with as much certainty of endurance as any high-priced car with which you care to compare it.

Moderate Cost Due to Smaller Size

If the Essex were as large as the cars whose performance it matches, the price would have to be as high.

But because it has no useless length or useless weight, costly car quality in every detail is possible with proportionate saving in cost.

And by skill in design, and care in construction, the performance is just as satisfactory.

It is because of these qualities that the Essex is praised as it is.

Its Worth is Shown In Service Not Price

The strongest Essex boosters are those who have driven their cars the hardest.

It is so easy to handle—so lively and so comfortable that there is pleasure rather than work in driving it.

You may be undecided between the Essex and some other car of similar weight and price.

The two cars look bright and attractive on the sales floor.

The demonstration will give the Essex an advantage that everyone is glad to describe.

Then the thing for you to decide is how those two cars will compare after several months of service.

For answer, note the Essex cars in your neighborhood.

Take a ride in one whose speedometer registers long service.

Look out for performance. See if it still has the power to do the things it did when new. Is it quiet and rigid and in good condition?

Every Essex makes new friends.

It is what they are saying that is increasing the demand so much. You should speak for your car without delay.

HOOVER FOOD EXPERT HOME.

Finds Motor Car Great Help in Relief Work.

Transportation Situation in Rumania is Poor.

Trucks Needed as Railroads are Disorganized.

Feeding a single family of children is generally regarded as somewhat of a job these days, but a former Los Angeles physician has just returned to Los Angeles after superintending the job of supplying food for 300,000 children. As head of the relief commission appointed by Herbert Hoover to distribute food supplies in Rumania, Lieut.-Col. Frank C. Wiser, who has recently returned on furlough to his home at 161 South Normandie street in this city, fell heir to one of the most strenuous after-the-war jobs allotted to any American army officer. How well he fulfilled it, a decoration from the Queen of Rumania attests as the symbol of the gratitude of thousands of Rumanian mothers.

ENLISTED EARLY.

One of the very first Los Angeles physicians to enter the service, Col. Wiser left Los Angeles on March 26, 1917, as surgeon of the Seventh California Infantry. He was stationed at Camp Kearny for some time, and upon going overseas was assigned to the Sixth Army Corps, with headquarters at Toul, where he had charge of three field hospitals. He was in Paris in May of this year when the Rumanian food situation became so serious as to call for aid from the food commission which Hoover headed. A half million dollars was appropriated by the commission, and a million dollars by the Rumanian government. Shiploads of food were purchased and sent to the port of Constanza on the Black Sea, and Col. Wiser was appointed head of the commission in charge of its distribution.

Col. Wiser and his staff traveled by train from Paris to Rumania, but found railroad transportation there almost destroyed. They did not have to depend upon railroads, however, for they were supplied with nine Dodge touring cars likewise shipped into Constanza for their use. Between May 30 and July 22, Col. Wiser traveled over 5500 miles in his car. Other members of the commission traveled almost as far, and as a result of their labors 500 canteens were established and all local arrangements made in every village and hamlet in Rumania for the distribution of the needed food.

RUMANIA DISEASE RAVAGED.

"Conditions were very bad when we first arrived in Rumania," said Col. Wiser last week. "The typhus was very serious, and in many communities the children were so weak from starvation that they were ready victims of disease. There was only one physician for every 27,000 people, so it may be imagined that medical aid was not very easily secured.

"Rail transportation was so completely disorganized as a result of the ravages of war that it would have been utterly impossible for us to have organized our food distributing system if it had not been for our American automobiles. They played their part well, too. Rumanian roads are very rough, indeed, for the most part, yet in 5500 miles of travel in two months, the only mishap my Dodge suffered was one broken spring.

OX TEAMS FREQUENT.

"Transportation has relapsed to the crudest forms in Rumania today. Ox teams were a frequent sight on the road, and automobiles were rare, indeed. They are desperately in need of automobiles over there, and countless times I have seen men laboriously copy the Dodge address on the name plate of the car. I was offered over $3000 for the Dodge which I used, and the Queen of Rumania was eager to purchase the entire fleet when our work was finished. The Dodges were shipped on to Armenia, however, for use in relief work there. American cars are in high favor in Europe, and I know that Rumania would offer a wonderful market if it were possible to get machines there to fill the demand. The Standard Oil Company is rapidly getting its oil fields and refineries into working order again, and there is plenty of motor fuel and oil to be had. The refineries were destroyed before the German advance, but the wells were not harmed and are in production again.

"There was a good wheat crop in Rumania this year, but had to be harvested by hand, as the Germans had stolen every available piece of farm machinery. The supplies we were able to distribute helped tide over the period before the harvest. They consisted chiefly of beans, pork, flour, condensed milk, cocoa and sugar, and the food was cooked and distributed directly to the children at the canteens we established."

IMPERIAL VALLEY GIVES FINAL TEST.

SAND AND CLIMATIC CONDITIONS PUT REAL PROBLEM TO EVERY MACHINE.

Motorists of Imperial Valley are somewhat peeved, and probably with more or less cause, according to the word brought back to Los Angeles by "Bill" Williams, wholesale sales manager of the Security Motor Corporation. Williams hastened to add, discussing the situation upon his return to the city last week, that the motor fans and others of Imperial Valley are not peeved at any one in particular, but at the motoring trade in general.

"It's this way," he said. "They have been reading with interest of the performance of various cars under varying conditions, and they feel like Imperial Valley has been slighted somewhat.

"We're interested in what cars will do down here, where climatic conditions are different from those almost anywhere else in the State and where sand is a factor with which every motorist must reckon, is what I heard from a number of persons. In other words, they do not feel that any car has been thoroughly tested out until it has been demonstrated satisfactorily in Imperial Valley."

Williams drove a Mitchell Victory six to El Centro at the request of Echols Brothers, Mitchell dealers there, and he put the Mitchell through a pace that he feels convinced everyone of the merits of the car.

"I found that the people of El Centro, Calexico, Holtville, and Brawley were thoroughly acquainted with the Mitchell's record in the Yosemite economy run, on Catalina Island and in the record-breaking Los Angeles-San Diego trip, and when they were given proof of how the Mitchell performed under the most adverse conditions to be found in Imperial Valley they evidenced renewed interest in it."

PRESIDENT SEES SINGLE "BAD ROAD."

ONLY ONE IN SIGHT HAD TO BE BUILT ESPECIALLY FOR TESTING PURPOSES.

The "bad road" at Eleventh and Hope streets, the construction of which has just been concluded has elicited comment in general from the automobile trade of the entire country.

This "bad road" illustrated to no less a personage than President Wilson, last week, what exceedingly good roads Southern California had. When the Presidential party passed Hope at Eleventh street a large sign board was presented for the President's perusal. This signboard read: "Mr. President: California roads are so good we were obliged to build this freak track to demonstrate the easy riding quality of the Overland four."

News of the construction of this "bad road" has spread to the automobile trade papers, East, West, North and South and inquiries have been received from nearly all of these trade papers for detailed description of this "bad road," which had to be built at a cost of hundreds of dollars to properly demonstrate the new Overland four model.

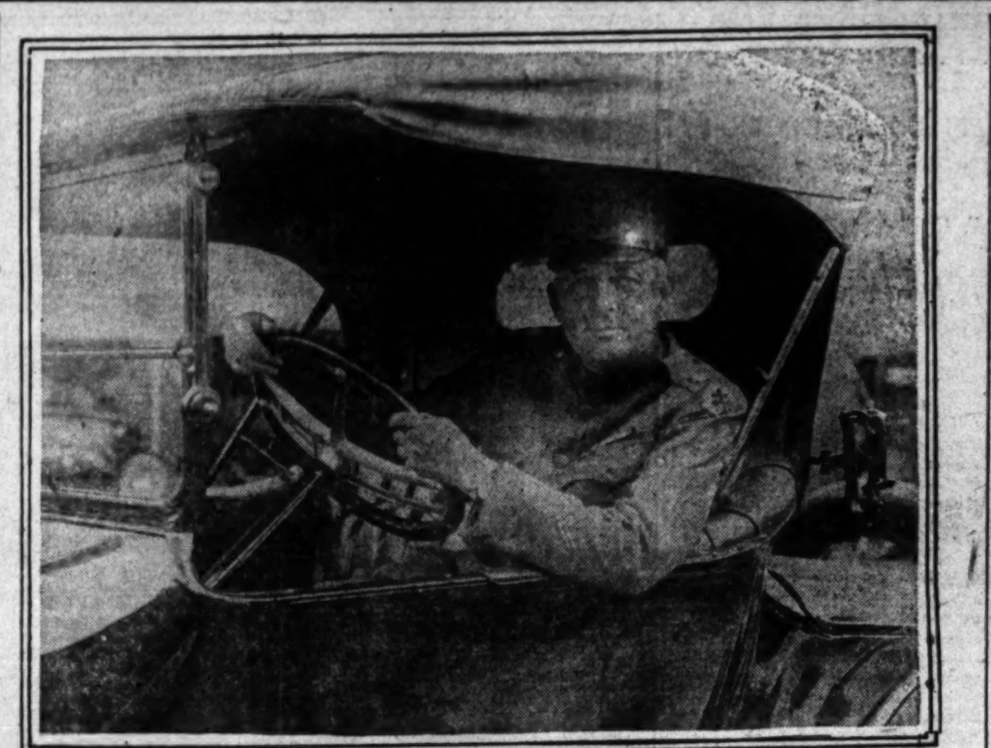
In replying to all these inquiries the publicity department of the Overland Los Angeles branch, has been careful to "boost Southern California by stating that the general condition of the roads in this section of the country was so uniformly good that a "bad road" had to be constructed in the heart of the city to properly show the easy riding qualities of Mr. John N. Willys's latest production.

Mr. A. R. Fernald, general manager of publicity for the Pacific Coast, western division, Manager Frank C. Riggs, treasurer, J. F. Thomson and Maj. M. S. Cooper were a few of the distinguished guests whom local Manager Wilson piloted over this interesting road yesterday.

British Officers May Wear "Mufti."

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 26.—An order has been promulgated permitting British army and naval officers, when off duty, to wear mufti, or civilian clothing.



Two Methods of Transportation.

One, a Dodge car used by Lieut.-Col. Frank C. Wiser, Los Angeles physician, who had charge of distribution of food in Rumanian relief work this summer; the other, an ox cart, drawn by four husky oxen, the chief motive power to be found in Rumania just now.

HEALTHY GROWTH ALL OVER COUNTRY.

FACTORY ADDITIONS FAIL TO MEET INCREASING DEMANDS FOR AUTOMOBILES.

A steady, normal expansion of business unforced by artificial hastening is the most reliable and gratifying assurance of popularity, which holds excellent promise for the future.

Such has been the growth of the Paige Motor Car Company, according to A. E. Evans of the A. E. Evans Motor Car Company, distributors in Southern California for the Paige cars. He is in a position to know, since the gradual growth of the Paige popularity in Los Angeles has compelled him to build a new showroom and service station in which his company will be quartered within a short time.

But, in addition to a healthy growth in Los Angeles, the Paige is experiencing growth in other parts of the country. So great is it, in fact, that increased production has been found necessary, according to information received in a letter by "Bob" Evans from Harry M. Jewett, president of the Paige company. It says:

"We are expanding at a rapid rate and our schedule calls for many thousands of cars beyond our usual production. Our growth has been very substantial for the last four years. Through the war we acquired new buildings and many thousands of additional square feet of floor space. We also acquired much new machinery. Step by step, these manufacturing facilities have built up our organization and we have added a great many new men—expert mechanics, experienced engineers, trained testers, experimenters and the like."

DON C. HASTINGS LOOKS 'EM OVER.

MOTOR MANUFACTURERS REALIZING THAT CALIFORNIA IS REAL TESTING GROUND.

Don C. Hastings, son of the general manager of the Hupmobile Motor Car Company and consulting engineer with the same concern, is in Los Angeles and making his headquarters at Greer-Robbins, distributors of Hupmobiles for this State, Nevada and Arizona. This is Hasting's first visit to Southern California, but he declares it is not his last, by any means. In his opinion, motor-car manufacturers would do well to study conditions in California as far as these have to do with engine performance and general construction.

"Because a car gives a creditable performance in the mountains of Pennsylvania does not mean that it will do equally as well in the mountains of California. The climate is not the same; cars reach a far higher altitude, and the grades are much stiffer. The atmosphere of the desert areas cannot be compared with that of the East and any automotive engineer must know that such conditions have a certain effect on engine operation. Hastings believes that more manufacturers of cars are realizing that California is a testing ground that cannot be overlooked. "California and the Pacific Coast is such an extensive motor-car field that they cannot afford to," he declared. He added that the Hupmobile is built to meet conditions as they exist in this State, which fact, in his opinion, had much to do with the great popularity it enjoys.

MOTOR SLEDS TAKING ALASKA DOGS' JOBS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

KETCHIKAN (Alaska) Aug. 30.—Dog teams, which for years have pulled the mail sleds over winter Alaska snow trails, may be replaced by motors. A Seattle firm is reported building motor sleds designed to pull trailers over the winter roads.

Mail will be carried over some of the Alaska routes by the motor sleds this year.

MAKING PLANS FOR LONG DERBY.

The first transcontinental aerial Derby to be held under the auspices of the Aerial League of America, on the sanction of the Aero Club of America, as provided for under the rules of the International Aeronautic Federation, has been officially announced.

To make the first transcontinental aerial Derby the most important and extensive aeronautic contest ever held, Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary, president of the Aerial League of America, has appointed a large committee of leading aeronautic authorities to draft the rules and set the dates for the Derby, the prizes for which are expected to exceed the total of $100,000.

Duly Tried.

"Have some aigs dis mornin', Jedge?" asked the ebony waiter, reported in the Yonkers Statesman. "Not this morning, Sam," replied the man of the bench, adjusting his spectacles preparatory to distinguishing the name of some dish on the menu from the fly-specks. "Ever try enny of our fresh boiled aigs, Jedge?" "Yes, indeed, Sam; and found 'em guilty."—[Unidentified.

PLAYERS IN WORLD SERIES.

in 1908 at Shreveport. He has been in the American League for nine years, first with Chicago, which club later released him. He then went to Washington and after a time became the property of the Cleveland club. At the start of the 1917 season, President Comiskey was disappointed in the failure of Jack Ness to report to the club to play the initial sack, and, as Gandil would not report to the Cleveland club, the White Sox owner purchased Gandil's contract from Cleveland. He is ranked as one of the best first basemen in the league. Gandil is a little better than the average at the bat. He hits and throws right handed, is 6 feet, 2 inches tall, and weighs 196 pounds. He is married and lives in Chicago.

Edward T. Collins, second base, is one of the leading ball players in the country. This will be his sixth world's series. Collins went from the Columbia University to the Philadelphia Athletics in 1906, and was one of the stars of Connie Mack's "$100,000 infield." When Mack started rebuilding his team, five years ago, Collins was sold to the Chicago club. At the close of the 1918 season Collins enlisted in the marines, but did not get a chance to go overseas. After his discharge he announced his intention of returning to the White Sox and this season was one of the first to report for spring training. He was born at Millerton, N. Y., May 2, 1887. He is 5 feet, 9 inches tall, weighs 164 pounds, is married and lives in Lansdowne, Pa.

Charles A. "Swede" Risberg, shortstop, has played a great game for Chicago since joining the team in 1917. This is Risberg's third year in the major leagues. He was obtained from the Vernon, Cal., club of the Pacific Coast League, where his first professional baseball was played in 1912. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds, and for a big man is a fast fielder and speedy runner. He possesses a powerful arm and is a dangerous man at bat. Risberg was born in San Francisco, Cal., October 13, 1894, is married and lives in San Francisco.

John Collins, outfielder, is the veteran of the team. He has been in the major leagues for ten years and always as a member of the Chicago club. Collins plays right or center field and also can play a good game at the first corner. "Shano" was born at Charlestown, Mass., December 4, 1885, and started at his baseball career at Haverhill, Mass., in 1907. He bats and throws right handed. He is 5 feet, 11½ inches tall, weighs 175 pounds, is married and lives in Pittsfield, Mass.

Harry Liebold is one of the shortest players in baseball, and is an ideal "leadoff" man. He is 5 feet, 5 inches tall, and is called "Little Nemo." He weighs 154 pounds. Liebold was obtained by the Chicago club from the Cleveland club five years ago, and has been in major league baseball for seven years. He was born at Butler, Ind., February 17, 1892, and broke into professional baseball at Milwaukee in 1911. He throws right handed, but bats from the first base side of the plate. He is married and lives in Detroit.

Edward Murphy, outfielder, came to Chicago five years ago from the Philadelphia Athletics. Murphy has been used very little in the outfield, his long suit being in the role of pinch hitter. Murphy "waits out" a pitcher when at bat, and when the ball comes over the plate he usually hits it safe. He has been in the American League eight years. He started his baseball work in 1911 at Scranton, Pa. He is 5 feet, 10 inches tall, and weighs 160 pounds. He was born October 2, 1891, at Hancock, N. Y. He bats left handed and throws right handed, and is one of the fastest men in the league on the bases. He is married and lives in Dunmore, Pa.

Ray C. Schalk, catcher, is one of the most important cogs in Gleason's machine. He is the first string catcher, and has played in almost every game this season. Baseball critics declare him to be the best receiver in the American League. He was born at Harvey, Ill., August 12, 1892, is married, and lives at Litchfield, Ill. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He bats and throws right handed.

Byrd Lynn, catcher, is playing his fourth year with the Chicago Americans. He bats and throws right handed. Lynn was born March 13, 1891, at Unionville, Ill., where he now lives. He is married. In 1913 Lynn began playing baseball at Sacramento, Cal., and later went to the Salt Lake Club of the Pacific Coast League, from which organization he came to the Chicago club. Lynn weighs 150 pounds, and is five feet 11½ inches tall.

Joseph Jenkins, third catcher, also bats and throws right-handed. He is not married. Jenkins was born October 12, 1891, at Shelbyville, Tenn., and started his baseball career in 1913 at Memphis, Tenn. With Schalk and Lynn ready for duty behind the plate, Jenkins has had little opportunity to show his wares, but has been busily occupied in the "bull pen," where his services in helping the pitchers warm up have been needed. Jenkins is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighs 175 pounds. His home is in Hanford, Cal.

Fred McMullin, infielder, was born at Scammon, Kan., October 13, 1891, and came to the Chicago club four years ago from the Los Angeles team. He filled in at third base at the start of the season, but when his batting began to show signs of weakening he was replaced by Weaver, who was shifted from short. McMullin is a dangerous batter, and a reliable sacrifice hitter. He is a steady fielder, and is fast on the bases. McMullin started his baseball career in 1912 at Seattle, Wash. He is 5 feet 10½ inches tall, and weighs 165 pounds. He is married, and lives in Los Angeles. He bats and throws right handed.

Joseph Jackson is one of the greatest outfielders in the American League, and is rated among the leading batters in any circuit. He has a strong arm, and with it has thrown out many runners attempting to score on hits or flies in his territory. Jackson bats left-handed, and throws right handed. Jackson was born July 16, 1887, at Greenville. He is 6 feet tall, and weighs 175 pounds. He is married, and lives in Savannah, Ga.

Oscar Felsch, outfielder, who is a rival of Tris Speaker, as the leading outfielder of the American League, and who by some is said to be better than the Cleveland star, is playing his fifth year with the Chicago club. "Happy's" first professional baseball engagement was with Fond du Lac, Wis., in 1913. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 175 pounds, is married, and lives in Milwaukee, Wis., where he was born April 7, 1891.

J. J. Sullivan, alias "Lefty," is playing his first year with the Chicago White Sox. Sullivan started his career as a ball player at Wichita, Kan., in 1915. He bats and throws left-handed. Sullivan was born in Chicago, 23 years ago. He is married, and is 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighs 175 pounds.

William James, the big pitcher, tallest member on the club, recently obtained from the Boston Red Sox, throws right-handed, but bats left-handed. When Bill is "right" he is a very good twirler. James was born at Detroit, Mich., January 20, 1888. He is 6 feet 4½ inches tall, weighs 210 pounds, is single, and lives at Ann Arbor, Mich.

R. H. Wilkinson, youthful pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, recently was purchased from the Columbus club of the American Association. Wilkinson was born in 1894 at Canandaigua, N. Y., where he now lives. He bats and throws right-handed, is 6 feet 1 inch tall, and weighs 170 pounds. Wilkinson broke into professional baseball in Cleveland in 1914.

Harvey McClellan, utility infielder, player in the Western League, and came to the Sox from Oklahoma City. He bats and throws right-handed, is 23 years old, and weighs 165 pounds. He is 5 feet 5 inches tall, and is playing his first year with the White Sox. McClellan lives in Cynthiana, Ky.

George Weaver, third base, has a reputation as a daring player. "Buck," as he is familiarly called by the players and fans, plays his position with a fighting spirit which is a big asset to the club. His "pep," which is there in all contests, keeps the other players on their toes. He was born August 18, 1891, at Stowe, Pa., and began playing in 1910 at Northampton, Mass. Eight years ago he joined the White Sox, coming from San Francisco. He throws right-handed, but shifts at bat, sometimes hitting right-handed, and sometimes left-handed. Weaver is exceptionally fast on the bases, a clever runner, and one of the most dangerous pinch hitters on the club. He is 5 feet 10¾ inches tall, weighs 168 pounds, is married, and lives in Chicago. For a time this season Weaver played shortstop, with McMullin at third, but when Risberg returned to the game, "Buck" took up the far corner position.

J. Erskine Mayer, pitcher, was obtained a few months ago via the waiver route from the Pittsburgh Nationals, and is playing his first year with the Chicago White Sox. He is a "side-arm" pitcher, and is about 30 years old, and weighs 155 pounds. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, and bats and throws right-handed. His home is in Philadelphia.

CONCERNING THE CINCINNATI REDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—Patrick J. Moran, manager of the National League pennant winners, termed by Red fans as the "Wonder Man," broke into professional baseball through the Eastern League. In 1900 he received his first major league contract when he was purchased by the Boston Nationals from Montreal. He caught for Boston five years, and was released to the Chicago Cubs. He had little chance to work behind the bat for that club, both Kling and Archer being in their prime and doing the backstopping.

Moran in February, 1907, accepted a contract to manage the small Waterbury, Ct., team, but cancelled this contract to take one with Connellsville, a month later. He made another change the following month when he went back to the Cubs as a coach. About this time the wonderful Cub machine began to be noticed in baseball, and a great deal of credit is now being bestowed upon Moran for the showing that club made in the succeeding four years. It is held that his coaching was mainly responsible for the good pitching done by Miner Brown, Overall, Reulbach and Lundgren.

Moran left Chicago in 1910 and went to the Philadelphia Nationals, where he again acted as coach to the pitchers. He was with Philadelphia when "Billy" Murray and later Charles Dooin managed the team, succeeding the latter in 1915. He won the pennant that year, through the good work of Pitcher Alexander and Catcher Killefer. After Alexander and Killefer had been sold to the Chicago Nationals, Moran made a highly successful showing with the Philadelphia team. He was released by that club last year and signed a contract with Manager McGraw of the New York Giants, as coach for this season. He did not join that club this year, however, McGraw permitting him to cancel his contract to become manager of the Reds in place of Christy Mathewson, who had managed the club in 1918, and who was still in overseas duty with the American army.

Charles A. ("Chief") Bender, who will probably act as coach to the Reds' pitchers and adviser to Manager Moran in the world's series, started playing in the big leagues when Connie Mack signed him to a contract with the Athletics in 1904. He was with Mack for ten years, being the mainstay of the Philadelphia pitching staff.

Bender, in his day, was considered one of the greatest world series pitchers. His work and that of Eddie Plank stopped the great Cub machine in the series of 1910, the National League representatives winning only one game. Bender also took a prominent part in the 1911 series against New York, the American League club again winning the world's championship.

When Mack broke up the Athletic team after the crushing defeat by the Boston Braves in 1914, he released Bender. The Indian caught on with the National League team in the Quaker City, but was unconditionally released on March 7, 1917. He was declared ineligible to play in 1918.

Passing out of the big leagues this year, he went to Richmond in the Virginia League, became its manager and sent the team to the top with his consistent winning of games.

Bender is in the thirties, bats and throws right handed and weighs about 170 pounds.

Henry Knight Groh, captain and third baseman of the National League champions, was born in Rochester, N. Y., on September 18, 1889 and resides in Cincinnati. In 1913 he was obtained by Joe Tinker, then manager of the Reds, in a trade of Groh, Ames and Devore for Arthur Fromme and he has been with the Reds ever since. He played second for two years and was then shifted to third base, where he has become a star fielder. He is rated one of the best, if not the best, third basemen in the business. This year he is captain of the team and has been an able assistant to Manager Moran.

Ed Roush, the champion batter of the National League in 1917 and who, it is believed, will lead the league again this season, was born in Oakland City, Ind., May 8, 1893. Last year Roush finished second in batting, being only a couple of points behind Z. Wheat of Brooklyn. Roush is a natural free hitter and a wonderful ground covering outfielder.

Sherwood Magee, outfielder, was born at Clarendon, Pa., August 6, 1884. He started playing baseball in 1903 at Allentown and was obtained by Philadelphia Nationals the following season. He played in left field for the Phillies for eleven years and lead the National League in batting one season. In 1915 he was traded to the Boston Braves for Whitted and Dugey. He remained until August, 1917, when he was obtained by Cincinnati by the waiver route. He was seriously ill in May and June of this year, but in spite of this, has been playing well this season.

A. Earle Neale, outfielder, was born in Parkersburg, W. Va., November 6, 1893. He first played with the Altoona club in 1912, but finished that season with London in the Canadian League. Cleveland drafted him in 1914, but he was returned to London and from there went to Dayton and then to Wheeling, where he was purchased by Cincinnati. This is his fourth year as a regular fielder with the Reds and he has become a great ground coverer. Neale played left and center fields until this season when he took up the "sun field" in right and has been going well there. He is a fair hitter, a good bunter and a very fast base runner.

Morris Rath, second baseman, was born December 25, 1887, in Mobeetie, Tex. He first played baseball professionally at Wilmington, N. C., in 1908 and at Lynchburg, Va. In 1909 he was with Reading. He was purchased by the Philadelphia Athletics and played with them in 1910, going from there to the Cleveland and Baltimore clubs in 1911. He played with Baltimore in 1912 and with the Chicago White Sox in 1913. He was with Kansas City in 1914 and with Toronto in 1915. In 1916 and 1917 he played with Salt Lake City. Rath was in the navy in 1918, joining the Reds this spring. He has played second base for the Reds since the season began and is considered a top notcher in his position.

William Lawrence Kopf, shortstop, was born at Bristol, Ct., in 1893. He left Fordham College in 1912 and joined Cleveland, but was sent to Toledo, and the next year joined the Philadelphia Athletics, playing second base with them in 1914 and 1915. He was with Baltimore in 1916 coming to Cincinnati the next year and in 1918 played with Fore River shipbuilding team and then went into the army. Kopf has been playing wonderful ball all this season.

Jacob E. Daubert, first baseman, was born in Shamokin, Pa., April 17, 1885, and played his first ball with the Kane semi-pro club and joined Marion, Ind., the following year. In the spring of 1908 he went to Cleveland, but was sold to Nashville in May. The next year he went to Toledo and joined Brooklyn later in 1910, becoming that club's regular first baseman. After playing first base for Brooklyn for nine years, where he became famous as a fielder and a hitter, always batting in the .300 class, he was obtained last winter by the Reds, and is given much credit for steadying the Cincinnati infield.

Ivy B. Wingo, first string catcher, was born July 8, 1890, at Norcross, Ga., and started his baseball career with the Greenville club of the Carolina Association in 1909. Late the following year he was sold to the St. Louis Cardinals, where he remained for four years and achieved much fame as a thrower and batter. In the winter of 1914 the Reds obtained Wingo in a trade for Gonzales. Wingo has been a steady and brilliant worker and this season is having a "big" year, being rated as one of the leading backstops of the league.

William A. Rariden, catcher, was born February 5, 1888, at Bedford, Ind., and broke into professional baseball twelve years ago with the Canton, O., Central League club. After catching for three years there he was sold in August, 1909, to the Boston Nationals, where he remained for four years, when he jumped to the Federal League in 1914 and played with Indianapolis and later with Newark. After the disbanding of the Federal League, Rariden was bought by the New York Giants, where he remained for the next three years, catching in the world's series of 1917 against the White Sox. Last winter the Reds obtained him in a trade for Hal Chase. He is behind the plate when left-handed pitchers are on the mound. He has been hitting hard.

Artemus Ward Allen, called "Nick," was born September 14, 1892, at Udall, Kan. At Wichita in 1910 he started his professional baseball career, and the next year was at Newton, Kan., joining the White Sox late that season. Minneapolis got him in 1912 and 1913, and the next two years he played with the Buffalo Federals. In 1916 Allen played with the Chicago Cubs and later with Topeka. He joined the Reds in 1918 and was sent to Providence to finish the season. For a brief time in 1918 he was back with the Reds, but went into the army early in August. He is considered a cracking good catcher, but, owing to the high form displayed by Wingo and Rariden, is used as the third string catcher.

Harry F. Sallee, one of the veteran pitchers of Cincinnati, was born in Higginsport, O., February 3, 1885. He began his baseball career with the Meridian club of the Cotton States League, in 1906, finishing the season with the Birmingham club of the Southern League. He remained with Birmingham for two seasons, being purchased in 1907 by the New York Americans. However, in May of that year, he was released by New York to Williamsport. In the fall of 1907 he was drafted by the St. Louis Nationals and pitched for the Cardinals for eight years. In July, 1916, he was sold to the New York Nationals. He had a great year in 1917, winning eighteen games and losing only seven, and was instrumental in bringing the pennant to New York that season. Last year Sallee decided to quit baseball, and left New York in midseason. During the winter he was persuaded to play again and was obtained by the Reds. He had one of his best pitching years, and, in addition, has been a great help to Manager Moran in developing younger pitchers.

Horace A. Eller, the "shine ball" pitcher, was born at Muncie, Ind., July 5, 1894. He began playing baseball with the Champaign, Ill., club in 1915. The next spring he went to Danville, Ill., and from there to Moline, Ill., where he played two years. In 1916 he went to Chicago White Sox on trial, but was returned to Moline late in April. He joined the army on the Mexican border, was reinstated to baseball in September, and drafted by Cincinnati. This is his third year with the Reds, and his best. In May he pitched a no-hit game against the Cardinals.

Ray L. Fisher, another veteran pitcher, was born in Middlebury, Vt., October 4, 1887. He played on the Middlebury College team, getting his first professional experience at Hartford in 1908 and 1909. In September of the latter year he was purchased by New York Americans and was a Yankee for ten years. In 1918 he went to the army. Last spring he came to the Reds in exchange for Pete Schneider. He is a conscientious worker, fields his position well, and also is a good batsman.

James Ring, one of the best right-hand pitchers in the National League, was born in Brooklyn in 1895. In 1914 he was with Lowell in the New England League, and with the New York Americans. He was with the New York Americans until June, 1915, and then was sent to Jersey City. In 1916 he was with Utica, joining the Reds in 1917, only to be sent to Buffalo. He started the season with Chattanooga in 1918, and was recalled to Cincinnati in June.

Walter Henry Ruether was born September 13, 1893, in San Francisco. He went to Pittsburgh in 1913, but was soon released to Los Angeles and finished the season with Sacramento. He was with Vancouver in 1914, going to Salt Lake City during the season of 1915. He was with Spokane and Portland in 1916. He joined the Chicago Nationals in 1917 and was sold to Cincinnati in mid-season. In the spring of 1918, after pitching two games, he was drafted into the army. He is considered one of the best left-hand pitchers in the National League and has been a big winner for Cincinnati.

Adolfo Luque was born in Havana, Cuba, August 4, 1890. In 1912 he came to this country and played two years with an independent team at Long Branch, N. J. In 1914 he went to the Boston Braves, who sent him to Jersey City. After joining the Braves in the spring of 1915 he was farmed out to Toronto. The next year he was purchased by Cincinnati. He has done very good work this season.

Edward F. Gerner, pitcher, was born July 22, 1897. He was with Albany in 1915 and with Reading, Pa., in 1916. He was with Cincinnati in the spring of 1916, but was sent to Montreal, where he made a brilliant record. He did not play in 1918, and came to the Reds in the spring of 1919.

Raymond Bressler, left-hand pitcher, was born October 23, 1894. He started his baseball career with Harrisburg in 1914, and was with the Philadelphia Athletics late in 1914, and 1915, part of 1916. He was with Newark and New Haven the rest of 1916. He was recalled to the Athletics in 1917, but sold to Atlanta and bought that fall by the Cincinnati Nationals. He played with the Reds in 1917 and part of 1918, but was called to the army early in the season. On his discharge in March, 1919, he joined the Reds. He has not pitched very much this season, playing left field.

Henry W. Schreiber, utility infielder, was born in Cleveland, July 13, 1892. He was with Duluth early in 1913, finishing with St. Paul. The next spring he was farmed out by the Chicago White Sox to Lincoln, where he played two years. In 1917 he started with Lawrence, and later that season was obtained by the Boston Nationals. Later that season he went into the army. This spring he was purchased by the Reds from Waterbury, Ct.

Lewis B. Duncan, outfielder, was born at Dalton, O., October 6, 1896. He started playing baseball with Flint, Mich., in 1912, and was with that team, Springfield, Ill., and in and around the Central League until 1915, when he was obtained by Pittsburgh from Grand Rapids. The Pirates released him February 6, 1917, to Birmingham, where he played until purchased by Cincinnati.

Charles H. See, outfielder, is one of the youngest players in the National League, having been born October 13, 1896. He played semi-professional ball around Brooklyn until last year, when he made a great stir as a pitcher for the Morse shipyards team. On June 8 of this year See started playing with Rochester. Manager Irwin of that club found him so hard a hitter that he changed him into an outfielder. He was leading the International League in batting when purchased by the Reds for a sum said to be $10,000, and Manuel Cueto, the Cuban player.

Albert Roy Mitchell, pitcher, was born April 19, 1885, and started professional baseball at San Antonio in 1906. He was with Fort Worth in [illegible] while with Houston the following year was sold to the St. Louis Americans, where he remained until the spring of 1915, when he went to Vernon, in the Pacific Coast League, where [illegible] until he joined the Reds in the fall of 1918.

James L. Smith, utility infielder, was born at Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1895, and had considerable experience in the big league as a shortstop and came to the Reds in a trade with the Boston Nationals. Smith bats either right or left-handed, but throws right-handed. He weighs about 187 pounds and is 5 feet, 10 inches tall. His home is in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Plans to Divert Yellowstone Lake.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

BOISE (Idaho) Sept. 19.—Plans to divert water from Yellowstone Lake, in Yellowstone National Park, to the Snake River for irrigation purposes, have been submitted to Gov. Davis, by W. G. Swendsen, Idaho reclamation commissioner. Swendsen believes that the winter run-off could be brought by tunnel from the continental divide, which separates Idaho from the park, without interfering with the scenic beauty of the national playground. The plan probably will be referred to the Department of the Interior.

LENSES SOLD BY CARLOAD.

Seven carloads of McKee lenses have been sold on the Pacific Coast—most of them in California—since the passage of the new automobile headlight laws, according to information given out by the McCoy Motor Supply Company in San Francisco this week. H. L. Auger of the McCoy company says: "We expect a great rush for law-complying lenses during the first few days of enforcement of the new California law. Always there are a great many who delay in complying with the law, just to see whether or not it will be enforced.

"From the instructions that have gone out to traffic officers, it is the intention of the State rigidly to enforce the provisions of the new law."

MORE RESILIENCY IN CORD CASINGS.

SPECIAL MACHINES AND EXTRA HEAVY STRANDS OF ROPE USED IN TIRES.

In the construction of cord tires one of the most important matters that must be given attention by the manufacturers is the machines. Some of these machines have been devised at a cost of many thousands of dollars. They are more accurate than would be possible by hand and the speed and precision at which they work render them next to indispensable. The high esteem with which cord tires are regarded by motorists is attributable chiefly to the efficiency of these machines.

"In the manufacture of Carlisle cord tires machines are used which cannot be used in manking any other kind of tires," said George Grabe, distributor for the Carlisle. "These machines are exclusive property and the claim is made they are infinitely more efficient than ordinary machines. There can be no other tires built like the Carlisle. Heavy continuous strands of rope are used in making the tires. Each is capable of 235 pounds stress and each is insulated with rubber and separated from contact with any other thereby abolishing internal friction."

Resiliency is another feature in which cord tires have the advantage over fabric types. There is a greater springiness in this type of tires and consequently they are better adapted for absorbing road shocks. This results in greater mileage.

AMERICANS FIND MINE SWEEPING DIFFICULT.

ELECTRICAL ANTENNAE MAKE THE CLEARING OF THE NORTH SEA HAZARDOUS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON Aug. 20.—The American navy is having a tremendous task in sweeping the North Sea of the 56,000 electrical and highly sensitive mines they planted there. Explosion by electricity is the method now employed. Some were sunk very deep—as deep as a submarine could go.

Each mine was fitted with antennae suspended by floats so that the huge field was not only charged with mines, but had adso become a mass of sensitive feelers to explode them. Should a submarine come in contact with an antenna the mine a short distance away at the end of the antenna would explode.

The problem has been to explode the mines far enough away from the sweeper to insure safety and also to forestall the danger of the explosion of a mine causing another close to the ship to "go off."

The vessels in sweeping use special electric cables several hundred yards long. Operation of a system of electric appliances prevents the mines from exploding if the ship strikes an antenna, but when the electric wire touches the antenna it blows the mine up at a safe distance from the boat. Hundreds are being destroyed by this method.

Aside from the danger and tediousness of the task, bad weather is added to the hardships of the American sailors.

About seventy-five vessels are employed, the majority of them American. Sub-chasers help by rounding up drifting mines that have broken from their moorings and sinking or exploding the mine by firing a shot at it.

BIGAMY INCREASING IN UNITED KINGDOM.

REGISTRAR-GENERAL SAYS LAW FURNISHES LITTLE SECURITY.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Increase in bigamous marriages throughout the United Kingdom, much more pronounced since the end of the war, is causing grave concern and there is a growing disposition to treat bigamy as a venial offense.

Sir Bernard Mallet, the registrar-general, is credited with the statement that English marriage laws afford less security against bigamy than the laws of almost any other civilized state. His department has prepared proposals for their amendment, but nothing has been done to carry them into effect. A new act of Parliament is necessary, and Sir Bernard suggests as a preliminary that some plan be outlined by which accurate information concerning the principals in a proposed marriage may be obtained by the competent authorities before the ceremony can be performed.

For marriage by license in England it is required that both parties make solemn declaration that they know of no impediment to their union, that they have resided for fifteen days in the district and, if they are minors, the consent of guardian or parents has been obtained. But no solemn declaration is required for such material particulars as name, condition as to marriage, age, rank and residence.

AUTHOR OF FAMOUS SONG IS A SUICIDE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LILLE, Aug. 26.—The tragic death of Adolphe Degeyter, the composer of the "Internationale," who passed away here during the German occupation has just become known to the city. Degeyter, a man of strong character, laborious workingman, had written several songs which he and his brother-in-law used to sing. He made no pretension to being a musician but took great pleasure in playing the bugle. It was on this instrument that he played the famous air which he wrote to the words of Eugene Pottier's hymn and the first time he sang it was to some of his comrades in a cabaret here.

Then his wife died. His brother went to Paris and passed himself off as the author of the famous air.

The two misfortunes worked disastrously on Degeyter's mind. He began to drink heavily, and conceived for all music a dislike so strong that he would leave a cafe if anyone began to sing or play some musical instrument.

Then the Germans came. Degeyter suffered acutely from having to work for them on the town supply. When the typhus epidemic spread he was ordered to report at the military hospital and one day he failed to present himself. The "Kommandantur" issued a warrant for his arrest. In the evening he hanged himself.

He is buried in the cemetery near the hill here where a little wooden cross with the name "Adolph Degeyter" marks the grave of the author of the "Internationale."

CHESS GAME NO. 142—RUY LOPEZ.

19—PxP	BxP-g
20—QxP ch	K-R1
21—Kt-B4-h	BxKt
22—B-B5	Resigns-i

a—B-Q2 is usual when White continues P-B3, followed by B-Q1. After PxP, White may begin an attack at once by 6—P-K5, PxP; 7—KtxP, B-Kt5 ch; 8—P-B3, Castles, but, as customary when the position is only partly developed, Black has opportunities for counter attack.

b—Better than BxKt, the bishop being required in White's play of attack. For the same reason Black should have replied BxKt.

c—If Kt-Kt5; 11—P-KB3, Kt-K4; 12—P-KB4, and White has strengthened his pawn center.

d—Time being the chief factor in the success of an attack, White does not waste a move in protecting the pawn. Also when he may gain another move by attacking the rook with the bishop when at Kt7.

e—To prevent BxKt(ch.) and Q-Q3(ch.)

f—If P-KB4; 19—B-B4(ch.) P-Q4; 20—B-Kt3, and will win the exchange.

g—Black has overlooked that after B-K3; 20—KtxB, QxKt; 21—B-B5, he cannot take the bishop on account of B-R7(ch.)

h—Threatening Kt-Kt6(ch.) to which there would be no reply.

i—If B-K4; 23—BxB, RxB; 24—QxKt, and mate next move. Otherwise there is no means of staving off the mate at Kt7.

USE HYDROMETER AS SAFETY CHECK.

The greatest aid in keeping a battery in good condition and in knowing it is in good condition is the hydrometer. This fact is being impressed by Kay & Burbank Company, Exide battery distributors, on motorists.

"The Electric Storage Battery Company, which manufactures Exide batteries, has issued a little folder which explains the use of a hydrometer syringe better than anything I have ever seen," C. H. Kay remarked, "and I believe it will be of interest to motorists generally to read what the manufacturers of Exide batteries say about a hydrometer.

"By regular use of the hydrometer minor battery irregularities can be detected and rectified before they become serious and the small amount of time involved is amply repaid in improved battery service. The folder in part reads as follows:

"'When a battery discharges sulphuric acid from the electrolytic (solution) it is absorbed by the plates, thus weakening the solution. Upon recharge this acid comes out of the plates into the solution again, restoring its strength. Therefore the strength, or specific gravity, of the solution is a valuable indicator of the state of the charge of the battery and is measured by the hydrometer, the most convenient form of which is the hydrometer syringe. The more important applications are the following:

"'Determining end of the equalizing charge recommended for Exide batteries once a week by showing when maximum reached. These on a pilot cell.

"'Testing each order to locate which require best done once a ately after the charge.

"'Indicating after partial discharge the gravity drop full discharge has reading taken at an indication of the discharge, since the proportional to the discharged.

"'Checking end charges. In this case dicating completion should be about the maximum reached equalizing charge. maximum gravity only unnecessary, but good start in the big base- generally is symbolical finish. Eleven times the ing in an initial victory away the winner's end of The only exceptions Pirates, the Giants and These clubs got away to start, and then finished in per cent. class. Here is the various contenders fared in ing game and the series:

ALL THE DOPE.

Boston (1903)—Pittsburgh ing game and lost series 5 games to 3.

Philadelphia (1905)—New opening game and won Athletics, 4 games to 1.

West Side (1906)—White Sox game, and won series from games to 2.

Chicago (1907)—First game ing tie. Cubs beat De- four games.

Detroit (1908)—Chicago won and won series from De- games to 1.

Pittsburgh (1909)—Pittsburgh won first game from Detroit, and won series, 4 games to 3.

At Philadelphia (1910)—Athletics won first game from Chicago, and won series, 4 games to 1.

At New York (1911)—New York won first game from Athletics, and lost series, 4 games to 2.

At New York (1912)—Boston won first game from New York, and won series, 4 games to 3, one game being tied.

At New York (1913)—Athletics won first game from New York, and won series, 4 games to 1.

At Philadelphia (1914)—Boston won first game from Athletics, and won series in four straight games.

At Philadelphia (1915)—Phillies beat Boston in opening game, and lost series, 4 games to 1.

At Boston (1916)—Boston won opening game from Brooklyn, and won series, 4 games to 1.

At Chicago (1917)—Chicago won first game from New York, and won series, 4 games to 2.

At Chicago (1918)—Boston beat Cubs in opening game, and won series 4 games to 2.

That much for the more or less imaginary advantage to the team playing the first game on its own grounds, and the clearly established value of winning the opening contest. However, the value of an initial victory may not be as marked this year because the series is of greater duration than in the past, and a club getting away to a poor start will have more time in which to recover itself.

Getting away from these real or fictitious tactical advantages, and contemplating the possibilities of the near future in the light of the records of the immediate past, it is apparent to even the veriest baseball tyro that the White Sox have a more powerful and more efficient scoring machine than their Redville opponents, and probably would defeat them on a full season's play. Also, they have the advantage of having withstood the test of one world series.

But if information coming from the East is correct there is the possibility of a fatal weakness developing in the Chicago machine—meaning on the mound.

This weakness, if it develops, will arise from the heavy work to which the veteran Eddie Cicotte, and Lefty Williams have been subjected, and Gleason's lack of second-line pitchers of proven worth and dependability.

Frankly, the Sox flinging staff, under these conditions, seems to suffer in comparison with Moran's.

The burden of putting away the fag has fallen chiefly on Cicotte and Williams, who between them have won fifty games. Williams does not appear to have been affected by this, but it seems to have been a severe ordeal on Cicotte. Chance says that Cicotte showed absolutely nothing in the game which he saw him work, while Williams had a world of stuff. The youngster, Dicky Kerr, helped out with eleven wins and six defeats, and at times pitched sensational ball, but cannot absolutely be put down as a world series asset. Red Faber has been barely better than a .500 performer this season; James pitched at exactly that mark, and Lowdermilk fell below it.

So barring those surprises and phenomenae sometimes seen in a battle of this sort, in the preliminary analysis Gleason's staff narrows down to Cicotte and Williams, the heavers who won the championship in the American League, and the veteran in his thirty-fifth year is said to be badly worn.

Meantime, Moran has been able to distribute the burden among more boxmen. Five of his pitchers, Luque, Sallee, Reuther, Eller and Fisher have turned in seventy-five wins, and none of them have been worked with particular severity. Also, in turning in these wins, all of them have been close to or above the .700 mark. That is great pitching in any league. Moran's twirlers should go in fresh, with their full strength, and in fine shape for a nine-game series.

Even if Cicotte and Williams should win two games each, and neither of them is by any means immune to defeat, it would not mean the series for Chicago. In consenting to a long series, Gleason seems to have mapped out a big contract for himself. Of course, there is no means of forecasting how the Cincinnati pitchers will show up against American League hitting, but if the two leagues are as closely balanced as two majors are presumed to be, the National has a better chance of winning the championship than at any time since 1914, and solely because Moran appears to be more securely fortified in the box.

Here are some batting and pitching statistics on the two clubs:

BRITISH LIQUOR TRADE TO IMPROVE SALOONS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug 21.—Better public houses, an improved tone for saloons, is the newly announced policy of the British liquor trade.

Rear Admiral Sir Reginald Hall, a member of Parliament, who was recently elected to the directorate of one the leading brewing companies of the Kingdom, said that representatives of all sections of the trade had drawn up a bill embodying such principles as promotion of sobriety, restriction of drunkenness, reduction of the number of licenses where they are excessive and enlargement of premises so as to provide greater opportunities for social amenities.

"Recreation, including reading-rooms, facilities for writing, music and games should be provided," Admiral Hall said. The entry into the trade of those who would set up and maintain a high social standard should be encouraged to the exclusion of those who might bring discredit on the industry."

Flying Back to Riverside.

H. W. Nerney of the W. L. Hughson Company wishing Glenn A. Calkins, Ford dealer at Riverside, good luck on his trip back from Los Angeles by the air route.

AUTOMOBILE DEALER GOES UP IN THE AIR.

MAKES FLYING TRIP TO LOS ANGELES AND STOUTLY MAINTAINS HE LIKES IT.

Ford dealers do not get up in the air very often, but when they do they usually have a pretty good reason for it, as was instanced the past week in a flight by Glenn A. Calkins, Ford dealer at Riverside, to Los Angeles and return.

"How long will you be in your office?" Calkins phoned B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, Tuesday morning about 11 o'clock.

"Well, I am leaving tomorrow for a run up the State," Graves replied, but Calkins interrupted.

"I mean today. I want to see you this afternoon," the Riverside dealer cut in, to which Graves responded, "You'll have to hustle, because we close at 5 o'clock."

"I'll be over by 1," was the announcement by Calkins, as he hung up, and this called forth a comment by Graves to the effect that the Ford dealer would surely have to hump it.

The next thing Graves knew Calkins was calling up from the Chaplin airdrome, and this was but a few minutes after noon. Then it was that Calkins informed the branch manager here that he had made the trip over from Riverside in a Curtiss Liplane.

SHEM HAD LIBRARIES.

Book Collecting Said to Be of Great Antiquity.

Book-collecting has the distinction of being the most antique of those human fads which have come down to modern times. Tradition has it that, before the flood, the relative literary standing of authors was discussed. Shem had libraries, and history tells of the brick-libraries of Nineveh and the rolls of Ecbatana. Nehemiah was the founder of a library, and in Egypt one sees the site where once stood the bookroom of Rameses—"Hospital for the Soul."

The Romans counted books among the most teasured spoils of war. Lucullus was famous for the splendor of his private library. Seneca protested against the growing tendency to surround books with sumptuousness: "Our idle book-collectors," he declared, "know nothing but titles and bindings; their chests of cedar and ivory, and the bookcases that fill the bathroom, are nothing but fashionable furniture, and have nothing to do with learning." Lucian said, spitefully, to a famous collector of his time, "If books have made you what you are, I am sure that you ought of all things avoid them."

But there are book-collectors and book-collectors. We know those who possess and teasure volumes which are valuable only because of some excellence of binding; we know those who have libraries of really fine books which experts have gathered together for them, like any other "fashionable furniture," as Seneca styled it. But we also know those collectors to whom the value of the book lies in the beauty of the printed page, the purity of the paper, the artistic excellence of the binding—all of which, combined, enhance the meaning of the author's message, thus adequately set. To them each volume is an individuality, and to it they give an affectionate concern beyond that awarded to their ordinary material possessions.

Unfortunately, those who are able to appreciate are rarely able financially to gratify their desires; yet recent book-sales show that, with knowledge of values, books may be made a prince investment. It is an old saying that no price is too high for a really fine piece of old furniture; the same is true of a really rare book. The recent sale of Mr. H. Yates-Thompson's collection at Sotheby's, in London, gives tangible evidence of increasing values. The Book of Hours of Jeanne Queen of Navarre, purchased in 1847 by Lord Ashburnham for seventy guineas, and later by Mr. Yates-Thompson, with several other fine volumes, for £1000, in this sale brought £11,800; the "De Consolatione Philosophine," which sold for £275 in the Didot sale in 1881, fetched £900; a Portulani, purchased in Rome in 1826 for 22 scudi, brought £1300; the Aristotle which cost Lord Ashburnham £500 sold in 1897 for £900, now attained an auction value of £2900.

From which it would appear that, if knowledge of potential values be added to "knowledge of titles and bindings," Seneca can no longer rail at book-collectors and their "fashionable furniture."—[Christian Science Monitor.

DRIVES CAR FOR THE PRESIDENT.

Secret Service Men Block View of the Road.

Takes Party Through Residence District of City.

Wouldn't Have Missed Experience for Millions.

BY FRANK ALBRIGHT.

(Driver for the Al G. Faulkner Co., who drove Marmon 34 used by President and Mrs. Wilson during two-day visit in Los Angeles.)

I have driven a good many notable people about Los Angeles in the past, but when they told me I had been chosen to drive the President's personal car it gave me quite a thrill. It was an experience I would not have missed for anything, and yet it was a real relief when it was all over and Mr. Wilson had left for Reno.

There were never any two people who could be more appreciative, more kindly or more pleasant in their conversation. They talked with me very often during the two days, usually about the roads and how to get to places and they were very cordial in thanking me for my work, but the experience certainly was a trying one.

DIFFICULT WORK.

It was most difficult to drive through the great crowds with a secret service man standing on the running board on each side of me, the huge floral decorations on the windshield and hood and the necessity for great care everywhere which made the strain a tremendous one.

Friday, the day before the President's arrival, I went down to the Alexandria late in the evening and had a long talk with the secret service men. I suppose they sized me up pretty well and possibly they had looked me up even before that. They were very pleasant and assigned me Nos. 1 and 2 for the two Marmons, one for the President and Mrs. Wilson and the other for the secret service men, who followed us everywhere during the two days.

Saturday morning I took the car, which had been all dolled up with flowers, ribbons and a big eagle on the radiator, down to the Alexandria, arriving there about 9 o'clock. We left soon after for the Santa Fe depot, and the President left the train for the motor car at about 10 o'clock. We left the depot the minute the President and Mrs. Wilson entered the car, in order to avoid the crowds, and went right to the Alexandria. The President had recognized the car at once, remarking, "This is a Marmon, isn't it?"

IN THE PARADE.

It was very difficult driving during the parade which started at 12:30. I could hardly see ahead because of the decorations and the secret service men on either side shut off my view there. Besides we were compelled to crawl along very slowly on account of the crowds. When we got back to the Alexandria both the President and Mrs. Wilson shook hands with me and Mrs. Wilson told me if I had any friends I would like to introduce to the President he would be very glad to meet them, which I thought was very democratic and very considerate.

Saturday evening I took them out to the Shrine Auditorium and then back to the hotel after the ceremonies. Sunday morning I called for them at about 10:45 o'clock and took them to church and then late in the afternoon when they went for a quiet drive. This was the only time during their visit when the secret service men did not ride on the running board, but one of them sat by my side in the front seat all the time.

PLEASANT DRIVE.

We went out through the residence district, the President and Mrs. Wilson remarking frequently on the many beautiful homes we passed. Once the President asked me concerning the road to Venice, and another time how to get to Pasadena, but we did not have time to visit either place. The President seemed to have a little cold and talked very little, and then in a rather low tone of voice. Mrs. Wilson spoke to me very often during the trip and just before they left the Southern Pacific depot they both shook hands again with me and thanked me for the car, while the President pinned a carnation on my coat. I guess that carnation will be kept very carefully as long as I live.

Make The Tires Now
On Your Car Last
Until Spring

The motoring season is about at an end.

And your tires, more than likely, have given all the service you can safely demand of them.

Doubtless, right now, your greatest dread is the purchase of expensive tires—tires that will deteriorate during the winter months even though you make little use of your car.

But there is a way of avoiding this dreaded expenditure as the experience of over 750,000 motorists proves.

From 5,000 to 15,000 miles can be added to the tires now on your car, provided the fabric is still serviceable.

DOUBLE CUSHION
DOUBLE FABRIC
EXTRA SIDE WALLS EXTENDING COMPLETELY OVER BEADS AND UNDER RIM

A new principle of construction, invented by Charles C. Gates, E. M., which incorporates your worn casing in a brand new factory built tire gives you double fabric strength and double cushion resiliency as the illustration to the left clearly shows.

And at the beginning you save half what you would have to pay for new tires—because Gates Half-Sole Tires cost only half as much as ordinary tires of corresponding size—and are guaranteed puncture-proof besides.

REDONDO FOOTBALL TEAM LOOKS GOOD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, Sept. 25.—The return of several men who were in service during the war has strengthened the prospects in football for the local fans and much interest is being taken in the tryouts which were put under way Wednesday night. Coach Wilson is rounding his material up and some likely youngsters have been out both nights. Wiley will captain the team and according to present plans Kegeris, a veteran of the gridiron, will hold down the important position of quarter-back. McElligott is slated for center. Capt. Wiley will play right half-back.

The boys have formed a committee to get the field in shape for practice and with teams and implements have put in several hard days' work. Extra efforts will be made this next week as the first game scheduled will be played with Santa Monica on Saturday, October 4. The coach and captain are confident from the material on hand that Redondo Beach will be a factor in the coming football season.

WATT'S WORK GARRET TO BECOME MEMORIAL.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The garret in which the engineering genius James Watt pursued his mechanical studies is to be removed intact if possible from its position on the top of Heathfield Hall at Handsworth, where Watt spent his last years, and re-erected in the central memorial building to be opened in Birmingham where the Watt centenary is to be held.

When Watt died the garret was locked up and remained unopened for about fifty years and even now it is still in exactly the same condition as when Watt worked in it.

The piece of iron Watt was last engaged in turning lies on the lathe. The ashes of his last fire, where Watt used to do his own cooking because of his wife's objection to seeing her husband "looking like a blacksmith", are still in the grate; the last lump of coal is in the scuttle. The Dutch oven is in its place over the stove and the frying pan in which he cooked his meals is hanging on its accustomed nail.

LARGEST WHEAT FARM.

Indian Lands Leased by One Man in Two States, 200,000 Acres.

One result of the government's effort to increase the production of wheat during the last two years has been the creation of the largest wheat farm in the world, some two hundred thousand acres of Indian lands in Montana and Wyoming. If this farm yields only twenty bushels per acre it will mean four million bushels of wheat added to the 1919 crop, which at the government price of $2.26 per bushel, would be worth $9,040,000.

There are two other remarkable things about the farm: In the first place it was conceived and is being managed by one man, Thomas D. Campbell, formerly a North Dakota farmer; in the second place, not a single horse will be in use on the property. Instead, huge tractors, the largest ever built, will do all the work of plowing, seeding and harvesting. They will also do it more quickly than has ever been done by the use of horses.

The farm has been divided into units of five thousand acres, and to each unit has been assigned one giant tractor, with a dozen held in general reserve in case of accident. Each unit also has its own group of permanent buildings modernly equipped, and is under the direct charge of a competent farm manager. Under this manager is a general foreman, who will see to hiring the help and getting the work done. But over all stands Mr. Campbell, who is constantly on the go from unit to unit, supervising the more important features of the entire job.

Before he could lease the Indian lands Mr. Campbell had to make arrangements with Secretary of the Interior Lane. He was actuated purely by patriotic motives—to help the government in its efforts to stimulate the food production. He stated frankly to Secretary Lane that he was willing to enroll with the dollar-a-year men if the government financed the project, and if he financed himself he only wanted a chance to break even. The latter was accepted by Secretary Lane.—[Robert H. Moulton in Scientific American.

WRESTLER REYNOLDS WANTS CHANCE HERE.

Jack Reynolds, world's champion welterweight wrestler, as he styles himself, has written out asking for a whack at our own hero, Walter Miller. Reynolds claims that the spotlight should be centered on himself, because he has defeated Matty Matuda, Pete Kautaski, Walter Keegan, George Roumas and one thousand others. If it's really a fact that he has defeated 1004 good wrestlers, he certainly ought to get a chance at Miller.

But if it takes as long to arrange a match as the Miller-Gotch contest has consumed, the sport-loving public of this day and age will never live to see it.

DEPOT FORMALLY OPENED.

Popularity of the Union Stage Terminal Proved During First Week.

Following the formal opening of the union stage depot at East Fifth and South Los Angeles street, last Tuesday afternoon, regular service on the several lines operating out of the big terminal was put in effect. Any wrinkles that existed as a result of the consolidated service were quickly ironed out, and today operation is under way with 100 per cent. efficiency, according to W. H. Powell, president of the depot company.

CREDIT TO CITY.

Mayor M. P. Snyder, who delivered the opening address Tuesday afternoon, reviewed the progress made in Southern California in the automotive transportation field and predicted a great future for it. He praised the progressiveness and the public-spirited enterprise that caused those directly interested in the new terminal to make it a reality and declared it was a credit to Los Angeles. Later he "started" the first stages to leave the building. From 3 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the depot was thronged with sightseers. An orchestra furnished excellent music and the large modern waiting-room was appropriately decorated. Scores of prominent business men and public officials were among the visitors and they highly complimented the enterprise.

A notable feature of the event was the attendance of a score of representatives of the press from cities in the territory reached by the stage lines. These came from as far north as Bakersfield and as far south as San Diego. Virgil Brischi, president of the City Council of San Diego, Councilman Witzil, also of San Diego, and Sergt. Forbes, head of the license department of the police of that city, were among the visitors.

INFORMAL DINNER.

In the evening the visiting newspapermen, representatives of local newspapers and other visitors were the guests of the United Stage Depot, Inc., at an informal dinner given at the Los Angeles Athletic Club in the blue room, and at which O. R. Fuller, one of the leading spirits in the enterprise and prominent in Southern California's stage, automobile and truck field, presided.

Thomas Morgan of the United Stages, A. L. Hays of the Pickwick, Inc., C. F. Wren of the Pickwick, northern division, S. W. Mims of the Eldorado Stage Company, Inc., and W. H. Powell of the White Bus Line, which companies are all incorporators in the terminal, were present.

Short addresses, but each to the point, made by visiting members of the press, showed in a very convincing way, how important the stage service is to the smaller cities of Southern California. Were it not for this stage service, it would be difficult for thousands to travel from one point to another, because of shortage of other forms of transportation.

Figures compiled by the companies operating out of the depot, show that approximately 3,000,000 passengers were hauled by them during the last twelve months. In the matter of the long and the short haul, figures show that about 30 per cent. of the passengers carried are classified in the long haul.

Were it not for the United Stages which operate in the Imperial Valley as well as between San Diego and Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, that fruitful section would almost be isolated from the remainder of the State.

MISS "STEWART" ON WAY HERE.

To give Los Angeles motorists in general and Stewart Product fans in particular an optical feast as well as a mental treat, Miss Marilynn Miller, familiarly known to the readers of national periodicals as Miss Stewart Custombilt, is coming to Los Angeles, according to information received by Harry Ungar, manager of the Stewart Products service station.

Miss Miller, who is a shining light in "The Follies," has become nationally known as an advertising girl of the Stewart company, and has smiled from magazine pages on millions of approving readers. She will visit Mr. Ungar on a swing around the Stewart branches.

SINGLE TIRE TEST FAILS OF PURPOSE.

COMPLETE SET OF TIRES ON CAR GIVE REAL IDEA OF SERVICE OBTAINED.

It is a peculiar thing, but a fact nevertheless, that each wheel on an automobile wears a tire out in a different way. One wheel will wear the tire all, another the tread, another develop other faults. Therefore, it stands to reason that, while the plan of testing out one tire on a motor car gives a good idea of the service to be expected from that particular brand of tire, the complete test is to equip all four wheels with the same kind of tire.

Such a test was put to Racine tires by Howard Seely of Los Angeles, according to a letter received by F. H. Osler, of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company, distributors for the Racine tires in Southern California, and the result is not only interesting but amazing.

In isolated instances, different brands of tires, and Racine tires, too, have made greater mileage than any of the four tires that were given tests on Mr. Seely's machine, but seldom is there found a tire which will give such consistently good service as he obtained from the four he put on his machine.

On the two front tires in the test, Mr. Seely received, by an accurate check, 20,065 miles and 20,010 miles, many times the distance that is guaranteed by tire concerns. On the rear tires he obtained 21,205 miles from one and 19,580 miles from another, another remarkable record for a set of tires.

PNEUMATICS HAVE STRONG ADVANTAGE.

CAREFUL TESTS SHOW DECIDED SUPERIORITY OF AIR-FILLED TIRES.

Tests made between trucks employing solid and penumatic tires have always revealed a startling showing in favor of the ones equipped with the air-filled tires. A long comparison of repair costs by two large users of trucks in eastern cities showed a 70 per cent. lower cost of upkeep on the trucks that employed pneumatic tires. More recently, according to A. H. Wilson, sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., State distributors for the Oldsmobile, a New York tire company conducted a lengthy trial to determine the relative economy of solid and pneumatic tires in truck service.

"Two trucks of identical size and make were operated for a distance of 3500 miles, with the same loads, and under exactly similar operating conditions," said Mr. Wilson last week. "A proved saving of 12½ per cent. in favor of the pneumatic tired truck was shown when the figures were compiled at the end of the test in both oil and gasoline consumption.

"On level running the saving in favor of pneumatic was even more marked, showing as high as 25 per cent. in some portions of the test. On hill work, however, the added size of the pneumatic gave the truck less power because the gear ratio was reduced, and compelled more gear work. If both trucks had been equipped with the same gear ratio, the saving in favor of the penumatic tired truck would probably have been even more marked."

MAX WOLLERING LOOKS US OVER.

Production Chief on Long Tour of Inspection.

Says California is Best Motor Testing Ground.

Carl Breer Welcomed Back by His Many Friends.

California represents the entire climatic and road range. Nowhere in America may be found such variance of conditions as in this State. Therefore, California is to become the testing ground for the Studebaker Corporation.

That is the decision of Max Wollering, first vice-president of the Studebaker Corporation, and the big chief in charge of production. With a distinguished traveling party of Studebaker engineers, Mr. Wollering arrived in Los Angeles last week, after a transcontinental motor trip from Detroit. The purpose of the Studebaker expedition was to test out fuels and gain general knowledge of conditions to be met by Studebakers in the various sections.

IMPORTANT VISITORS.

Accompanying Mr. Wollering, who is one of the most important motor officials to visit Los Angeles in a year, are Carl Breer, research engineer; Vincent Link, designing engineer, and George Crist, of the testing laboratories. Mr. Breer is a native of Los Angeles, and his return to his home town was as happy for his many friends as for himself. Mr. Breer has gone ahead rapidly since his Los Angeles days and is doing a valiant work for the motorists in his researches, particularly in fuels.

Mr. Wollering has been identified with the motor-car industry since the first days. He was production man for Henry Ford when the capacity was sixty motors a day. Those were the days when the Ford plant was very small and the weighty conferences were held on a flight of steps among Ford, the Dodges and others identified with the manufacture of cars at that time.

"Ford was losing about $100 on every car that he made at that time," said Wollering. "Then Walter F. Flanders came into the organization and boosted the price and money came rolling in from that on."

UP THE LADDER.

Since those days, Mr. Wollering has gone on up the ladder until today he stands as one of the most important production officials in the country. His thorough-going methods are shown by the fact that he gets out in a Studebaker car and drives across the continent. He is welcomed in San Francisco by the Studebaker officials there and then was met at Bakersfield on his way down the valley by A. R. Carpenter, branch manager here, and Paul G. Hoffman, of Maxwell & Hoffman, Studebaker distributors. Wednesday R. D. Maxwell of Maxwell & Hoffman was host at a luncheon at the Los Angeles Athletic Club given in honor of the visitors.

"We are surprised but delighted by what we have found in California," said Mr. Wollering in telling of his trip. "We believe that the place to find out things is out on the road. And what we purpose to do now is make many trips to California. Nowhere else in the country is there such an ideal testing ground.

"The 'hills' of the East are puny compared to the mountain grades that a car must climb here. The altitude range is very great in a short mileage. The temperature, too, shows a decided variance.

"You have the splendid boulevards which, strangely enough, are very hard on motors. That is because they may be run at top touring speed for many miles without easing off a bit. This tests the cooling and the lubricating systems.

"We have been very much pleased with what we observed. The Studebaker models have up to our expectation ner, and I think that we ered some valuable regard to the fuel

LARGE INCREASE IN MILLER SALES.

With an increase of approximately 56 per cent. in sales volume for the first seven months in 1919, as compared with the same period in 1918, the Miller Rubber Company of Akron, O., shows every indication of shattering all of its previous records when the totals are checked up at the end of this year.

Whereas the company did approximately $16,000,000 business in 1918, a $23,000,000 figure was set for 1919 and, judging from present indications, the latter mark will be passed easily.

There's a Touch of Tomorrow in All That Cole Does Today

The Vital Importance of What is to Be

THE Delphian oracle exercised its mighty influence over the ancient Greeks, not because it interpreted what had happened—but because it prophesied what was to come.

In this day and age, there's nothing more obsolete than yesterday's newspaper, but there's always a crowd around a bulletin board!

The world moves irresistibly forward—onward. There's no standing still. Those who do not progress fall behind.

What is to be—not what has been—commands our attention. Interest centers in the future—not in the past.

For ten years the career of the Cole has been characterized by big undertakings.

It was one of the first two American-built eight-cylinder cars. It was the first automobile to which the principles of aerotype construction were applied.

But, if the Cole company had stopped there—if it had not built a structure for future achievement on this foundation of past accomplishment, it could not have progressed.

Cole's Latest Creations Herald Future Progress

COLE contributions have been significant. Season after season, year after year, they have given the motoring world things that were new, original and a bit in advance of the times.

The Aero-EIGHT was the sponsor of a new fashion in motor cars. The open models came as a complete innovation in body designing and performance efficiency.

The new Aero-EIGHT all-season cars, which have just appeared, are, likewise, exclusively new and advanced conceptions. Their flush panel construction is an advantageous and pleasing departure in coach building.

Their restful comfort, their easy riding qualities, their wide range of performance is not to be compared with any previous attainment in the development of enclosed equipages.

The vacuum, full-vision windshield of the Tourosine and Toursedan, is a significant improvement.

The care and taste evidenced in the exterior finish, the selection of the velvety fabrics within, and the completeness and dignity of the minor refinements with which the Aero-EIGHT all-season cars are adorned, bespeak the fine workmanship they embody.

Inspired by a single aim—to anticipate the trend of the future and be the first to give it tangible expression—Cole is now universally recognized as the creator of advanced motor cars.

That is why—when a distinctively new type of car appears—the public anticipates finding the Cole nameplate on it.

"The Cow of Trees"

—from an Article in the Literary Digest

STEVENSON once called the coconut "the giraffe of trees." Intrinsically, it is "the cow of trees." In the South Seas, a coconut grove is as a herd of beef cattle to us.

The metaphor of "the cow of trees," indeed, is apt. Mothers feed the expressed juice of the nut to infants for a day or two after birth, and instances are known of children who feed for eighteen months on nothing else than this rich, chalk-white, creamy fluid. Meat of the young nut is a delicious custard.

"THE cow of trees" provides the rich, fresh, wholesome source of Nucoa Nut Butter. And to "the cow of trees" belongs the credit for the low price of Nucoa---a "herd" of coconut trees costs nothing to feed!

Nucoa is a pure churning of nuts and milk—clean and kept so from beginning to end by the sanitary Nucoa print carton.

Instead of Cow Butter—

NUCOA

The Original Nut Butter

COSTS less because coconuts are more plentiful than cows. Serve Nucoa with pride in the satisfaction it gives you and the money it saves.

Branded "Oleomargarine" to comply with the Federal law of 1886. Nut butter was then unknown. Nucoa contains no animal fat. You buy it white and color it yourself in a minute. Capsules containing the same color as used in cow butter are free. Directions surround each print. We are denied the right to color Nucoa at the churn. Work with your Congressman against this discrimination.

ON A CLINGING evening gown or snugly fitting tailored frock SO-E-Z snaps are infinitely important. Where it is essential that a fastener be invisible, SO-E-Z snaps lie flat against the garment. Where the entire effect of the gown depends upon the faithful service of each fastener, SO-E-Z snaps perform their duties perfectly; they stay closed until released.

And there's another very special exclusive SO-E-Z feature, a feature that cannot be found in any other fastener—the coined edge (patented) rounded inside and outside the large oblong holes so that the thread passes over an absolutely smooth surface, both inside and outside. No other fastener can have this feature, therefore, no other fastener can be as good.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

OUR readers frequently complain of ill-luck in propagating valued or rare plants by cuttings or "slips." They can successfully increase nearly all the more common plants, but with something really worth while they fail. Some fail with all. To these latter we would advise layering. A layer is a stem, branch or small part of a plant that is induced to root while still a part of the parent plant. Many plants root by layering naturally and nearly all such plants root readily from cuttings. Yet not all, and it is not best to assume that many of them do.

The common carnation is often, and to many, a baffling plant to root from cuttings, yet a very satisfactory one to layer. Take any fairly tender shoot that is not a flowering shoot and cut it half-way through three or four inches from the tip. Twist it once around so the twist will a little check the sap flow, scratch a little trench beside the parent plant, push the cut part down into it and cover with soil. Before covering with soil, it is well to bend a toothpick double, like a hairpin, and pin the stem down to the ground. If then the stem is springy and will not stay, bend a piece of wire into a gigantic hairpin and make it stay where you wish it. If you would have these baby plants readily established in pots, sink small pots about the parent plant to a level with the soil and bend the layers into them. When they have rooted, say in three months, anyone may safely cut through the remaining half of the stem and a new plant is born. Gardeners and nurserymen remove them sooner.

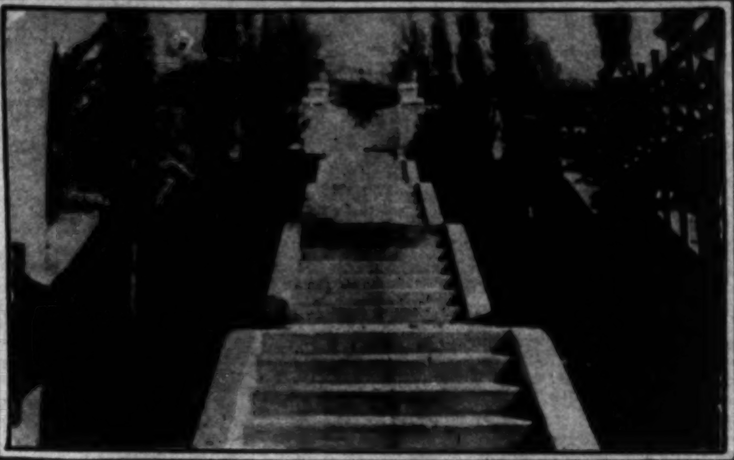
On plants taller than carnations, hardwood shrubs, cut from one-third to one-half through the stem or branch, bury this portion, stick in a stake and tie the end of branch into an upright position, as it will grow when a separate plant. An occasional examination will disclose when it has sufficiently rooted. In some heavy-barked species a ring of bark an inch or more long is entirely removed instead of the wood being cut partially through. When the branches are too far from the ground a bench on which a box or pots of soil is set must be placed beneath the shrub or tree. The same method is pursued in case of pot-plants which cannot be sunk into the soil or put outdoors. Some layering is done in mid-air by binding a ball of moss or Sphagnum at the point to be rooted but a damp atmosphere and care is needed for success. When the writer was a professional propagator he used to bury lengthwise in the sand of the propagating bench, stems of rare dracenas, etc. Every eye would send up a shoot and roots from below would go down into the sand. These were then cut into sections, the rooted and topped pieces an inch or two long were potted up and the remaining parts again placed in the sand, and so on until no more would sprout. This method is occasionally pursued out of doors and the writer has seen long willow branches, also of other trees, when covered with soil by winter's floods, send out hundreds of little trees in like manner. Roots form beneath each shoot, and even where there are no shoots. Cut off from the parent tree, either whole or in small sections; all parts are self-sustaining.

Individuals or Mass.

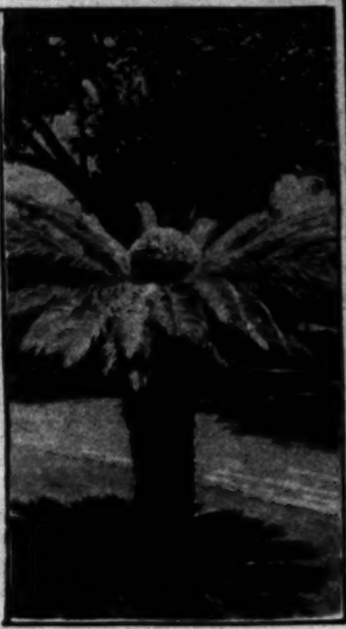
When one is planting the garden, or re-planting, he should distinguish between two classes of plants and two purposes in planting. Choose with care those trees or shrubs to compose the frame of the garden, the massing material. None of these should be of "specimens" that are to be grown for individual beauty or effect. The frame should be of few kinds and a few of each kind, though but two or three. Do not have but one of a kind as though you were showing samples for a plant firm. Have two or three of each kind, always planted together. You will then have a solid basic or fundamental effect. You may have in these various sorts, foliage of various form and hue, also variety of form or habit of plants. It is pardonable to plant for immediate effect yet one must remember that full beauty often comes only with mature development. A skillful planter so arranges that later part of the plants may be removed to allow space for the others.

Wild Flowers of California.

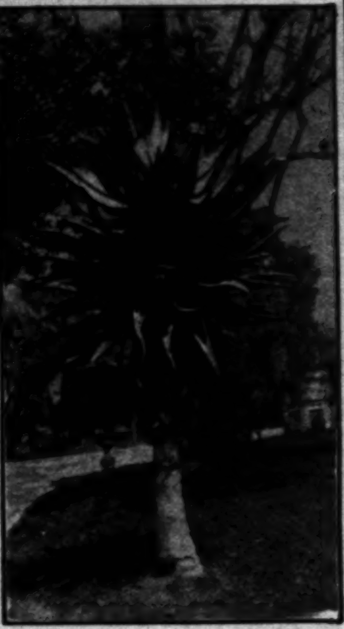
Several persons have written to tell of the books on wild flowers in California because of an article stating one was badly needed. For the benefit of these good friends the writer wishes to state he has a copy (or has had) of every book published on plant life in California, some now forty years old, and therefore knows them all. "Parsons and Buck," about which several have written, is the best so far printed, but t.. from good enough and so incomplete as to cover but a small portion of the local flora. There is at least one, published since, that is better and one under way that will beat them all. We have several talented authors who could write such books but have not the means to publish them and publishers must be captured before these efforts can be launched. The writer has not looked for publishers, but if he knew where any were lying in wait for author victims, he might be tempted to write a book or two. One good botanical author now has part of the text and hundreds of illustrations on "Wild Flowers."



Entrance to Elsbery Reynolds place, North Pomona.



Female sago in bloom.



Aloe in Singleton Court.

Wild Morning-glory.

"The writer always reads your page in Farm and Tractor Magazine first, being interested in a dilettante way (whatever that is) in all growing things, including dogs, kids and horses, in the order named, and derives a large amount of pleasure and profit from your articles. Is it within the scope of your department to call attention to the great and increasing menace of the wild morning-glory in the cultivated fields between Los Angeles and the beaches? Three years ago I estimated the area covered by this pest, as seen from the Santa Monica cars, from Vineyard Station to Gardner Junction, at about five acres combining the patches visible, and today, venture to assert that the area covered is in excess of 100 acres, all of it in the bean fields.

"The growers at Beverly Hills and in two fields on the Venice Short Line have made some effort at eradication by raking it up periodically, but not persistently, while other fields have been entirely neglected, thus spreading the pest from Venice to Lafayette Square near Vineyard Station. I have noticed that it only grows in cultivated ground like the bean fields, and have only seen one small patch about ten feet in diameter growing in stubble, from which it would seem that two or three years cropping to grain or hay might be a remedy, and would be pleased to have you take the matter up in your columns. Please throw a scare into the careless ones and encourage those who have made some effort to kill this pest; is there not some State board that has jurisdiction over matters of this kind, as well as bugs? Trusting you may be able to take the matter up.

"Sincerely yours, L.J.O."

Thorough cultivation once a week through one season will kill it, as such treatment will any plant, through want of breath. But no leaves must be allowed to form, for these are the lungs of plants. The once-a-week treatment must be complete and for all summer. Those most experienced with this pest have found this the best means of extermination.

Tchihatchewia.

And that is only its first name! It was found in Armenia and named in honor of Count Paul Tchichatchef. It is recommended as a plant for rockeries and we believe it well suited, for it has the "rockiest" name of any plant we know. All of which is merely preliminary to calling your attention to the fact that we have too few rockeries and far too few rock gardens; yet we have an abundance of high-class material suitable for planting in rock-work. In this climate we must aim at an alpine garden, so far as plants are concerned, but we are by no means dependent on alpine regions for the necessary plants for ideal rock gardens.

Suburban Entrances.

City gardens have little scope for landscape effects, and little room for imposing approaches. Even the modest footpath and steps leading up to the Reynolds place, as may be seen in our illustration, is far longer than a city lot. This place is at North Pomona, and Mr. Elsbery Reynolds, the owner, is best known as the publisher of Harold Bell Wright's books, author and publisher being old friends. Every part of this place has a charm all its own. The vehicle entrance we show is at Arthur Letts's fine home at East Hollywood; the house is to be seen in the background. This place is noted for its fine collection of plants, a veritable botanic garden. In fact it contains too many plants for good landscape effects. It is altogether the most interesting garden to professional plantsmen in the city of Los Angeles.

Female Sago in Bloom.

The Javanese sago palm, Cycas revoluta, is common in California and hundreds of plants here have bloomed. The photo we show was taken at Singleton Court nearly twenty years ago and at that time it was the finest plant in Los Angeles. The female blossom in size and form is like a large cabbage. The male cone closely resembles a huge pine cone and it is somewhat near the pines in relationship, though the plant looks much like a tree fern. They are curious plants and grew way back in time when very few plants of species now alive were in existence—pioneers of the vegetable kingdom.

Giant Aloe.

The large aloe plant we illustrate is the largest and handsomest specimen for its age known to the writer. It grew six inches in height of trunk each year so that when this photo was taken it was fourteen years old and seven feet high. It stands in Singleton Court and was planted from a small pot by the writer about eighteen years ago. No attempt has been made to determine its true name; it may be Aloe Hookeri. Whatever the species, its native home is at Cape of Good Hope or close by.

Everlasting Flowers.

We do not need the old-fashioned bouquets of everlasting flowers that decorate furniture and walls in wintry climes, but we do need these flowers in the garden for they are very showy at all times and none will complain of the shortness of their blooming period. Two genera are of the best—Helipterum and Helichrysum. Both do well in local gardens and some grow a half dozen species of each. Nearly every local flower show contains exhibits of these fascinating flowers.

Does Heavy Egg Production Lessen Staminn?

THE A. P. A. AT CHICAGO. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

IN A GENERAL review of a late egg-laying contest held at Hawkesbury College, Australia, J. Hadlington calls attention to an appreciable decline in the progeny of heavy laying strains, which is beginning to tell in average high production. "It is feared," he says, "that the figures reflect to some extent a general decline in quality, and it will be well for the poultry farmer to ask himself the question: 'Have I secured as good development in my young stock as in previous years, and if not, why?' A broad analysis of the position will, I think, result in an almost unanimous conclusion that there is too great reliance on the factor of egg-laying capacity and pelvic measurements, and too little on the class of development secured in rearing the young."

In other words, excessive egg-laying is at the expense of other essential qualities in breeding stock, such as size, virility, stamina, prepotency, etc. You cannot fill in here without emptying there; what strengthens at one point, must necessarily weaken at another. In all things a due balance must be observed, if a perfect whole is to be maintained.

A. P. A. Membership.

Breeders and fanciers throughout the Southwest will be interested in the fact that the American Poultry Association at its Chicago meeting adopted a new constitution and by-laws which increase the life membership to $25, annual members to be admitted on an initiation fee of $5 and annual dues of $2. In the reports at hand it is not stated whether this applies only to new members, or whether the present membership (about 7000) is to be taxed an additional $15 to sustain its membership, the old life fee being but $10. If so, we are of the opinion that but few will "come through," after having been admitted to life membership for $10.

The Plymouth Rock Breed book, after some years in preparation, has finally been published. It is a volume of about 425 pages, rather freely illustrated, and sells for $3. Its companion, the Wyandotte Breed Book, is also in type, and will be on the market in the near future. The price of the Standard of Perfection was fixed by the Chicago meeting at $2.50 per copy. According to the roster, published by the American Poultry Journal, there were a few less than 100 delegates on the floor, which is a sad commentary on organized effort and the co-operative spirit of the approximately 7000 members. It looks very much like a rule of minorities in which the majority seems to have little or no interest.

The Importance of Buying.

The poultry literature of the day has much to say about marketing hen fruit and market poultry, breeding stock and day-old chicks; but very little on the importance of buying. Allowing for present conditions in the feed and general supplies market, it seems to us that intelligent buying is of as great importance as good salesmanship. Indeed, a good buy often means better profits. To buy poultry feeds in paper bags over the retail counter is to say the least unprofitable. In the first place the per pound rate is the highest retail price; to buy by hundredweight reduces the cost materially, while in ton lots there is a big saving over the retail price. But buying should also be done with discrimination as to quality. All feeds should be wholesome, palatable and nutritious, hence select pure grain, meal and animal foods—that which shows deleterious substances or any indication of taint should be avoided. If the quality of feed is inferior, undesirable results may be looked for in the prosperity of the flock, and a corresponding falling away of profitable receipts. Thousands of tons of poultry food are consumed annually in California and at prevailing prices it represents an annual turnover of thousands of dollars Hence the importance of quality, and the necessity of close discrimination on the part of poultry farm owners. Foods not up to certain known standards should not be tolerated even at reduced prices.

A Word to the Beginners.

If a beginner, and one can afford only a few pure-blooded fowl with which to form the nucleus of a flock, choose a year-old cock and two, three or four-year-old hens. The old hens and young sire are apt to throw males, and the few females will be elegant. Per contra, it is said by some that breeding from an old sire and a pullet will generally throw a preponderance of females. In selecting a trio, some breeders prefer a young sire, one old hen and a pullet. This may increase the number of pullets, but the blood is not so vigorous. An old hen is in established condition, and her eggs are stronger in every way than the eggs of a pullet. Nothing makes up to a chick what it failed to start with in the egg. Too much care cannot be taken with breeding stock. Indeed, it does not pay to start even with "average good" stock, expecting to improve it, when the best of strains are quite reasonable in price. If one is of the opinion that it is not good economy to spend reasonable money for a fine trio, then buy a setting of choice eggs, and allow a common broody hen to hatch them out for you, or secure a dozen or so day-old-chicks of recognized ancestry. The year following you ought to have a few fine fowl, and it is better to breed even from related birds, than to be always monkeying with a lot of scrubs. But in buying fine eggs, one can get two distinct strains. The eggs are marked, and when the chicks hatch they must also be marked by punching into the web of the feet; later on, of course, they can be leg-banded and numbered. When grown, the males from one strain are intended to be bred to the females of the other, best to best. In this way one gets a splendid start by the second year. But the fellow who buys the trio, buys also the labor and experience of some caretaker upon the fowls back a number of years, and by hatching their eggs, gets a numerous flock of good birds the second year.

Poultry raising is an interesting occupation for children.

A breeding pen of from five to seven birds is, however, the ideal start, and though it may cost a pretty piece of money, it is nevertheless a good investment, and among the knowing ones is usually observed.

Can Wheat be Dispensed With?

In reply to an inquiry for a feeding ration for poultry that would meet present economic conditions, Prof. M. E. Jaffa of the university says that wheat is not an essential to the prosperity of a flock of chickens. Here are his exact words:

"I do not think it necessary to feed hens wheat. It is true that they like rolled barley, but they will also eat it in its natural condition without any trouble, as we have often proved. If I were making up a mash I would not use middlings, or any of the corn products. I would use rice bran if I could get it; if not, some wheat bran, barley meal, cocoanut meal, first quality alfalfa meal, beef scrap and bone. For grain food I would use rolled barley or oats with some of the cheapest sorghums, and (if I could get it) 5 or 7 per cent. sunflower seed. I feel confident as to the nutritive value of the ration, and think it could be compounded cheaper than any other."

What do our practical poultrymen think about it?

Rhode Island Red and Ancona Show.

During the last week in August the Rhode Island Red and Ancona clubs held an open air fanciers' show on the home grounds of A. G. Goodacre at Compton. Pullets and cockerels of these popular breeds were shown. The Reds rather outnumbered the Anconas, though in both breeds the quality was excellent. The birds were cooped in the orchard, where the light and environment were ideal, and the weather superb, with a gentle ocean breeze prevailing, which rendered the temperature agreeable. Mr. Goodacre being a judge, fancier and breeder of wide reputation proved an ideal host, calling forth a splendid attendance and a fine display of young stock. After judges I. Dawson of British Columbia (Anconas) and Harold Walthew of Burbank (Rhode Island Reds) had made their awards, the assembled breeders and fanciers sat down to a basket luncheon, which was quite an affair. Later on a meeting of the Rhode Island Red Club was held which, though somewhat brief, was none the less interesting. J. J. Dean and E. A. Weaver presented handsome ribbons for the best novice Red male and female, both won by I. Heying of Anaheim. Mr. Walthew presented the ribbon for the champion Red of the show, won by A. G. Goodacre's first prize cockerel, who stood out by himself. Beginners in poultry culture showed up well and their entries were above the average. It was unanimously decided to make this fixture an annual affair. After a hearty vote of thanks had been extended to Mr. Goodacre for his hospitality and to Mr. Hocking for acting as secretary, and to the judges for giving their services, the show closed. The cooping in the hands of Mr. Fuchs was without reproach. In the Rhode Island Reds, the awards were as follows: Cockerels—First, A. G. Goodacre; second, A. G. Sly; third, A. G. Goodacre; fourth, Joseph Fowler; fifth, I. Heying. Special best novice Red male and female, I. I. Heying.

Put 'em on Dress Parade.

Beginning in October the Southern California fair season will open with the one at Riverside (October 7-11) and be succeeded by the shows at Los Angeles and San Diego, to be followed later by the winter poultry shows. All of which reminds us to admonish breeders and fanciers to make liberal entries. It is all very well to proclaim the quality of one's stock, but the actual test is to enter the competitive classes and let the judge pass on the birds—that, after all, is the real test of real quality. A win at the fairs possesses a commercial value which makes for sales; a win at the winter poultry shows does the same thing, only the competition is usually much keener, hence has a larger value, particularly among those of the poultry fraternity. The fellow who goes to the show and talks about the quality of his birds at home is anything but a sport.

Fall Buying of Fowls.

As a general proposition the fall of the year is a good time to buy stock. For the most part the breeding pens have been broken up and the birds given a rest; this condition leads breeders to offer some good matured breeders at nominal prices; it is also a period of the year when the pullets are culled down close to make room for the birds that are to be retained for the coming season, both as layers and breeders. It is also better that fowls be moved to new quarters before the fall laying commences, as it will accustom them to their new environment. Buys at this season of the year afford good prospects for those who are prepared to give their new acquisitions proper care and attention.

As in all other lines, the prices for good laying, foundation and exhibition has materially advanced during the past few years, and while the subject is more or less sensitive, hence a matter of individual bargaining and correspondence, there is nevertheless a certain standard to be observed. Exhibition specimens are in a class by themselves and may sell all the way from $20 to $200 per head, all depending on the show in which they are to compete and the amount of real sporting blood flowing in the veins of the purchaser. What may be styled good foundation stock will range all the way from $5 and up for females, and $10 and up for males. Males and females from good laying strains will bring not less than $5 for the former and $3 for the latter. The market for good stock has not been so strong for some years as it is at present, and we look for a scarcity this fall and winter.

Later on the day-old chick and egg for hatching season will again be with us. If people have the patience and "gumption" to bring up baby chicks and do their own hatching, this is a somewhat more economical way to break into the chicken business. Here, too, there is a noticeable advance in prices. Day-old chicks from good stock will probably command not less than 25 cents per head, and eggs for hatching not less than $3 per setting, with exhibition strains commanding as high as $15 per setting and day-old chicks $1 and up per head.

California Birds go Traveling.

It took the initiative and continuity of purpose of Southern California to do the handsome thing in the way of sending a carload of exhibition fowls to the State fair at Salem, Or., and the fair at Yakima, Wash. This exhibit of pure breds consisted of entries of Barred Rocks by Gill & Warrick of Glendale; Rhode Island Reds and Partridge Orpingtons by A. G. Goodacre of Compton; White Wyandottes by J. B. Janssen, Los Angeles; Single Comb White Leghorns by E. E. Emerson, Burbank; Anconas by W. H. Hocking, Los Angeles; Silver Seabright Bantams by J. J. Dean of Moneta, besides a number of others. That these birds will give a good account of themselves goes without saying. We believe the enterprise of their owners will result in an increase of patronage for each and everyone of them.

Can We Have One Here?

The educational exhibits at both the Boston and New York poultry shows this year will be under the supervision of Harry M. Lamon, in charge of poultry investigations, United States Department of Agriculture, who is now making up a programme that will be an important feature at each of these big annual poultry events. There will be afternoon and evening sessions on each day of the shows, and demonstrations in judging poultry, selecting nonlayers from layers, and other practical work with addresses by leading poultry breeders and experts. If such a thing is possible in New York and Boston why not in Los Angeles? Here is an opportunity for the Breeders' Association and the Los Angeles Poultry Fanciers' Show to add an educational function to both shows this winter that certainly would be worth while. Why not get busy and secure a like service for the poultry interests of this section?

Rice as a Feed for Fowls.

A correspondent writes for information as to the availability of rice as a grain food for poultry. Like all other feeding stuffs the price is a factor to consider. It finds some use in chick foods as a part of the ration, and if the price is right it may be used as a part of a regular balanced ration. Commercial rice has been husked and polished, losing therefore much of the protein it would otherwise possess; hence the grain with the hulls intact, known as paddy rice, is preferable. Rice is dificient in fat and mineral salts, but the starch content is high. Rice is often recommended because cheap; but we notice the market rules quite as stiff as for other grains. It makes a good fattening food boiled in milk, especially when "topping off" chickens and ducks for the market. We believe rice in any form finds limited use as a poultry food in California.

In this connection it is interesting to note the formula advised by the University Davis farm for its use in the ration, which is as follows: Equal parts of barley, oats, milo and wheat. Paddy, or brown rice, with husks removed, rice screenings may be advantageously used in a laying ration, to the extent of not more than one-third, by weight, of the grain mixture, if such rice can be bought at low enough prices to more than compensate with common poultry grains. Now that rice is raised in large quantities in this State the lower-priced grades, the broken article, etc., should be readily obtained, especially in the localities where the grain is raised, at very reasonable prices.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

What Kind of Show?

THE fourth annual demonstration of the Traction Engine and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California, which closed a week ago today, was worthy of a much larger attendance than found its way out to Melrose and Crescent avenues to see the great collection of modern farm machinery there assembled. At that, however, enough persons visited the demonstration to prove that Los Angeles is easily the best place in California in which to stage a tractor show. It is estimated that three or four times as many saw the Los Angeles show as attended the demonstration at Sacramento in the summer, and the interest upon the part of the farmers of the show territory was unquestionably much keener here. Nevertheless, the annual Los Angeles tractor show, like tractor shows almost everywhere, has ceased to be the drawing card it was at the start.

This waning of interest in tractor demonstrations may be attributed and is attributed by implement publications and many agricultural journals to a variety of causes. The principal reason probably is that farmers are so familiar with power farming and so accustomed to considering the tractor as an accepted fact in progressive agriculture that there is no longer the novelty there once was in seeing the modern steel horses at work. For another thing, the kind of shows that have been held has had something to do with the lack of attendance in the past year or two. The tractor demonstration as it started out and as it is still being held in most sections covers so much ground that it is a time-killing and body-exhausting task to take in one of them. Many farmers who have walked their legs off seeing one feel that they have had enough. Tractor shows have often been criticised, too, for their lack of variety and new interest. The visitor feels that when he has seen one he has seen them all.

As a matter of fact, this year's Los Angeles show was planned in such a way as to have interested a host of farmers who were tired of tractor demonstrations. In the first place the "still" features were emphasized as never before, machines and implements of every conceivable kind being shown in tents bunched closely together where a few steps would get a visitor from one to the other. These tent exhibits, too, were wonderfully interesting on account of the number of tractors shown in belt work and the many machines and implements that were "cut away" to show their working parts. Visitors interested in particular machines had only to say the word and tractors and implements were obligingly demonstrated for them in actual field work on the various near-by demonstration plots. Had this plan of handling the show been more generally understood and had the farmers of the section realized what a surpassing collection of tractors, implements and accessories had been assembled the attendance would undoubtedly have been larger.

Many arguments in favor of a still show without field demonstration features are advanced by the management of the great annual Kansas City still exhibit, the attendance at which was this year enormous. There is no more reason, according to the proponents of the still show, why tractors should be taken out of their show spaces and run around than for taking automobiles out of an auto show and putting them through their paces. Everyone knows, it is contended, that both the auto and tractor will run, and what people want to see is the newest in models, types and appliances placed where they may be examined in comfort and without exertion.

Another kind of show that may come into

FOURTH ANNUAL DEMONSTRATION OF GREAT EDUCATIONAL VALUE.

FARMERS who attended the fourth annual tractor demonstration given on the La Brea ranch September 16 to 21 saw an excellent exhibition of tractors, farm power machinery, implements and accessories. The primary purpose of the dealers exhibiting was to display and demonstrate the latest mechanical helps to greater production of farm crops. This purpose was successfully accomplished in ways calculated to impress the farm owners and lessees of Southern California who attended the show.

The unique plan of holding a combined "still" show and demonstration in the open was proven feasible by the interest displayed by visitors during the six days of the show. Dealers and their aides were busy much of the time in their tents explaining the operation and advantages of their machines and tools, while requests for demonstrations were numerous enough to keep the field men occupied in their respective demonstration plots. Substantial results in the way of sales were reported by a number of dealers, and the educational value of the show to the soil tillers who profited by it was great. Although the attendance was not large, exhibitors declare the interest displayed made up in part at least for the absence of crowds.

Eight tractors which had never before been exhibited in a joint dealers' demonstration were shown. Machines familiar to farmers in this section and which had undergone changes were exhibited for the first time. New sizes of established makes held the interest of visitors. Scores of new farm machines and implements made their bow to the public at this combined show. The hum of farm machines in operation was heard everywhere, and visitors gathered around feed cutters, silo fillers, hay balers, pumps throwing huge streams of water and numerous other agricultural labor-saving machines. The farmer's wife was interested, not only in motorized washing machines, milkers and lighting plants for the farm, but exhibited keen interest in the tractors and their operation.

Dealers did not wait for requests for operation of their tractors and other machines, as a rule. Some of them demonstrated the work of their tractors with various implements in preparing seed beds and cultivating an improvised orchard almost continuously during the six days.

Twenty-eight different makes of tractors were exhibited. They were the Allen, All-Work, Avery, Beeman, Bean, Best, Caterpillar, Cletrac, Fageol, Fordson, Heider, International, La Crosse, Little Bear, Merry Garden, Moline Universal, Samson, Sandusky, Bates Steel Mule, Stockton, Titan, Toro Motor Cultivator, Trundaar, Lambert Twin City, Union Yuba and Wallis. Close to 200 tractors in all were exhibited either in the still shows or in action. All were given a real test of their pulling power in the heavy adobe soil of the La Brea ranch land.

Each tractor exhibitor provided himself with a commodious tent and many had more than one canvas top in which to properly set out his wares and to demonstrate them. In these tents were attractively displayed the machines, working parts, cut-away models, charts and photographs. One exhibitor showed motion pictures of his tractor in actual work on farms. Tractors ran farm machines in many parts of the field. Besides plowing, cultivating, pulverizing, subsoil plowing and seeding demonstrations, tractors pulled huge land levellers.

A VERSATILE MACHINE.

The Community Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles, exhibited for the first time at a public demonstration its Los Angeles product, the 10-20 Allen Water Ballast tractor. Although many of these tractors are already in successful use on farms in California and other States, the first model of this tractor was not ready for the 1918 show. The Allen, without the removable ballast drums, intended to be filled with water or sand, pulled three twelve-inch plows ten inches deep through the heavy black adobe and then proceeded to prepare the seed-bed. The speed and continuously good performance of this tractor won praises from the visitors.

A NEW TRACTOR.

Another tractor shown in a demonstration for the first time in this section was the All-Work, shown by Leigh M. Railsbach, Southern California distributor. This machine, which is well and favorably known to farmers in the Middle West and East, is made by the Electric Wheel Company, Quincy, Ill. The machine develops fourteen horse power on the drawbar and twenty-eight on the belt. It is built low and is well adapted to Southern California conditions, particularly orchard work. This

"DOLLING UP" THE EXHIBITION FOWL.

The beauty contest season for poultry is again at hand and fanciers who previously have fretted over egg record and feeding rations are now concerned with grooming their birds in their best bib and tucker and preparing them for inspection by judges at fairs and poultry shows.

Something besides external beauty and fine feathers is required to win in the show ring. Every fowl, whether young or mature, should be in first-class show condition when it enters the exhibition hall. The plumage should be the standard length for the breed, lustrous and plentiful, the head bright red in color, and the comb developed to the required size. The specimen should appear in handsome dress, good physical condition, and trained to exhibit his good qualities to advantage. Careful training imparts to a bird sufficient confidence to assume and hold desired poses under show-room conditions.

If possible, obtain exhibition coops similar to those used at the show you will attend. Cover the floor with short, clean straw, or a mixture of bran and straw for feathered-leg breeds. Two months before the show place in the coops at night the birds you intend to exhibit. Visit the coops as frequently as you can and handle the birds often. Carry them around under the arm, open their wings and examine the under-color, and accustom them to every movement of the judge. It is not advisable or necessary to keep the show birds confined in the training coops. A day at a time is sufficient; then allow them the run of the house for two or three days, and outdoor exercise if seasonable.

It is necessary to examine your show birds carefully at least ten weeks before the show. Remove all imperfect feathers in the hope that they will be replaced by feathers of standard color. Frequently a colored feather showing a little white along the edge of the web will molt out perfectly when the fowl is well fed on sour-milk mash, meat and grain. Never pluck a new feather—one in which the quill is filled with fluid—as it will invariably return partially white. A few days before the exhibition again examine your birds and pluck the imperfect feathers. It is quite a problem to determine the best procedure when there is foreign color in some of the large feathers on the wings or tail. If the color is a disqualification there is no justification for shipping the bird to the show. What is best to do will depend upon the quality of the specimen in other sections, and upon the amount of defective color in the wings. Usually these defects are repeated in the similar feathers of each wing.

Many exhibitors of white fowls bleach the plumage of their birds with peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia. They mix in a china bowl a solution of three parts of peroxide of hydrogen and one part of ammonia. A clean muslin cloth is dipped in the solution and the bird is wrapped in it. The muslin is next covered with oiled silk or some waterproof cloth to confine the fumes of the bleaching gas. The peroxide-ammonia solution can be sponged on the plumage or sprayed with an atomizer. The only advantage in wrapping the bird is to make the bleach more effective.

The shanks and feet of exhibition fowls must be absolutely clean and well polished. To overcome rough scales rub the legs twice daily with a cloth dipped in kerosene and a short time before the show wash them thoroughly. Use a good scouring soap, woolen cloth and warm rain water. Remove any old or rough scales, and also the dirt between the scales. The latter can be taken out with toothpicks. Dry the shanks and apply a solution of equal parts of sweet oil and alcohol. Then warm a woolen cloth and scrape a little beeswax on it. The warmth will melt the wax, and the shanks should then be polished with the waxed cloth.

Before shipping the birds to the exhibition apply the sweet oil and alcohol solution to the face and comb. If you are showing white birds, fill their plumage after washing and when thoroughly dry with equal parts of bran and rice flour. Some exhibitors use cornstarch, which is equally satisfactory. This prevents the plumage becoming soiled, and when the starch is shaken out at the show and the fowls are groomed, they apparently take a higher polish. However, your coops must have wooden or muslin tops and sides to prevent rain from coming in contact with the starched plumage. The final grooming is accomplished with a silk handkerchief, rubbing and polishing the feathers until the plumage has a high luster.

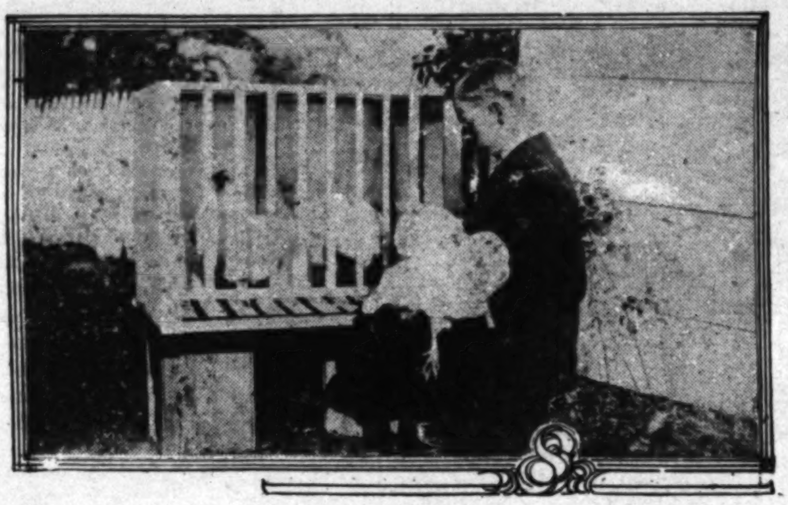
RAISING PIGEONS A SOURCE OF INCOME.

Many people can keep pigeons successfully as a side issue, although this requires constant oversight and careful attention to details. The greatest difficulties confronting the successful raiser of pigeons seem to be in securing good breeding stock and finding a good market for the produce of a small flock. Pigeons are a profitable source of income on general farms where they may secure much of their feed from the fields, provided they are not a nuisance and the loss by shooting and by hawks, owls, and cats is not large. They can also be raised successfully on farms where they are closely confined, provided the squabs can be marketed to good advantage.

Of the squab-raising varieties the Homer is considered the most popular variety. The habit of this bird of returning home if allowed freedom makes it necessary to confine pigeons purchased from other lofts. The Carneaux pigeon has recently become popular as a squab producer. This variety is somewhat larger than the Homer and it is stated is about as prolific. Several other varieties of pigeons larger than the Homer are used on a small scale in squab raising, especially in crossing with the Homer and Carneaux, to increase the size of squabs. The Runt is one of the largest, but is not as prolific or as good a breeder or feeder as the Homer.

Some of the other varieties reported used as squab breeders are the Dragoon, White Maltese, or hen pigeon, the White King, and the common pigeon.



Show birds should be trained in coops and handled frequently.

ENCOURAGE LAYING HENS TO EXERCISE.

Close confinement without exercise is not conducive to the best results, although the feed provided may be the best, for idle hens soon grow too fat to lay. It is almost impossible to give laying hens which are confined too much exercise. The fowls may be encouraged to exercise in various ways, such as feeding corn on the cob, suspending caggabe heads, beets, etc., so that the birds have to jump for them. and scattering grain in the litter. The litter should be from four to eight inches deep, and may consist of straw (either cut or whole,) hay, leaves, buckwheat hulls, shredded corn fodder, or any convenient material of this nature. The hens should be kept hungry enough so that they will work diligently all day for the grain scattered in this litter, which should be removed whenever it becomes damp or soiled.

According to the Petaluma Poultry Journal, five men care for 33,000 head of poultry on the Corliss ranch in Sonoma county. This is made possible by labor-saving appliances and modern equipment throughout the plant.

SOME FIGURES ON POULTRY RAISING.

POMONA.—Anyone who contemplates going into the poultry business missed a fine lot of useful information in the talk given by H. W. Boone, residing between Pomona and Chino, to the Poultry Breeders' Association at a recent meeting held at the public library. Mr. Boone took as a subject "Poultry as a Business."

One of the points which Mr. Boone made in the beginning of his talk was that there has been very little authentic data available for the prospective poultryman for the reason that few have kept accurate account of expenses and receipts. Then, what data was to be found was unreliable, as there was such variation, due to the inaccuracy. Mr. Boone took a hypothetical case and illustrated what a family should do in case a decision was made to try poultry as a living, the whole family putting combined efforts in the undertaking.

Assuming that a family can live on $1500 per year, he gave figures for the minimum investment which should be made to realize that sum and have a small surplus as profit. He finds that by purchasing two and one-half acres of land and erecting a plain, small house, equipping the plant and paying expenses until it begins to yield returns, there is a total outlay of $5840. The following table will indicate his ideas:

Cost of two and one-half acres and house	$1500
Poultry houses	1150
Brooder and weaning equipment	600
Tools, etc.	200
Living expenses for ten months (when income starts)	1250
Cost of raising 1000 pullets to time of laying	1140
Total	$5840

Mr. Boone estimates the total income from a poultry ranch of the size indicated will be $4820 per year, which shows a net profit to the family, above living expenses, of $580. This is 10 per cent. on the investment, which is considered fair in agricultural or kindred lines.

MEANING OF TRADE TERMS.

Every line of industry possesses a vocabulary peculiar to itself, to which the poultry business is no exception. To those in the trade these are of course perfectly understood; but to the general public they are largely a closed book. In the interest of specific knowledge we hereby give a few explanations of the more ordinary poultry terms:

A cockerel is a male bird less than a year old.

A cock is a male bird over a year old.

A pullet is a female bird less than a year old.

A hen is a female bird over a year old.

A yearling is generally one counted as having laid for twelve months.

A setting of eggs is thirteen, although many poultrymen have increased it to fifteen.

A broiler is a bird weighing two pounds or less and from six to twelve weeks old.

A spring chicken is a young bird weighing over two pounds.

A capon is the male bird deprived of its generative organs for the purpose of improving the weight and delicacy of its carcass.

A stewing chicken weighs about three pounds.

A roaster weighs four or more pounds.

A QUESTION OF ORDER.

System is quite as important in the management of a poultry plant as it is in a bank or large mercantile establishment. A place for everything and everything in its place; a regular daily routine timed to the hour; a practical method of keeping accounts, showing a debit for every credit are some of the essentials which are too often neglected or but indifferently observed. The efficient manager is he who has his requisites and appliances all nicely arranged and classified, so that when nails or screws are wanted, when packing and shipping material is necessary, when correspondence has to be attended to and accounts liquidated and collected, he knows just where to find his material and also its economical handling. Every device and operation that will conserve time and labor, that enhances quality of product and an expeditious service, counts for success in every line of business, and in none more so than in the com-

TWO EGGS PER DAY.

We often hear of breeders extolling the laying capacity of their strains by the assertion that certain hens will now and then lay two eggs in a single day; which is not impossible, but beyond the mere statement that is about all the information such statements contain. The report of the poultry department of the Storrs (Ct.) agricultural experiment station says:

The most unusual incident of the week, and for that matter for any previous week, is the fact that a White Rock pullet, a Rhode Island Red and a White Leghorn all laid two eggs in one day, and strangely enough they were all laid late in the day, that is, from 5 to 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. It has been more or less commonly believed that when a hen lays two eggs in a single day that one of these is produced early in the morning and the other in the late afternoon, but this is certainly not always the case. Sometimes the two eggs are laid within two or three minutes of each other.

The Agricultural Relief Committee of Great Britain has purchased within the last few weeks 3062 head of poultry, of which 1000 have been sent to Belgium and the remainder to France, in addition to which 6664 hatching eggs have been dispatched to the former country.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

YUCAIPA.—The Yucaipa packing house, where practically all the apples grown in this district are being handled, is now working with a big force. There will be over 100,000 boxes of choice or fancy apples packed at the house and probably close to 150,000. Because of the great demand for apples there will be no apples canned and few evaporated this year. The cull applies will be sold loose in boxes and taken to cities for distribution. The King David apples are now being handled, following the Gravensteins and the early varieties. There will be some King Davids to handle next week, as most of the growers have been piece-picking their trees, taking off the largest and ripest fruit to save the trees, which were heavily bent down under the load of apples. The Delicious, one of the largest crops of the valley, is now ready to be packed and picking of this apple has been started. In all probability there will be no apple show given in the valley this year because most of the growers are having to do more now than they can do. It is hard to get the labor needed for handling the crop in the short time and for that reason the apple show will be passed up for one year.

A PRODUCTIVE TREE.

WHITTIER.—To the horticultural experimenter no more promising field presents itself in the Southland than that of growing avocados. From a beginning about a decade ago avocado growing has just really entered the commercial stage. The search for new varieties still goes on and many seedlings give promise of commercial importance. An eight-year-old Marietta type seedling on the Worsham ranch just east of the Whittier city limits was the center of much attention during the past season on account of the natural beauty of the tree, its symmetry and dense, dark-green foliage and also because of the number and quality of its fruit. Growing on a gentle southern slope, the trees seems in be in its native habitat. The fruit is medium size and ripens in January, February and March. Normally the fruit runs about twelve ounces, though many of them reached a pound in weight. At regular Los Angeles prices the owner received better than $400 for the 1919 crop.

HAS SEEDLESS FIG.

POMONA.—Comes now a boon to false teeth in the shape of a seedless fig. Who of those blessed with a set of "store teeth" will ever forget their first attempt to masticate a fig whose million (more or less) of little seeds persisted in getting up under the plate and taking all the pleasure out of the business? W. F. Bolinger, 1461 East Fifth avenue, is the man with the seedless fig. He not only claims he has figs without seeds, but he produces them. What is more, there is plenty of fig left in his variety after the seeds are gone. Mr. Bolinger states that the tree from which his seedless figs come was grown from a cutting which he got in Redlands from a seedless tree more than twenty years old. The owner of the ranch on which this parent tree stands has been there eight years and he says that, although the tree has had an abundance of fruit each season, he has yet to see a fig with seeds. Where the tree came from originally is not known. Mr. Bolinger has sent several specimens of the fruit to Prof. Wickson, formerly of the State Horticultural Bureau, and to Prof. Condit of the University of California. He received replies from both saying that they had never seen such a fig before and were unable to classify either the fruit or the tree. They pronounced it a freak tree, although Mr. Bolinger has a couple of hundred trees now growing from cuttings taken from the parent tree and has not found a seed in any of the figs from these. He says that they require more water than the other varieties of figs, but aside from that they respond to the usual care.

ORANGE GROVES PAY.

REDLANDS.—One of the greatest proofs of the soundness of the orange business and the profits to the grower is the fact that men who have been in the business the longest are slowly increasing their holdings, wanting from fifty to a hundred acres now instead of the ten or twenty they had a few years ago. These men, who have been through the worst years of the industry in the south, have found that their orange property has paid them a better return on their investment than any other holdings. In this district the Cochranes, the Clocks, the Arths, Lombards, Hubbards, Lyons Strait and other big growers are holding on to their good groves and buying more when a grove of the nature they want is offered. The past year has demonstrated that, taken over a period of years, the navel pays almost as well as the Valencia, although the navel tree will in all probability not have as large a crop as the Valencia or the seedling will have. The men who are adding to their holdings are men who have taken care of their groves, studied the soil and added to it the fertilizer or builder needed. Those who have quit the game are people who expected to take out of the grove and not put back, but it has been proven that this cannot be done. The groves that have been neglected have not borne paying crops for two or three years.

ORANGE PRUNING.

ALHAMBRA.—Under the auspices of the Pasadena-Lamanda Park Farm Bureau center citrus growers of this section recently enjoyed an orange pruning demonstration conducted by Farm Advisers Hodgson and Blanchard of the county office. Between seventy-five and one hundred interested growers turned out to witness the demonstration, which was held at the place of Mrs. A. A. Schoonover, 1118 South Garfield avenue. This being the first Farm Bureau activity in the Alhambra section, Mr. Hodgson gave a preliminary talk regarding the Farm Bureau as to its scope, its purpose, its organization and how it works. There was so much interest manifest that it is expected a new center will be formed in this section, a number of growers evincing a desire to join the organization. Old navel and Valencia trees were pruned after an interesting discussion by Mr. Hodgson on the principles underlying the pruning of fruit trees as uncovered by scientific researches during the past quarter of a century. The system he advocated in a nutshell consists of selection of buds for propaganda from the very best parent trees only, rigorous exclusion of all suckers and rank growing wood and keeping the trees moderately open to allow sunlight to penetrate and induce inside fruiting. He advised strongly against severe pruning and stated that one of the main objects for pruning old trees should be to distribute the response uniformly all over the tree rather than by localizing it at any one place by severe cutting. A number of requests for a scalybark control demonstration being made arrangements are now under way for a demonstration of this character for this section in October.

GOOD COMBINATION.

HOLTVILLE.—A new combination of live-stock ranching has been tried out recently by U. S. Kuffel, one of Imperial Valley's old time dairymen, who is farming 120 acres, directly west of Holtville three miles. This combination is a good sized flock of sheep with a small herd of milch cows. Mr. Kuffel has always been very successful with his cows, but until April, 1918, has never handled sheep. He then bought 480 ewes with lambs by their sides for $8000. Up to July 1, 1919, he has sold from these ewes, $8400 worth of lambs and wool and still has the original ewes. In addition, Mr. Kuffel has a herd of sixteen dairy cows, nine of which are first calf heifers. His cream checks for the past eight months have run from $234 to $248 a month. As eight of these cows are due to freshen early this fall and consequently are nearly dry, this shows that quality of his stock. He has a highly bred Holstein bull, closely related to the King of the Pontiacs. The brother of the sire of Mr. Kuffel's bull sold for $50,000. Mr. Kuffel says that the great advantage in running a herd of this size with sheep, is that it is small enough to be handled by the ranch owner and one boy, and does not require the employment of a special milker.

NEW WATER SYSTEM.

PERRIS.—At the Falfadale Ranch near this city has just been completed the first part of a new irrigation plant which displaces the old air-lift system and greatly increases the water supply. One of the new pumps, which is of the latest turbine centrifugal type, delivers over 500 feet per minute, using only sixty-nine horse-power. The other, a 125-foot pump of the same type, is lifting from a twelve-inch well over 700 gallons per minute, and using only forty-six horse-power. The Falfadale ranch is the property of H. H. Carver of the Brownberger Business College of Los Angeles, and consists of over 160 acres, with a fine herd of registered Duroc Jersey hogs.

The average farm implement is only about half worn out by use alone. The rest of the wear is due to rust and decay. Make the greatest possible profit out of machinery by using it continuously for profitable work until it is worn out.

TUBER MOTH MAY BE SERIOUS PEST.

Depredations of the potato tuber moth are showing up from time to time, and in some cases, plantings have shown a high percentage of infestation.

The moth, which is the adult stage of this pest, is about one-half inch long with wings decidedly gray in color. It lays eggs upon the leaves and stems of the growing plants or upon exposed tubers during the growing season, or, upon the tubers at digging time. The eggs are small, globular and pearly white.

During the summer months, the eggs hatch out within fifteen days into caterpillars which feed upon the leaves and work within the stems and tubers in the field or upon the tubers when they are stored. The larva is white to slightly pink in color, with a black head. It is about three-fourths of an inch in length when full grown.

It is the larva of the tuber moth that does the most serious damage, which consists in making burrows through all parts of the tubers. The larva matures in from three to five weeks, when it spins cocoons in which to pupate. During the summer months, the pupal period occupies from fourteen to twenty days, while during the winter, it may require several months.

The adults which then hatch out are usually very abundant in the fall and often do very serious damage, especially to the potatoes which are dug early. The moths are night flyers, and if the tubers are exposed over night, the females lose no opportunity in depositing their many eggs, usually over all of them, making a serious infestation. The adults live only a few days.

There are several host plants of this pest, consisting of the cat-tail, egg plant, ground cherry, nightshade and tomatoes. All these host plants should be kept from growing in or around the potato fields. The potatoes should be planted deep and hilling should be practiced where this pest is troublesome, to prevent access to the tubers.

The potatoes should be dug as early as possible and never left in the field over night unless sacked.

In heavy infestations, soaking in water for thirty-six hours has been practiced as a disinfectant, but this is not to be generally recommended, as it is claimed by some shippers to ruin the potatoes.

Fumigation of infested tubers is perhaps the best method of treatment. Three ounces of potassium cyanide per 100 cubic feet of space is recommended to kill the larvae in infested potatoes, but sometimes does not kill all the young.

In the storage bins, one or two pounds of carbon bisulphide to every 1000 cubic feet of air space for forty-eight hours is usually sufficient to kill the eggs; fifteen to sixteen hours usually suffice to kill the larvae in the tubers. The fumigation will not injure the potatoes, according to various experiments.

In some cases, it is advisable to practice crop rotation, when grain, corn and forage crops are recommended. These rotations should not be for a period of less than five or six years.—[G. E. G.

IN POULTRY CIRCLES.

Henry Mumford, whom many fanciers will recall as a breeder and exhibitor of White Rocks and White Leghorns, returned recently from overseas service in Italy, and naturally has at once resumed his poultry operations on his ranch situated in Burbank.

From a New England correspondent we learn that Harry B. Daniels of St. Johnsbury, Vt., one of the oldest breeders of fancy poultry in the New England States, will leave in the early fall for his new home in Pasadena.

Are we to have two varieties of Brown Leghorns? One would think so from the fact that a petition will be presented at the next annual meeting of the American Poultry Association calling for a double standard, viz., one for dark matings and one for light. If this "gets by" we shall probably have a similar agitation, along the same lines, covering Barred Rocks.

The last monthly report of the Poultry Producers of Central California shows a decline in the number of eggs received. The report also shows that over 500,000 hens have been signed up to the new contract of the organization.

A good fattening mixture is made as follows: Cornmeal, three parts; ground oats, one part; bran, one part; crude tallow, one part; all parts by weight. The entire mess should be scalded and given for the first three meals of the day, with all the corn and wheat the fowls will consume at night.

The European telegraph announces the arrival of the American steamer Sun at Genoa a fortnight ago with 5,000,000 eggs for Switzerland in 12,000 boxes. These were dumped on the mole in a blazing sun, and, owing to the difficulty of transport, the whole cargo was allowed to spoil. This may be an incident influencing the H. C. of L.

EARLY TABLE GRAPES PROVING PROFITABLE IMPERIAL PRODUCT.

BY W. O. JOHNSON, IMPERIAL COUNTY FARM ADVISER.

EL CENTRO.—The raising of early table grapes presents one of the most attractive propositions we have in Imperial county today. It has been known for several years that the Malagas and Thompson's Seedless ripen here from two weeks to a month earlier than in any other locality in the State, with perhaps the exception of the Coachella Valley where the grape acreage is small. Five years ago grapes were yielding as well as at present, but few growers were unable to market them with any profit and, as a consequence, in 1913-1914 many vineyards were taken out.

Packing grapes in Imperial Valley.

At the El Centro Fruit and Produce Company's vineyard, two miles east of Holtville, the crop was harvested by turning in the hogs. Today we find an opportunity in an entirely different condition. Some of the same men who took out their vineyards then are replanting. E. H. Worley, north of McKim's bridge, is one of these.

There is no difference in the productivity of the vineyards, it is simply due to the fact that the marketing facilities have been very greatly improved. This year there are probably 500 acres in the valley, 400 of these in Malagas and 100 in Thompson's Seedless. The average yield was from four and one-half to five tons to the acre and the average profit $400 per acre.

AN AMAZING PROFIT.

The purchase by E. H. Morton of Fresno county of a forty-acre vineyard near the Meloland experiment station from Arkalin Bros. has been given considerable publicity and is one of the deals which has attracted attention to the growing of early table grapes. Mr. Morton bought this tract for $20,000 and within a few months sold the crop on the vines to an eastern dealer for $14,000.

One reason for increased interest in grapes is the heavier yield due to more careful irrigation and better pruning. On the Howard Jones ranch, three miles northeast of Holtville, there is a vineyard, part of which is nearly twelve years old. In 1918 its production was about three and one-half tons per acre. This ranch is leased for 1919 to F. Henry, a man who has practically grown up among the grapes of the San Joaquin Valley and who is probably more experienced in handling the vines than any man in Imperial county. Mr. Henry is a man not bound by old traditions, and his method of pruning is in direct opposition to the old recognized custom. Mr. Henry leaves much more wood on the vines, and as a consequence, after a few years of pruning by his methods the vines instead of being from one and one-half to two feet across the top, will be from two and one-half to three and one-half feet. Under his systematic pruning, this vineyard which yielded three and one-half tons per acre in 1918, yielded seven tons to the acre in 1919. Some of his Malaga vines produced four crates of twenty-four pounds each. One two and one-half-acre piece, with less than 1100 vines, netted $1413 on the vines. Mr. Henry is confident that by early summer pruning the ripening of Malagas can be advanced to July 15. It is to be hoped that other growers will adopt this improved method of pruning.

CHOICE OF LAND.

In choosing land for grapes, two things must be borne in mind: Light, sandy soils give earlier grapes and those of better quality with larger berries; on harder soils grapes are apt to be somewhat smaller in size as well as later, therefore, they will come into competition with the San Joaquin grapes. It is questionable on this account, whether year in and year out it will pay to grow grapes on hard soil in Imperial Valley.

The second important point to be observed in selecting one's soil is that there should be good underground drainage. Land which has so high a water table that it will not grow alfalfa or good corn crops should never be selected. The drainage ought to be of the best. For this reason land with a heavy fall or located near or on the bank of a river is generally excellent.

There is not much choice between Malagas and Thompson's Seedless for commercial purposes and it is well to plant half of each. Thompson's Seedless come on first and by the time they are ripe and off the vines, the Malagas are ready to pack. It is best to plant your vineyard in February or in the early spring. Put the Thompson's in 6x12 feet apart and Malagas 8x10. If possible, plant your rows so as to irrigate east and west and put Thompson's Seedless on trellis. On trellis they are from 30 to 50 per cent. more productive than when on stakes, however, if land will not irrigate east and west, put Thompson's Seedless on stakes on account of excessive rays of the sun.

CUTTING HARD TO GET.

It is almost impossible to procure rooted cuttings from the San Joaquin Valley. First, because in anticipation of the prohibition movement, the vineyards there did not set out many cuttings for this year and, second, because this county is quarantined against the larger part of the San Joaquin Valley because of the diseases prevalent among vines there. In order to get cuttings ready to plant in March, put them in the ground in January. A skillful grape man can get rooted cuttings in two months and when these are planted about 80 per cent. of them will live.

COOLING PLANT NEEDED.

The man who has done as much, if not more, than any other to advance the early grape industry in Imperial is George Johnston of Etiwanda, who has been contracting for and shipping grapes from the valley for a number of years, and largely through his efforts the shipping facilities have been greatly improved. According to Mr. Johnston grape growing in Imperial Valley was formerly discredited because the growers did not specialize on grapes but raised them as a side issue and often turned them over to the hired man, hence did not themselves acquire a proper knowledge of grape culture. Second, grapes were shipped f.o.b. Imperial Valley, hence packing was hasty and the grapes did not arrive in good condition at the destination, and Imperial Valley was blamed.

The greatest need of Imperial Valley, according to Mr. Johnston, is a pre-cooling plant such as almost all the coast districts possess. Pre-cooling puts a cool, dry blast through the entire car and takes all moisture and gas out of the grapes or other fruit, and the grapes stand shipping much better. It also saves ice, allows heavier shipping, allows lower rates and insures almost perfect condition of grapes at destination. Grapes are now being sent almost entirely by express at the cost of $1.16 per crate; by freight the cost is 51 cents a crate. Even the loss in time in sending by freight and the condition of the grapes upon arrival at destination, however, does not justify the difference in cost of shipping. If a pre-cooling plant were put in, grapes could be shipped by freight and the growers would receive a much greater profit. I look forward to a very great increase in grape acreage in Imperial Valley, and believe that in ten or twelve years Imperial Valley will be almost as well known for its early grapes as it is today for its early cantaloupes.

The question may be asked, "What are the diseases to which grapes are subject here?" As yet we know of very few. A little stem mildew and sour berry have been found, but probably the Black Beetle which in the spring eats out the buds, and the California Oriole, which eats the ripened grapes, have so far proven the most troublesome.

The rancher with small capital will inquire how long after planting will his vineyard prove profitable. It may be answered that at the end of three years the yield will pay expenses of his labor and Thompson's Seedless will produce from fifty to 100 pounds per vine after the third year.

PORRIDGE FOR POULTRY.

Table scraps and kitchen waste are best prepared for feeding by running them through an ordinary meat grinder. After the material has been put through the grinder it is usually a rather moist mass, and it is well to mix with it corn meal, bran, or other ground grain until the whole mass assumes a crumbly condition. The usual method is to feed the table scraps at noon or at night, or at both times, as may be desired, in a trough or on a board. All should be fed that the hens will eat up clean, and if any of the material is left after one-half or three-quarters of an hour it should be removed. If allowed to lie it may spoil and would be very bad for the hens.

OLIVES WILL RUN BIG.

From present crop indications it would appear that olives will again run to large sizes this season.

A BRITISH RECORD.

The record price paid for a Shorthorn bull in Great Britain was realised recently at the Royal Agricultural Show at Cardiff, where the great male, Edgcote Hero, 2 years and 9 months old, was sold by A. J. Marshall of Bridgbank to a Scottish breeder.

THE NEED FOR THE COMPLETE UTILIZATION OF SKIM MILK.

BY ARTHUR L. DAHL.

IN THESE days of soaring prices and the crying need of people in all parts of the world for food, any means of saving existing food supplies is just as good as increasing their production. Compared to pre-war times, the actual loss through spoilage or wastage of perishable foods is greatly reduced, and yet Uncle Sam tells us that we are actually throwing away every day vast quantities of valuable human food.

One source of this wastage is in the non-utilization of the millions of gallons of skimmed milk turned out as a by-product of the large city creameries. A great amount of skim milk is fed to stock, where conditions are favorable for deliveries, and yet agents of the Department of Agriculture have found cases where 25,000 pounds of skim milk is wasted daily in a certain creamery, and in another factory 10,000 pounds run down the sewer every day.

Of the 84,000,000,000 pounds of milk produced annually in the United States, 41 per cent. is used for butter making. In securing cream to make butter, approximately five-sixths of the original milk remains as skim milk. In other words, about 29,000,000,000 pounds of skim milk is produced as a by-product, and a great deal of it is wasted. Some of it is condensed, much of it is fed to live stock, and a portion is used for cooking, but the balance which is not used at all contains enough food values to bring up to normal all the underfed children of our larger cities.

MILK IDEAL FOOD.

Whole milk, dietitians tell us, is an ideal food for the human body as it contains all the elements necessary to sustain and build it up. In addition to the butter fat, which approximates 12 per cent. of the milk, it contains the carbohydrates or energy-making elements, the proteins or muscle-building elements, the mineral salts or elements which build bone and teeth and help in the digestive process, and other foods required for our well-being. When milk is skimmed for its fat, practically all of the carbohydrates, mineral salts and proteins remain in the skimmed milk. If these valuable food elements were utilized for human consumption instead of being fed to stock, or wasted, the world would be enriched by a healthier race of people. Even when skimmed milk is utilized by feeding to stock, only about 30 per cent. is converted into food for humans, because the remainder is all used up in the energy of growth by the stock.

Some interesting facts were disclosed by health officers in various cities who investigated the increase in cost of fresh milk in those communities. According to Dr. Marion P. Hopkins of the Baltimore health department, there were thousands of children in the congested district of Baltimore who were suffering from under-nourishment, while at the same time vast quantities of skimmed milk were being dumped into the sewers by the dairymen, who had skimmed surplus local supplies for the butter fat and thrown away the skimmed milk. He said that if a portion of this wasted food had been given to the children much of the trouble from underfeeding would have been obviated. Similar conditions were recently brought to light in San Francisco and other cities.

COTTAGE CHEESE CAMPAIGN.

The Department of Agriculture in an endeavor to overcome this condition that resulted in the daily wastage of thousands of gallons of skim milk, carried on a campaign to educate the people to an appreciation of the merits of cottage cheese, believing that if this surplus stock could be converted into cottage cheese, it would be used as a substitute for meats and other high-priced foods. Calculations indicated wonderful possibilities. It was figured that if all the 29,000,000,000 pounds of skim milk were converted into cottage cheese its food value would be practically equivalent to our annual consumption of beef. Of course, it was practically impossible to convert all of the skimmed milk into cottage cheese, but the efforts of the government demonstrators resulted in greatly increasing the consumption of cottage cheese, the quantity sold daily in one city jumping from ten pounds to 3000, and in another from thirty-five pounds to more than a ton. The creamery which poured 10,000 pounds of skim milk down the sewer every day turned it into 700 pounds of cottage cheese.

In the country the government agents interested in the cottage-cheese campaign found that while there was an abundance of skim milk found on nearly every farm, but a very small proportion was used for human food, most of it going to feed pigs or calves. In many cases the skim milk was thrown away, as the remark "why, skim milk isn't worth anything" was frequently heard.

The principal reason why skim milk has not been more fully utilized in the cities is the difficulty in marketing it. Being perishable in nature, and lacking color and taste in its natural condition, it is almost impossible to dispose of any great quantity of it. And yet dietitians say that skimmed milk is valuable as a cooking ingredient, when combined with a fat to replace the cream extracted from the whole milk. The dietitians further say that fat is fat, whether it comes from an animal or from cottonseed, or peanuts, or cocoanuts. The various kinds may have different tastes, but from a food standpoint all are valuable for body building.

TASTES CHANGING.

If we look back over the last decade we will find that some wonderful strides have been made in our efforts to provide the variety and quantity of food demanded by our increased population and the demands of foreign commerce. Whereas, in the past animal fat was almost entirely used for cooking, today there are a dozen vegetable-fat compounds on the market, all giving satisfactory service according to the tastes appealed to. Oil is extracted from corn, from cotton seed, from peanuts, and from cocoanuts for use in cooking or the preparation of food supplies. The butter fat contained in whole milk is generally considered more palatable than the fat from other sources, but the others have their place in popular esteem. One of the means suggested by food scientists for utilizing the great quantities of skim milk now wasted, is to combine a vegetable oil with the skim milk, in a proportion approximating whole milk, render the product non-perishable through condensation or evaporation, and present it to the housewife in a form convenient for use in her cooking operations. Today, she buys her fruits and her vegetables in cans, and if the by-products of our big dairies could come to her in as convenient a form, say the food scientists, the problem of saving the wasted skim milk would be solved.

While skim milk, combined with a vegetable fat to take the place of the butter fat extracted would not be available for many of the uses of whole milk, its value for cooking purposes would, it is believed, be great. Every housewife and professional cook knows that certain vegetables cooked or mixed with milk instead of water, has a finer flavor and is more palatable, and the use of skim milk for cooking would not only add to the food value, but would improve the flavor of the article served.

Dr. North of New York is reported as saying that the dairy herds of this country, consisting of about twenty-three million cows, are about 25 per cent. short of the number required to give each man, woman and child in these United States the amount of milk products necessary for the proper growth and development of the human system. In view of this statement, it behooves us to utilize to the fullest extent every part of our milk supply, either in the form of fresh milk, cheese or condensed or powdered supplies. We have learned to use and like ordinary condensed milk, and there is no reason why our surplus skim milk should not be saved and used in the same way.

NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW.

From its beginning the National Dairy Show has been a magnet, drawing to its exhibitions and associated convention many Californians who are interested in dairying. This year the Federal government has joined with the management to make it the biggest and most instructive show that has yet been held. Doubtless a larger number tha never before will go to Chicago for the week October 6-12. Heretofore they have gone by ones and twos on different days and different trains, to be lost as Californians in the great crowds that attend the show. Now the vice-director of the California College of Agriculture and dean of the University Farm School is the president of the National Dairy Show. Californians ought to have pride in that fact and do something to show it. With this idea in mind, the directors of California Dairy Council have arranged for a special car to be attached to the Overland Limited leaving Oakland pier Thursday morning, October 2. The president of the show will head the party. Every person who intends to attend the show is urgently invited to immediately file his reservation with Sam H. Greene, secretary-manager, 268 Market street, San Francisco, so that proper arrangements can be made.

AN OLD-TIME CITRUS MAN ON THE PESTIFEROUS JUNE DROP.

BY GEORGE M. COOLEY.

[The June drop has been attributed to about everything but the phases of the moon and no one need be surprised if that theory bobs up. Mr. Cooley is an experienced grower and has some ideas of his own not only about the drop, but about citrus culture in general. Many will disagree with some of his conclusions, but all citrus men are bound to be interested in them.—Ed.]

FOR many years I have made some quite expensive experiments in trying to solve the problem of the so-called June drop in oranges and have used every effort at my command, even to the extent of almost living with my trees, doing my own irrigating, watching and studying their wants as carefully as I did in the bringing up and education of my children. After these years of careful study I am convinced that a complete remedy is beyond the power of man.

The cause of the great drop in the young fruit is partially due to climatic condition. My many experiments so thoroughly convinced me that the foundation of the trouble was climate that I then decided not to desert the ship, but to study out some course which was still left for man to take in an effort to overcome the drop in part. So I consulted my assistant at my ranch, Mr. Ellis, and we mapped out a course intended to build up the trees, making them strong and vigorous, to enable them to pass through the period when the climatic conditions were against the young fruit.

Before entering into the discussion of the plan which was agreed upon to build up the trees, I will explain the nature of the soil which my grove occupies in order that the reader may judge for himself whether his soil will admit of the same treatment which has proved so satisfactory to me in the care of my Valencia grove. My soil is a bench loam containing considerable grit. The soil averages from twenty-five to thirty feet in depth and seems to get richer and softer as it extends downward. Some writers have produced articles on the science of tree life and have made the statement that the orange tree is a shallow-rooted tree, never extending deeper than thirty to thirty-six inches. This is true in part, but only where the soil is underlaid with hardpan, or has only a shallow surface built upon a boulder or rock base. I have seen trees washed out by storm water where the soil was deep and water was down to the depth of twenty feet or more. The tap roots of the orange and grapefruit trees were more than there times the depth stated by the writers referred to. I then dug up a tree where I knew the irrigation water had never gone below three to four feet and found that the tap roots had extended a few inches within the dry earth and at this point had turned almost at right angles and had run out, slanting upward in search of moisture. These facts were conclusive evidence to me that shallow irrigation was all wrong where the soil would admit of putting the water deep into the earth.

DEEP IRRIGATION.

Mr. Ellis and myself decided to break up the mat of surface roots by deep plowing and cultivating, thus forcing the root system to a deeper level. The method adopted to deepen the water in the soil was by putting three large shovels on the cultivator, setting them down from eight to ten inches, and making six of these so-called ditches between each space of twenty-two feet. As the water in my grove runs from north to south, I commenced making ditches on the lower side of the orchard east and west. As soon as the orchard was all laid off east and west, it was then ditched in the same manner north and south and the water turned on, allowing it to reach the lower end. The filling and banking of the furrows were done by myself and one other man. All of the ground was filled with water except a piece four feet square immediately under the tree. This piece was kept dry on the surface to prevent gumming the trunks of the trees. This irrigation was finished the 5th of February last. As soon thereafter as the soil was in condition, the harrow was used to smooth down the banks slightly and the ground was left in this condition to conserve all rain water for the balance of the season, using the harrow after each rain at the proper time, resulting in no loss of rain water by running off. This February irrigation consumed a stream of water sixty-five inches for ninety hours, or 3,159,000 gallons for ten acres, supplementing the scanty rainfall of last season by nearly twelve inches.

The trees soon showed the benefit of this deep irrigation and conservation of all the rain water. By destroying all the matted surface roots and deep wetting of the soil, the root system of the trees was set to working downward in search of moisture and new plant food, thereby lessening the cost of fertilizers; while the deeper root system has resulted in a marked falling off in the wilting of the trees in the middle of the days this summer. In the latter part of March, the orchard was deeply cultivated both ways and then harrowed, leaving a deep mulch to conserve the moisture. Another deep irrigation was added in the latter part of May and followed by the same cultivation. This method insures ample moisture to carry the trees through the critical period of June and early July when the dropping is rampant.

HAVE TREES ROBUST.

As before stated, the June and early July dropping of the young fruit is caused by climatic conditions and is beyond man's power to completely control; but a partial control can be obtained by having the trees in a strong, healthy growing condition before the critical period sets in. My experiments have fully convinced me that we cannot continually grow oranges on old wood. The trees must be kept in a strong, growing condition during spring and summer that the process of renewing may continuously go on. The orange is a tropical fruit and requires a more even climate than we have had of late years. It will not totally withstand the great difference between the temperature at 5 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Up to July 1 there was no drop in my Valencia orchard and the setting of young fruit was estimated to be above 100 per cent. The crop of old fruit was all picked early in June in order to relieve the trees of the burden of caring for the matured fruit. From June 30 to July 8 there was a marked difference in temperature between 5 a.m. and 2 p.m. During the heated part of the day the trees worked overtime to supply the moisture which was lost by evaporation through the leaves and young fruit. Upon close examination, I found the young fruit to be slightly wilted at 2 p.m. and at 5 a.m. the next morning they were full of moisture and very firm. For that reason I concluded it was contraction and expansion caused by the two great extremes in so short a time that causes the drop and am firm in my belief that a total remedy for it is beyond man. Notwithstanding nearly all of my trees were in a strong healthy, growing condition, the drop from June 30 to July 8 was fully 50 per cent. of the setting prior to July 1. To show the absolute necessity of deep irrigation and proper fertilization so that the trees may enter the critical period in a strong, healthy growing condition, I wish to state that the very few trees in my orchard that could not be given the proper food and water dropped almost the entire crop.

AS TO COVER CROPS.

I have experimented with cover crops of burr clover, grain, etc., but have laid them all on the shelf. My conclusions are, after some years of personal work with deciduous and citrus fruit trees, that tree life is somewhat like human life, quite selfish, and the trees behave much better when they have all the soil to themselves. The method which has given me the best results and the most profit in my deciduous and citrus orchards is plowing and cultivations during the winter, when the soil is in proper condition, after each rain, to retain moisture and properly aerate the soil. Deep cultivations are given the orchard both ways after each irrigation in spring and summer to maintain a deep mulch of fine, dusty soil, thus conserving soil moisture. Cover crops prevent the proper aerating of the soil during the cold months in winter. A few hours' bright sunshine, after a cold, frosty night, upon an orchard that is deeply mulched will store heat that will greatly assist in lessening the danger of frost for the following night; while with a heavy cover crop, the action of the sun upon the soil is stayed. I prefer to purchase the plant food which is stored in the soil by cover crops and, instead, allow the soil to come in contact with nature's elements, at the same time allowing the trees to occupy all the soil to themselves.

There must be ample moisture deep in the soil to carry the trees through the dropping period, as it is dangerous to apply water just before this period sets in. In one of my experiments with a heavy cover crop, the rains shut off early in the season and the cover crop drew so heavily from the lower levels of the soil moisture that it was impossible to get the ground in condition to deep wet it the latter part of May. I was forced to irrigate the trees in early June, as the soil was completely dried out. The result was that I lost the entire crop.

In conclusion, I wish to say again that this article is based only on my years of experience with the kind of soil which my trees occupy. In order that the grower may be successful, he must study the conditions in his own immediate locality, as the soil in Southern California varies much in depth and quality. As has been said before, the one important thing is to keep the trees in a dark green, healthy growing condition prior to June 1, with plenty of moisture deep in the soil.

MAKE PAPER FROM HULLS.

Another use for cottol hulls has been found by the Federal Department of Agriculture in laboratory experiments. A good grade of paper has been made from cotton hulls. Pulp made from second cut cotton linters and hull fiber is said to be well suited to the manufacture of writing paper.

Prof. A. H. Hoffman, who comes from the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mining, has been appointed assistant professor of engineering at the California College of Agriculture. He will specialize in farm machinery.

C. A. Reed, Federal almond specialist, is advising with California growers on the determination of the best varieties for this State.

OCTOBER IDEAL FOR SEEDING OF ALFALFA.

The misconception is wide that none but thoroughly rotted and weed-free stable manure should be applied to the field which is to be broken and seeded to alfalfa. The fertilizing value of barnyard manure is so great and its liberal application is so beneficial to the alfalfa crop that specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture advise farmers to use all the manure they have available. The plant food realized from the fertilizer will tone up the soil and nourish the young seedlings so that they will get the jump on the weed crop, and once given this advantage, the alfalfa plants will smother out the majority of the enemies which may develop. Save all the manure to which you have access and distribute it in liberal quantities over the field to be plowed for alfalfa, preferably before the breaking is attempted.

It is largely a matter of individual preference how many times the field is harrowed, dragged and rolled before being seeded. It is essential that the subsurface of the soil be compact, and then be thoroughly fined before seeding. The seed should be sown preferably in a special alfalfa drill as it is necessary not to bury the seed too deep, a mispractice which often results where an ordinary grain drill with a grass seeding attachment is used. Where the alfalfa seeder is not available, a wheelbarrow or hand seeder may be utilized. The rate of seeding will vary in different localities. As a rule, from fifteen to twenty pounds of good quality seed to the acre are deemed sufficient, although in some localities as high as twenty-five pounds of seed are sown. A weeder is an excellent implement for covering the seed after broadcasting, but if it is not available a spiked-tooth harrow may be used.

All soils designed for alfalfa culture must, of necessity, be free from surplus soil moisture, that is to say, well drained, while they also must be slightly alkaline.

Inoculation of alfalfa fields is essential. The best and most simple system is to transfer some inoculated soil from an old alfalfa field to the new stand. This is best done in the afternoon of a cloudy day, the soil being distributed by shovel in the amount of about 300 to 400 pounds to the acre. This work should be done in the absence of sunlight, as the sun destroys the bacteria which induce inoculation.

Before buying alfalfa seed the purchaser should inform himself fully regarding the variety best suited for his section and the quality of the seed with regard to both germination and purity. In choosing a variety or strain it is well to bear in mind that the quick-growing alfalfas, such as the Peruvian, because of their tendency to produce heavier yields, should be used.

COLDS IN THE HEAD.

If any birds in the flock develop colds, put as much potassium permanganate as will remain on the surface of a dime into a gallon of water and keep this mixture in their drinking water for several days, or until the symptoms of the colds have disappeared. Remove any sick birds from the flock as soon as they are noted and treat them in coops by themselves, or kill and bury them if they are not worth treating.

FARM LISTING SHEEP.

High class breeding sheep for sale are being listed by the Animal Husbandry Division of the University of California Farm, it was recently announced by the college of agriculture. Owners of surplus breeding stock for sale may write to J. F. Wilson of the animal husbandry division stating the number of head, age, and breed. Requests for such stock have been recently received at the University Farm.

There are many advantages to be gained when the stock raisers of one community raise the same breed. Better prices may be secured from the sale of a uniform product and suitable breeding stock can be secured near home.

The dairy farmer not only studies how to feed his cow, but how to feed his land. He is not a soil robber, as he realizes that the farmer who reduces the fertility of his land robs without reason, since he steals from himself.

The total area planted to field crops in California this year was 5,575,000 acres. In 1918 the acreage was 5,250,000.

CARE NEEDED BY IMMUNIZED HOGS.

Improper care of hogs following their immunization against hog cholera, administered in public stockyards and after arrival at their destination, has resulted in losses which may be materially decreased.

Shipments should be made promptly after immunization, or should be delayed for not less than ten days. Truck hauls and shipments not exceeding thirty-six hours in length can be made promptly to advantage.

Avoid crowding; allow stocker hogs relatively more floor space than fat hogs.

It is important that drinking water be constantly accessible to the hogs. If the car does not contain special water devices, a water trough, protected by slats over its top, should be securely fastened to the floor.

Little or no feed is necessary during the twenty-four hours following inoculation, but clean water should be accessible. Short-haul shipments need not be fed in transit.

When hogs arrive at their destination they should not be driven over the roads, but hauled from the car to the farm in wagons or trucks. Load and unload gently. Avoid chasing and unnecessary excitement in handling.

Protection against rain should be provided

Do not permit wallows in pasture or lot. The use of wallows by recently inoculated hogs may produce pneumonia.

For the first two weeks, if it is in season, allow shipped hogs limited fresh pasturage. If alfalfa or other leguminous pasture is not available, a supplemental protein concentrate should be supplied. If no pasture, use self-feeders for grain and separate ones for tankage or other protein concentrate. At the end of two weeks begin gradually to change to the permanent ration. Keep fresh, clean water always available.

Watch your hogs carefully each day for failure to feed or other signs of disease or sickness. Have a quarantine pen and place sick hogs in it promptly.

Short rations and a laxative may be used for slightly sick hogs.

The appearance of any disease in which a number of hogs are similarly affected requires immediate expert advice and treatment. Consult your veterinarian.

Some Common Fallacies.

the conditions are seen to be abnormal. The milk flow dropped so low that but 40 cubic centimeters (approximately two tablespoonfuls) were taken at this particular milking. Other samples ran 17.0, 11.8, 10.8, 11.0 10.5, 9.9, 9.0, etc., but when the doe recovered her milk averaged around 5 per cent. in fat, with one sample testing as low as 4.3 per cent.

It may be objected that not all high-testers are animals just fresh or ill. This is true, and another example from the writer's own experience will illustrate the fact. A goat, "Ruby" we called her, kidded in October, 1907; Ruby was a large black goat with white points; she evidently carried Angora blood, as she had long, curly hair. Her yield was uniformly low, due undoubtedly in part to her blood and in part to the season at which she freshened.

Ruby was milked and the yield recorded for each milking; for three months each milking was sampled and tested, a total of 185 samples being taken in all. The lowest test was 6.2 per cent., the highest 11.4 per cent., the average being 8.47 per cent. For entire ten-day periods her milk would average over 9 per cent.

THE "GOAT HOLSTEINS."

At the other extreme may be mentioned tests made of Swiss goats, Toggenburgs, Saanens and cross-bred Swiss. The samples were taken from representative herds around Los Angeles and elsewhere in Southern California; they were verified by results secured by Prof. Jaffa, our California food expert of international note, by records which I recently looked over at the University Farm at Davis, Cal., by published matter from the Geneva, N. Y., experiment station. These all place the Swiss breeds in the Holstein class, the milk testing around 3 per cent. in fat, with other solids in proportion. Few samples taken under normal conditions run over 4 per cent., and many have been found testing as low as 2 per cent., or even less.

Probably the lowest testing sample of which I have yet learned was that of an Anglo-Nubian whose milk, according to Dr. Jaffa's analysis, contained 1.2 per cent. of milk fat and 8 per cent. total solids. The latter is just half the quantity observed in another sample of milk-tester by another chemist; the milk was from a native, if my recollection serves.

On the whole, it appears that the large milkers, such as the Swiss, produce relatively "lean" milk; that is, milk with an average, or even a low, fat content; small milkers tend to produce rich milk, while average milkers yield average milk.

This may be illustrated by a comparison made some five years ago on the basis of unpublished data then available; the intervening years have simply confirmed the observations.

All the samples of milk from Swiss goats (Toggenburgs, Saanens and cross-breds) averaged almost exactly 3 per cent. in fat; all natives, which included everything having no Swiss blood (no milk from Anglo-Nubians was then available to the writer) averaged 5½ per cent. in fat; the fat content of all the Swiss grades averaged 4 4-10 per cent.

AVERAGE TEST MILK BEST.

Since the time that most of the analyses or other tests were made the number of Swiss grades to be found in California has increased amazingly and a large part of the milk available will be found to range from 3 to 4 per cent. in fat. This, in the opinion of the writer, supported by those of certain physicians and others, is a decided advantage. It is certain that milk of a high fat content is with difficulty digested by infants or by others with weak stomachs. A half-cupful of "Ruby's milk taken by my own children brought on bilious attacks and a skin rash, so that we were compelled to use it exclusively for butter-making and in cooking. As a rule, our children throve best on milk testing from under 3 per cent. to 3½ per cent. in fat. One six-months baby took without dilution milk running slightly under 3 per cent.

It is an interesting fact that not long since a child who had been taking goats' milk testing in this neighborhood and who had thriven on it, was given milk from a herd containing a number of grade Anglo-Nubians whose milk tested considerably higher in fat, so that the herd milk ranged at least several per cent. above that upon which the child throve. The result was immediate; the child could not digest the rich milk and it was necessary to put him upon prepared foods, a distinct loss to the child.

It being the fact that great variations are found in the fat content of goats' milk, probably much greater than those observed in cows' milk, under similar conditions, no generalization can be made as to the richness of the milk. We can only say that in general the high-milking breeds produce milk of relatively low fat content, that the low-milking breeds supply milk of relatively high fat percentage.

It seems wise also to warn prospective users of goats' milk that if rich it should not be fed infants or persons with delicate stomachs. Even dilution of such milk will not correct the difficulty fully, for it also changes the percentage of other solids, and the latter may be present in the correct proportions. As one prominent physician familiar with the situation says, it is the fat which usually causes the difficulty, it being recognized of late years that this component causes constipation when present in excess.

INTERESTING DATA ON LEMONS BROUGHT FORTH AT FIELD DAY.

SANTA BARBARA.—The annual field day exercises of the Lemon Men's Club held here Saturday, September 6, proved a big attraction, some 250 persons partaking of the barbecue prepared in their honor under the spreading oaks of the famous old S. P. Stow ranch at La Patera. Along about 10 a.m. lemon growers from all parts of Southern California, from San Diego north, began to assemble at the Hubbard Packing House in Carpinteria in readiness for the field day exercises, which were preceded by an automobile tour through the beautiful Carpinteria, Montecito and Goleta valleys. After a repast served in true barbecue style by charming Spanish senoritas, J. R. Fithian, chairman of the occasion, called the meeting to order.

Frank A. Harwood, banker and lemon grower of San Dimas, was the first speaker, his topic being "The Outlook for the Lemon Industry." Mr. Harwood prefaced his remarks with the assertion that there always have been and probably always will be ups and downs in the lemon industry, good years and lean years and on the average just as many good years as poor years. He prophesied a 20,000-car lemon crop within but a few years when the present non-bearing acreage, which is reported as 75 per cent. of the bearing acreage, comes into bearing. With the exchange campaign on lemon advertising now under way, Mr. Harwood was quite optimistic regarding the outlook for sales of the crop. The old cry of overproduction, he stated, has been with us from the beginning but so far advertising has created consumer demand sufficient to keep ahead of production. He reported that production costs on the Italian lemon, the only competitor of the California product in the East, have increased to a greater extent during the war period than production costs in this State. It now costs the Italian grower practically $4.50 per box to lay lemons down in New York, he declared, which makes the shipping in of the Italian product a more or less hazardous undertaking.

He prophesied a big influence on lemon consumption occasioned by prohibition. A great increase in the use of soft drinks and beverages is to be expected, he declared, and the lemon is bound to be included in this increased demand. On the whole his remarks were very optimistic for the future of the industry, although he sounded a caution regarding the necessity of good quality in order to insure profitable sales.

THE BOX QUESTION.

F. H. Hutchens, manager of the Fruit Growers' Supply Company, being unable to be present, was represented by A. E. Barnes, assistant manager, in an able address on "The Relation Between the Timber Situation and the Citrus Industry." He stated that at the present time the citrus industry is using 180,000,000 feet of soft lumber for the manufacture of box shook. He traced the history of the increase in price of box shook from the 12 and 13-cent price of a few years ago to the present 18 to 20-cent price, and declared that it represents a profound change which has occurred in the lumber industry of the United States during the past ten or fifteen years. During that time lumbermen in general have come to the realization that the great forests of this country are almost exhausted. A recent survey of the southern pine made by the War Industries Board has indicated that within five years 50 per cent. of this timber in the great forests of the South will be gone, within ten years, 75 per cent., and within fifteen years, 90 per cent. The southern pine has in the past constituted the one great source of cheap lumber for the manufacturers of the East. Realizing that the end of the supply is now in sight, these people have turned to the great Northwest with the result that lumber prices are on the increase. The Great Lakes States, which in the past have been noted as lumber-producing States, have this last year paid a freight bill of $6,000,000 on soft lumber from the Pacific Northwest, declared Mr. Barnes, citing this instance as an indication of the great change in the movement of lumber in this country.

"The price of box shook in California is bound to remain high and will probably go even higher, until the great forests of the South and East are rehabilitated," Mr. Barnes declared. Every effort should be made by citrus growers, he said, to support the government policy of reforestation. The unfortunate thing, he declared, is that the forestry service controls but a small fraction of the timber supply of the country, fully four-fifths of the lumber at the present time coming from privately owned forests. He urged a standing committee of the club to aid in the work of reforestation in every way possible. Mr. Barnes's presentation of the lumber situation gives an illuminating background to the recent action of the Fruit Growers' Supply Company in purchasing 40,000 acres of timber land in Lassen county, carrying enough timber to supply all the shook necessary for exchange members for the next fifty years. Other relations between the lumber industry and citrus raising brought out by Mr. Barnes are the necessity of a supply of soft timber for the manufacture of the tissue wraps used in wrapping the fruits and the conservation of valuable irrigation water and control of floods to be brought about by proper reforestation of our Southern California mountains.

URGES CAREFUL HANDLING.

A. D. Shamel of Riverside was unable to be present and was substituted for by H. J. Ramsey of the field department of the exchange in a very able address on "The Proper Handling of Lemons." Mr. Ramsey emphasized the absolute necessity of careful handling in building up consumer demand for the California product and condemned the shipping of fruit in any way questionable as to quality, ability to stand up in storage, or weak in any way. Only by the utmost care in every operation from picking to loading in the car can a satisfactory merchandizable product be laid down in the East in such a condition as to attract and hold the trade. All fruit of a questionable nature should be sent to the by-products factory, he declared. Mr. Ramsey brought out the urgent necessity of these measures in connection with the rapidly increasing output of lemons, an output already practically equal to the consumption and still on the increase.

E. W. Stow, of the Stow ranch, then gave a few minutes to the history of the old orchards alongside of which the listeners were seated. The oldest trees in the orchard, and immense trees they are, were declared to have come from Australia in 1872 and to have been planted at La Patera in 1873, making them forty-six years old. There are about 1800 trees in the old orchard many being resets and the like, but the highest yield during the life of the orchard occurred in 1913 when some 13,000 packed boxes were taken from these trees. Since the time of planting the trees have never been known to have been injured by frost and during that time have been fumigated but once, scale being effectively controlled by natural agencies. In 1908 the trees were pruned back severely and treated for gummosis, which was rather prevalent. The yield dropped down considerably following the pruning, but the year after climbed higher than ever and since that time has averaged more than 10,000 packed boxes, while before the pruning it averaged closer to 7000 boxes.

The programme was completed by a field demonstration of lemon pruning by W. F. Fleet, manager of the Rancho Sespe properties, who showed his well-known system of lemon pruning. This system may be stated to be a combination of the use of strong growing sucker wood for framework formation, followed by selection to the best fruiting shoots produced on such limbs. By severe annual heading back, Mr. Fleet encourages the growth of a new "deck" of bearing wood each year. While many growers do not agree with Mr. Fleet on his system of lemon pruning, it must be confessed that under the climatic conditions obtaining on the Rancho Sespe, it apparently gives good results.—[H. R. W

PIG HAS HARD TIME.

One of the humorous situations which resulted from the railroad tie-up occurred at Hanford. The Poland China breeders of Kings county wanted to be represented in the permanent Kings county booth at the State Fair. Accordingly they had a large papier mache pig constructed in Los Angeles. As no trains were running out of Los Angeles, the manufacturer hired a boy with a small truck to take the "animal" to Hanford. The roads were rough, with the result that the crate in which the creation was confined was broken. The pig was taken out of the crate and laid on its side in the back of the truck and a young lady companion who was accompanying the driver had to sit in the rear of the truck and hold the pig down. Passing automobile parties would back up and ask if the pig had died, if it was a blind pig and the like. By the time they reached Hanford, it is reported, the young lady was almost in hysterics. Although the pig had received slight injuries, he was repaired in Hanford and was convalescing nicely in the Kings county booth, according to the last bulletin received.

Cotton averaged in price throughout the producing States in August 32.5 cents per pound. California cotton averaged 36.7 cents per pound, owing to its long staple, and cleanliness.

Side-light on West Virginia farm labor situation: blackberries selling for $2 per gallon because pickers refuse to pick and sell at a less price. Crop tremendous.

APIARISTS ASSEMBLE TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS.

Optimism for the future of the California honey producing industry was reflected in the talks and papers given and read at the annual assembly of the Southern California Bee Keepers' Association, held at Hollywood September 19 and 20.

Among the speakers at the meeting, which was attended by over 300 persons interested in the honey bee and its work, were A. E. Whiteside, head of the State beekeepers' association; Prof. Willis Lynch of the Honey Producers' Exchange; Hon. S. S. Knabenshue, former United States Consul General to China; George B. de Sellam, E. P. Terry of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles schools; Theodore Payne, C. A. Schirm, George L. Emerson, T. O. Andrews of the Consolidated Honey Producers' Association of California, and J. Edgar Ross of Imperial Valley.

SHOW PLANS SHAPING.

Entries are beginning to arrive at the headquarters of the California International Livestock Show for the exposition of pure-bred livestock to be held in the California building at the Panama-Pacific grounds, San Francisco, November 1 to 8. Manager Gordon H. True says that strong competition will be the rule in every class. Work has been started on the arena built inside of the California building in which will be held a nightly horse show and the livestock parades. Four inches of tan bark on a layer of clay will furnish the foundation for the ring.

The Falfadale Ranch at Perris has received two valuable additions to its Duroc herd. B. H. Wilkinson, manager of the herd, has just returned from the Middle West, where he bought the boar Great Orion Sensation Junior, a son of the great boar Great Orion Sensation. Mr. Wilkinson feels that in this boar he has a great show ring prospect. He also purchased at a long price a gilt sired by Great Orion Sensation.

Keep a kit of tools, a forge and an anvil on the farm for repair of machines and implements.

LIVE-STOCK BULLETIN.

BY H. S. HOARD.

One of the many features at the Riverside fair which will be of interest to livestock men will be a public sale of high class dairy cattle. The sale will give the ranchers of Southern California an opportunity to purchase high-class registered Holstein and Guernsey cows, heifers and bulls at public sale prices.

The offering will be one of high individual merit, both in conformation, and in blood lines. The Holsteins come from the herd of George A. Smith, Corcoran, and the Guernseys from the Palo Alto Stock Farm at Palo Alto. It has been my good fortune to visit both of these herds within the yast month, and I was impressed with the good type and the well developed milk producing organs of the individuals in these herds. Both the Holsteins and Guernseys offered for sale will be young animals, under four years of age. They are right in their prime for economical production with a whole lifetime before them. Many of the Guernseys are imported animals or out of imported cows, and are just fresh, or due to freshen soon. The Holstein offering will all be young heifers and cows with good A.R.O. backing, and on yearly test themselves. They are bred to two of the best bulls on the Pacific Coast, and many of them are due to freshen within the next few weeks.

A public sale of two score of bred Berkshire sows and gilts will be held at the Los Angeles Live Stock Show on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 22, according to the announcement of Frank B. Anderson, Secretary of the Western Berkshire Congress. "Southern breeders are anxious to have a sale of this kind held in Los Angeles," said Anderson, "and we are going to try and give them one of the highest class sales ever held in the West. There are a lot of good Berkshire hogs in the South, and this sale will give the breeders a chance to bring some of them out into the public ring, putting them up for the farmers and breeders to take home at their own prices." A strong showing of Berkshires will be made at the Los Angeles show, and some of the show animals from the North will be sent through the sale ring. Catalogues will be out in advance of the sale and a copy may be had by writing Frank B. Anderson ,Box 724, Sacramento, Cal. Ord L. Leachman of Sacramento will officiate as auctioneer.

Another addition to the swine show herds of Southern California was made during the past two weeks in the purchase of the Duroc-Jersey show animals of Waltemeyer Brothers of Melbourne, Iowa, by the owners of Conejo Ranch. The purchase price is stated to have been $16,800. These animals arrived in the midst of the railroad tie-up and were transported by trucks from San Bernardino by H. H. Braly and Harold Janss, officials of the Ranch, to the Conejo Ranch, forty miles northwest of Los Angeles. The announcement is also made of the engagement of George F. Waltemeyer, formerly of the firm of Weltemeyer Brothers, as manager of the swine department of the Conejo Ranch. Mr. Waltemeyer will have charge of the show herds of Duroc-Jersey and Hampshire swine from the Conejo Ranch at the various stock fairs, including Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland. At the head of the Duroc division of the Conejo Ranch show herd are the following boars: "Pathfinders' Pride," "Giant Wonder," one of the new boars, and "Real Sensation," while in the Hampshire division the following boars head the herd, "Duke Allen," "Challenger," "Liberty" and "Conejo Prince."

One of the sensations of the California State Fair was the selling of the grand champion boar Natomas Boran Duke by W. F. Sandercock of San Francisco to the Anchorage Farm at Orland. Mrs. E. A. Hardy, manager of the Anchorage Farm, was the successful bidder. She has been after this boar for a long time, but Mr. Sandercock refused to sell him until after he had been judged at the State Fair. He is a son of Sandercock's great boar Baron Duke XXI, who was grand champion at the National Swine Show, and was out of the sow Natomas Rookwood, whose dam was third at the National Swine Show.

The Elliott-Brant ranch at Owensmouth won not only both grand championship and most of the firsts in the Guernsey section at the State fair, but also had the most attractive exhibit in the stock show. The stalls in which the cattle were displayed were decorated in a manner fully commensurate with their worth. The plain sheds, which are furnished for the cattle were completely covered with white lattice work in which green boughs and roses were arranged so that each animal was more or less set apart from the rest and thus could be admired as an individual. A card over each gave a full description of the animal so that it was not necessary to refer to a catalogue. Richly colored felt blankets of royal blue, bound with white, with the name of the rancho in orange-colored letters protected their shiny coats, while a deep bed of well kept straw was beneath them. So impressive was the entire exhibit that the directors of the fair awarded it a special prize and a silver cup has been ordered. The attendants in charge of the exhibit were also awarded the highly contested Grooms Prize for the neatness with which their exhibit was kept through the week. The railway tie up prevented some of the Guernsey exhibitors from reaching the fair, however, there were five exhibitors present with over one hundred head. The winnings of the Owensmouth cattle are quite remarkable. Both first and second was won in every class for females except the baby calf class. Junior, Senior and Grand Championships were awarded to cows in this herd. Princess of Meadowbrook, the Grand Champion cow, also won the award for the best Advanced Register cow, which means that she was the best cow with a record for production for the period of a year. Her record, when made, was the largest in the West for the breed. With her sister, she won first prize for produce of cow, both being by the same mother. She was also a member of the first prize Aged Herd and the first prize Dairy Herd. The younger members of the herd held up their end of it by winning first prize as Breeders Young Herd. The Aged

DUROC BREEDERS FORM ASSOCIATION.

The breeders of Duroc swine living in the San Fernando Valley have formed a community breeders' association.

During the past year there has been a great increase in swine breeding in this fertile valley, and a majority of the new men going into the business have selected the Duroc breed. The aim of the new organization is to promote the breeding of high-class Durocs and to discourage the registering or selling of animals for breeding purposes that are not of high class.

It is the belief of those back of this organization, that by co-operative effort, the San Fernando Valley can be made the Duroc breeding center of the Pacific Coast. There are now about twenty-five breeders of Durocs in the valley and several other ranchers are contemplating starting herds.

At a meeting held Wednesday evening, September 17 at the Van Nuys High School the organization was perfected. J. C. Craig of Van Nuys had drawn up a tentative constitution and by-laws which, with a few minor changes, were adopted. Mr. Craig was elected president, L. R. Hitchcock of Van Nuys, vice-president, and Dr. M. Creamer of Los Angeles, owner of the Ireland Ranch at Owensmouth, was chosen as secretary and treasurer.

The breeders who were present and who signed the constitution and by-laws were J. C. Craig, Van Nuys; L. R. Hitchcock, Van Nuys; G. W. Nance, Van Nuys; Dr. M. Creamer, Los Angeles; L. W. Serrell, Van Nuys; N. W. Grahn, Owensmouth; C. F. Seccombe, Van Nuys; Dect & Mourner, Van Nuys; Hewitt Bros., Van Nuys; E. F. Meyers, Lankershim; J. L. Stevenson, Van Nuys; Mrs. Ross Whitley, Van Nuys; A. V. Austin, Van Nuys; T. T. Middleton, Lankershim.

The two organizers of boys' pig clubs for the valley were present, and asked that the breeders consider the matter of selling weanling pigs to the boys.

MANY NEW TYPES OF FARM TOOLS SHOWN UNDER CANVAS AND AFIELD.

SIX great tents, regular "big tops" of the kind used by circuses, housed the main farm implement display of the Fourth annual Tractor Demonstration. Under these huge canvas roofs was assembled one of the most complete exhibits of agricultural machinery yet shown on the Pacific Coast. In addition to the exhibits of farm tools actually under cover, there was a collection of implements on the ground outside each tent, consisting of the overflow from the inside, together with machines too large to show to advantage under canvas. There were also several exhibits of individual machines set in the open along the main street of the show grounds.

The implement exhibits were notable for the number of new types and models of tools displayed. The improvement in the implements designed for use in power farming is keeping pace with the advance made by the manufacturers of the tractors themselves and the past year has been fruitful of new and improved devices for taking the drudgery out of agriculture and accomplishing big results on an economical and efficient basis. Every exhibitor at this year's tractor show had new tools and attachments on display and working with tractors in the demonstration field.

That the "still" show features of the 1919 demonstration were appreciated by the visitors was evidenced by the number of persons always to be found in and around the tractor and tractor attachment exhibits in the implement tents. Not all of the implement houses that exhibited at the show handle tractors, but those without tractor lines of their own had borrowed machines of various types for the occasion and made a feature of complete tractor and tractor tool outfits hitched up as for use in field or farm yard.

In addition to these strictly "still" exhibits, each tent had its quota of machines in motion, feed cutters, silo fillers, threshers, balers, sprayers and irrigation outfits, mostly operated by tractor belt power. The "still" show idea was also exemplified in the many machines and implements cut away to show the working parts and methods of operation.

The close co-operation of the tractor exhibitors and the farm tool dealers in displaying and demonstrating the agricultural machinery on exhibit was for the farmer visitors one of the most helpful features of the show. Under the plan of the combination field and "still" show followed this year, the visitor to an implement tent had only to ask to see a certain tool in use in field work to have his wish gratified.

TRACTORS IN BELT WORK.

The E. P. Bosbyshell Company listed among its exhibits the products of a score of implement manufacturing concerns, its great tent being filled from center to circumference. Six of the Heider tractors handled by this firm were in belt action in and just outside the big top, two more being kept in the company's field plot for special demonstrations. One of the field machines was the new model Heider to which the plows are directly attached, a machine that attracted much attention. The machines at the tent operated a Howell grain roller mill, a Wilson-Wetterhold alfalfa grinder grinding alfalfa, bean straw and milo maize in the head, a Sandwich hay press, an Eagle self-feed corn sheller, an Eagle feed cutter and an Eagle combined feed cutter and silo filler, respectively.

One of the implements the Bosbyshell Company was called upon a number of times to demonstrate in the field was the Brenneis levelless tractor disc harrow. The set of gangs of this tool are operated by the pull of the tractor, the operator not leaving his seat to change the pitch of the gangs. The firm showed the Rock Island line, including tractor plows, tractor disc harrows, general line plows, disc cultivators, spike-toothed harrows, corn and cotton planters and manure spreaders. A full line of Ohio Cultivator Company products was also shown, including a new pivot axle low wheel cultivator. The Hilo orchard disc cultivator, with extension heads, was shown. Other implements on display included the Peoria grain drills, combined fertilizer and grain drill and fertilizer drills; Knapp disc plows designed for orchard work; Bain wagons, Havana farm trucks, Old Hickory wagons, Clark cutaway disc harrows for tractor and horses, Thompson root cutters, Brenneis chisel cultivators, Hesse trailers, Avery plows, disc and moldboard; Aspinwall potato planters and diggers.

GREAT PLOW EXHIBIT.

The B. Hayman Company tent was in charge of W. K. Hayman and was stocked full of implements built to make farming easier and more profitable. The great feature of the exhibit was the display of products of the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, and B. M. Davis, Pacific Coast manager for this big concern, was on hand to assist Mr. Hayman in making the Oliver representation a complete success. Of Oliver plows there was no end, and Oliver tools of all kinds were grouped in great collections. The plows ranged in size from a twenty-four-inch super-tool manufactured by the Oliver Company for uprooting vineyards in Southern France down to eight-inch models. Over seventy moldboard horse plows were

The New 16-Valve

Twin City Tractor

Pays Big Dividends

For the first time in the history of the tractor industry, the 4-cylinder, 16-valve engine (valve-in-head type) is now applied to a tractor. THE TWIN CITY 12-20 with its 16-valve motor actually develops 25% more than its rated horse power.

This new 12-20 is a light-weight tractor that will out-pull, out-last and out-dividend other tractors of equal rating.

Not built down to a price, but built up to a fixed ideal—to do the work assigned to it better than it has ever been done before.

The highest grade tractor will unfailingly prove the least expensive and pay the biggest dividends.

SOME COMMON FALLACIES AND A FEW FACTS ABOUT GOAT'S MILK.

BY S. H. BOWMAN.

THERE are two widespread fallacies regarding goats' milk which should be as carefully corrected as they have been industrially disseminated by friends of this most valuable animal. The first of these is the popular notion that the milk is very rich. We often hear it stated that goats' milk is twice as rich as cows' milk; sometimes the statement is made that it is "half cream," and the false notion is expressed in various other ways.

Saanen and Toggenburg kids.

The other equally-erroneous belief is that the milk is valuable in proportion to its richness, that is, to its fat content.

Few if any of the speakers or writers who spread these misconceptions do so with intent to deceive. Most of them have accepted them on faith, relying upon the statements of others, or upon analyses which are far from typical; such analyses have been published and accepted as representing fairly the milk as commonly met with.

As a matter of fact, before we can discuss the actual fat content of the milk we must get in mind some general considerations, most of which, if not all, apply to all lactating animals. We must be prepared for considerable variation in the composition of the milk due to a multiplicity of causes, some of which we understand, while others are so far beyond our ken.

We shall expect to find animals of different breeds varying; among cows we expect the Jerseys and Guernseys to supply relatively rich milk. We know that individuals of the same herd, perhaps as closely related as daughter and dam, or full sisters, will furnish milk differing in fat content, as well as in the proportion of other solids. We are perhaps familiar with the fact that the same animal varies during the course of the lactation period and that on the same day samples of an entire milking will vary from a fraction of 1 per cent. to 1 per cent. or even more in butter fat. And, lastly, we know that a marked variation is found in the composition of milk taken at the beginning of the milking—the so-called fore milk—as compared with that taken at the end—the "strippings."

CONDITIONS AFFECTING FAT.

We have most of us ceased to believe it possible to permanently change the fat content by feeding; that is, we do not try to "feed fat into the milk." It is the fact, however, that certain conditions of which we have knowledge do affect the fat content. For example, conditions tending to reduce the flow usually increase the fat percentage; the absolute quantity of fat will at the same time be reduced. Fever, so S. M. Babcock of Wisconsin University (of "Babcock test" fame) once wrote me, will often double the percentage of fat in an affected cow.

A fright, as by a strange or a savage dog, will markedly influence the composition of the milk. So will the presence of strangers. A change of feeding methods may temporarily reduce the milk flow and increase the per cent. of fat; if the flow is permanently lowered the fat content may be correspondingly increased; or, if it be permanently increased, the fat content will almst certainly be permanently lowered in percentage, although it may be absolutely increased in total quantity.

As was remarked above, we cannot assign adequate causes for all the changes we observe, and similar causes will sometimes seem to produce opposite effects. Let us frankly set this down to our ignorance and attempt to get a better grasp of the underlying causes at work.

If the facts referred to are kept in mind we shall be in a position to interpret the apparently contradictory evidence in regard to goats' milk as compared with cows' milk as to composition.

ABNORMAL TESTS.

It is the fact that samples of milk of the former have been enormously rich in fat. One sample which I recall testing showed 13 per cent. in fat; it was the first sample taken, immediately after a kidding; a few of those following, taken in succession, were: 8.5, 7.0, 7.7, 6.8, 7.1, 6.7, 5.4, 7.0, 6.0, 5.6, 6.2, 5.7, 4.6, 5.3, 4.9, 4.1, 3.0, 3.2, 3.4. The last three samples represent the normal test of the goat in question, a high-milking half-Saanen; the earlier tests were non-representative of this goat.

Another sample, from a doe which miscarried some time before the date of kidding, was so high in fat that a cream-testing bottle was required for a test; the sample ran 18 per cent. in fat. But again tractor was seen in regular farm operations, and one All-Work turned in a perfect circle for hours without an operator.

Fourth Annual Demonstration.

AVERY DEMONSTRATION.

The Avery display and plot were in a rather out-of-the-way corner of the field, but W. W. Rainey, Southern California distributor, and his aides demonstrated this machine to many visitors. In the big Avery tent were seen the 14-28 size running a feed grinder, and the 12-25 running a silage cutter. Just outside the 8-16, with a hay mower attached, drew crowds, while the big 40-80 and the 25-50 plowed, cultivated and performed other farm stunts.

SMALL, BUT POWERFUL.

Last year the smallest tractor on the demonstration was the Beeman tractor. But this year the Motors Equipment and Tractors Company, Los Angeles, exhibited a still smaller machine, the Merry Garden, one-horse tractor. This little machine pulls Planet, Jr., and other garden tools. It will do the work of one horse. The Beeman tractor, a more pretentious and more powerful machine, pulls its own special plowing, cultivating and seeding tools. It is a real "walking" tractor; that is, this tractor is operated by one man walking behind it. The Beeman turned over the sod to a depth of five inches and prepared seed beds.

"TRACKPULL" KEPT BUSY.

The Bean Spray Pump Company handled the Bean track-pull tractor in demonstration in a way that showed its mobility and adaptability to both field and orchard work. In the Bean tent was set up a working model of the tractor, and a corps of salesmen were on hand to explain the merits of the machine. Out in the field a couple of Beans worked in plowing and cultivating. Ralph Spaulding, Los Angeles distributor for the Bean, did not wait for an invitation to show its tractor in field work, but had one going most of the time of the demonstration.

TRACK-LAYER ATTRACTS.

Many were attracted to the work in the field of the Best track-layer. The seventy-five horse power machine pulled a twelve-disc plow outfit, a larger subsoiler, ten fourteen-inch plows and other sets of tools at various times. The forty-five horse power size of this tractor was also shown in plowing and other work.

THE MIGHTY CATERPILLAR.

The Holt Caterpillar was as usual, a center of interest. No tractor show would be complete without the great machine that furnished the inspiration for the battle "tanks" of the world war. Towering above other tractors, the Holt was here and there and everywhere. It was engaged in making roads in the demonstration field the first day or so and in levelling them off and making other improvements the following days. Pulling huge subsoilers, disc and moldboard plows and land levellers, the Holt was always in evidence. Three sizes of caterpillars, the big seventy-five, the forty-five and the twenty-five horse power machines were shown in almost every kind of farm work.

CLETRAC IN "ORCHARD." ....

Smith Brothers, distributors of the Cletrac tank type tractor, placed every facility at the disposal of visitors to learn about the work of this machine. Not only was the Cletrac shown in ordinary field work, but a series of stakes were set up twenty feet apart to represent trees, and the Cletrac cultivated the ground about these. A number of Cletracs were used by farm machine and implement exhibitors in various parts of the grounds as a source of belt and drawbar power. In the big Smith Brothers' tent a number of striking exhibits were set up. Two stalls were built. In one was a horse; in the other a Cletrac. The horse was laways munching hay or grain. A placard called attention to the fact that the tractor was not "eating" while idle. The Cletrac pulled three twelve-inch plows much of the time.

THE WALKING TRACTOR.

Ruddle & Menillo, Los Angeles, again staged a good demonstration of the Fageol "walking" tractor, so-called because of its long lugs, undaunted by any soil conditions. The Fageol "walked" right along with two fourteen-inch plows or three twelve-inch plows. Hitched to a three-plow McKay disc plow, it threw the heavy clods in every direction. A list of Fageol owners in Southern California was prominently displayed in the exhibition tent.

"HENRYS" IN ACTION.

Having drawn No. 1, or choice of location, the William L. Hughson forces were located in a prominent position at the entrance to the field for the display of the Fordson. The exhibit and demonstrations were elaborate and notable. Fordsons were everywhere, in and out of the Hughson tent, hitched to all sorts of farm machines and special Fordson farm machines. They were grinding feed, pumping water, spraying imaginary trees, scraping, leveling, plowing, cultivating, seeding, etc. In the tent a cutaway model was running, the power being furnished by another Fordson adjoining. The Hughson Company had a large staff of sales and service men under Manager Nerney to take care of the crowds.

A STURDY MACHINE.

One of the big implement firms showing a tractor was the E. P. Bosbyshell Company, Los Angeles, which demonstrated the Heider, a tractor known wherever farm crops are raised. The half-dozen Heiders used in field work plowed, prepared a seed bed, ran feed grinders, silage cutters and hay balers in the implement section and otherwise showed versatility in farm work. The Heider made little ado about pulling three fourteen-inch plows and, at another time, a three-plow disc outfit went through the heavy soil behind a Heider with ease. The Bosbyshell lines of disc harrows were also demonstrated with the tractor. The "still" exhibit of this company was notable, showing the 12-20 Heider parts, various equipment and photographs of the machine on the farm in many kinds of work.

THE I. H. C. TRACTOR.

Besides having a complete exhibit in the implement section, the International Harvester Company exhibited in the demonstration field its tractors, the International and Titan. The kerosene-burning International 8-16 walked right along with three twelve-inch plows and pulled a double out-

INDIANA
TRACTOR

Indiana Tractor Hitched to 10-ft. Faulkner Cultivator.

One Man Operates Tractor and Cultivator With Ease

All wheeled implements hitched in the same manner, making a single unit combination.

THE INDIANA PLOWS, CULTIVATES, DISCS, MOWS, REAPS, HARROWS, DRILLS, RAKES, and in fact does any and all work where from two to five horses are used. The INDIANA turns in less than 16 feet, making it possible to turn from one row of trees into the next. The INDIANA backs UP with implement attached with same ease as it goes ahead, making it possible to get into corners or against a fence or flume.

Light Weight a Great Essential

The INDIANA weighs only 1700 lbs. and does not pack the soil in the least. Why use power to operate tractors, weighing 3000 lbs. or more, when the INDIANA is guaranteed to do four or five horse work under all conditions. It costs money to carry the extra weight.

The INDIANA is constructed entirely of steel, which makes it practically indestructible. All gears are housed and run in a bath of oil. There are only two grease cups on the INDIANA.

The INDIANA has ball and roller bearings throughout, is of simple construction and easy to operate.

See the INDIANA before buying any other and you will be convinced. Write for illustrated catalog.

STOCK SHOW ENTRIES CONTINUE TO COME IN AFTER LISTS CLOSE.

"EVERY mail is bringing in letters from live-stock men wanting to enter the Los Angeles Live-stock Show," said E. R. Thomas, secretary of the show, last week. "They keep on coming, in spite of the fact that the entries have closed. This gives an idea of the interest that is being taken in the show. From all indications we will have nearly twice as large a show this year as last and are making preparations accordingly."

The barns and pens of the show grounds at Exposition Park are nearing completion and will be in readiness in ample time to receive the exhibits. And the exhibits are ready for the barns. The show site will present a lively scene from now until the date of opening on October 18.

One of the innovations of the exhibit will be a dog show which is expected to equal anything ever held on the Coast. The poultry show will also be one of the big features, and every professional and amateur poultry breeder will find it to his interest to attend. There will also be a large showing of rabbits and pigeons.

A fine racing programme has been arranged and there will be entertainment every afternoon in front of the grand stand from 1 until 5 o'clock.

A matter of interest to the live-stock exhibitors is the arrangements which have been made to supply grain, hay and straw. There will be a feed station on the grounds, where feed may be purchased at market prices. If the exhibitor so desires, however, feed may be brought from home or purchased outside the grounds.

Most of the judges have already been selected, and as soon as the list is completed it will appear in the Farm and Tractor Section of The Times. The entries which have come in within the past few days follow:

Llano Vista Ranch, Perris, Hampshire swine; Fred Bixby, Long Beach, fat cattle, horses and jacks; Ida M. Burdick, Glendale, goats; O. H. Brandt, Shell City, horses; Congdon & Battles, Yakima, Wash., Angus cattle; C. J. Gilbert, Lancaster, Hampshire swine; R. H. Gudgeon, Montecito, horses; T. L. FINAL STEPS TAKEN IN BIG MERGER PLAN.

Final steps have been taken in the plans for the merger of creamery plants in interior California to be under the direction of the San Joaquin Valley Milk Producers' Association, twelve big properties having signed over their interests to the new organization, giving it a practical control of the dairy industry of that section.

Fred W. Hansen, president of the organization, announces that the necessary legal steps have been taken for the sale to the merger of the following properties: Hopeton Cheese Company, Merced; Sierra Creamery Company, Madera; Danish Creamery Company, Fresno; Caruthers Cheese Association, Caruthers; Riverdale Co-operative Creamery, Riverdale; Kings County Co-operative Creamery, Lemoore; Lake View Creamery, Corcoran; Dairymen's Co-operative Creamery, Tulare; Visalia Co-operative Creamery, Visalia; Exeter Creamery Association, Exeter; Porterville Co-operative Creamery, Porterville; Kern County Sanitary Creamery, McFarland; Meadowland Creamery Association, Bakersfield.

These plants, it is stated, represent an appraised valuation of about $680,000. Ample funds for financing the project in all of its proposed extensions have been made available, according to the association officers.

It is understood that as soon as all the details of the actual merger have been completed a campaign for membership of all the dairymen of the San Joaquin Valley is to be inaugurated, to be under the direction of the executive council.

BIG AUCTION SALE.

RIVERSIDE.—Consignments of fine stock for the auction sale which will be held at the Southern California fair are being received at the secretary's office and from the high grade of the stock listed it is assured that this first sale will be a great success. Among the consignments made are some wonderful Holstein heifers from the ranch of George A. Smith at Corcoran, a carload of Guernseys from the famous Palo Alto Ranch, a fine string of Jerseys from some of the best herds in California and Shorthorns from the Hall Ranch at Perris and from recently received eastern stock. Goats will also be included in this sale and some of the best bred animals in the State are listed. In this list there are a number of heifers from the best milk and butter producing strains on the Coast. The stock has all been carefully selected and comes chiefly from breeders of wide reputation. In the swine sale some splendid animals will be offered. There will be bred Durocs, Poland-China, Hampshire and Berkshire gilts from the leading herds of the State. This sale is considered a move of great value to this section of California in improving livestock conditions, introducing better blood lines and offering opportunity to build up dairy herds. The sale will be held on Friday and Saturday of the fair and will be under the management of W. C. Lookingbill, a widely experienced live-stock auctioneer.

HONEY SORGHUM IS BEST IN CROP TEST.

Honey sorghum, recently introduced from Texas by the California College of Agriculture, has proved one of the most valuable forage plants yet tried, producing the greatest amount of succulent forage of any plant yet tried, not excluding alfalfa. It is excellent for the silo.

An average yield of 27.43 tons of cut silage per acre without irrigation has been noted at the Davis experiment farm. Other sorghums tried at the same time gave the following yields: Red amber, 18.73 tons; orange sorghum, 18.11 tons per acre. One year the honey sorghum yielded 31.46 tons per acre. The seed was rilled in rows three and half feet apart, using three and one-half pounds per acre. It ripens in 150 days.

UNIVERSITY FARM IS TRYING SUDAN GRASS.

In order to determine the relative value of Sudan grass as a forage crop for swine, a large area of this grass has been planted at the farm near Davis. It is being pasture fed to swine, and is being tried as a substitute for alfalfa.

The university authorities have found the yield of Sudan hay quite variable, from one to eight tons of cured hay per acre. Two or three cuttings per year are made.

Sudan grass should be seeded in the spring, although in the southern interior valleys it is sometimes planted in the early fall. The seed is either broadcast or drilled. The first cutting is made in from seventy-five to eighty days, and the second cutting forty-five days afterward.

Overgrazing will ruin the best of pastures.

fit of cutaway harrows in going over the plowed field. The Titan worked in the hard, tough soil, pulling two fourteen-inch plows. Both tractors were followed with interest by groups of farmers wherever they went.

LA CROSSE MAKES BOW.

Introduced to agriculturalists of Southern California by the Knapp Tractor Company, Los Angeles, the La Crosse "Happy Farmer" tractor made its bow to the public on the demonstration field. Its first appearance at a demonstration in Southern California created a good impression. The "Happy Farmer" pulled three twelve-inch plows a great deal of the time. It was driven not only from the seat, but with reins held by an operator standing on the implement behind, answering to "gee" and "haw" like a well-trained horse.

A LOS ANGELES PRODUCT.

"It's a bear," was the expression of many who saw the work in the field of the Los Angeles-made Little Bear tractor. This machine, which develops eight horse power on the drawbar, pulled three moldboard plows through the adobe. The Los Angeles Auto Tractor Company, which turns out this machine, had a cutaway model in the still exhibit and showed parts and photographs of the tractor.

THE MOLINE UNIVERSAL.

The California Moline Plow Company demonstrated the Moline Universal, both in drawbar and belt work. Half a dozen Molines worked in plowing, cultivating and pulverizing. Many visitors were interested in this machine because of the fact that the driver sits on the implement and guides it and the tractor. Wherever there are tractor shows, as a rule, there are Moline tractors, showing adaptability to general farm work.

THE BIG "SIEVE-GRIP."

The Samson tractor demonstration was not confined to the plot reserved for President H. L. Marsh of the Implement Dealers' Association, representing the Samson Sales Company. The Samson was busy in practical work, laying out tracts, making roads and improving conditions on the field. There were eight or ten Samsons busy preparing seed beds, drawing three fourteen-inch plows and other "man's-size" tools. In the Marsh tent Samsons in repose and various parts were shown.

MADE FINE SEED BED.

An example of the efficacy of tractors in farming was given in the exhibit and demonstration of Sandusky tractors by Washburn Brothers, Southern California distributors of this universal farm machine. The Sandusky transformed the hard stretch of adobe on its plot to a finely-prepared seed bed, the kind that farmers aim at. Four Sanduskys were used in the exhibit. One drew three twelve-inch plows, one a spike-tooth harrow and cultipacker. Another was used in various kinds of belt work.

"MOVIES" OF TRACTOR WORK.

F. T. Briles, distributor for the Bates Steel Mule tractor, had an outstanding exhibit and demonstration. In the Briles tent motion pictures of the Steel Mule in actual operation on ranches of this section were shown daily. A Steel Mule furnished the power for the showing of these pictures. The tractors in the field were followed by interested spectators. The following agents for this tractor aided in showing the merits of the machine during the demonstration: J. H. Adams, San Fernando Valley; P. L. Echols, Imperial Valley; O. Schillington, Oxnard; Mr. Sheffield, Orange county; Merrill Bros., San Diego county.

FROM THE NORTH.

One tractor which was made for California conditions and which made friends was the Stockton two-plow tractor, made by the Stockton Tractor Company, Stockton, Cal. Glanville Hart, general manager, and a force of sales and service men accompanied the Stocktons to the field. This tractor is a machine of seventeen-brake horse power, 1100 R.P.M. engine. It drew two twelve-inch plows through the heavy soil.

GREAT BOSWELL EXHIBIT.

The exhibit and demonstration of the Douglas Boswell line was probably the most elaborate in scope of any in the field. On the large Boswell plot were shown the Wallis tractor, the new Toro motor cultivator, a down-to-date airplane and Acme trucks. These lines will soon be housed in the new Boswell assembly and salesrooms in Los Angeles. The Wallis indicated its adaptability to California farming by pulling three fourteen-inch plows well down into the black adobe and then quickly converting the field into a fine seed bed with various tools. The Toro cultivator, a new machine to Southern Califorina, was shown both as a cultivator and as a tractor by the removal of the light front wheels used in cultivating and the substitution of lugged wheels. Bruce Mitchell, Southern California distributor for Mr. Boswell, was in charge of the demonstration.

SHOWS TWO MACHINES.

Gregory & Son, Los Angeles, featured the Trundaar and Lambert chain tread tractors at the show. These track-laying machines have been well tried out in this section of the country and made additional friends by their work in plowing, cultivating and pulverizing. In the Gregory tent were shown several tractors, Trundaar and Lambert parts and photographs showing the machines at work in various kinds of farm work in Southern California.

NEW RENSTROM TRACTOR.

The Frank O. Renstrom Company introduced to the general public at the demonstration the Twin City tractor, a machine that comes from the Middle West with high recommendations. It develops twelve horse power on the drawbar and twenty horse power on the belt. In the corn belt country kerosene is used, but on the Pacific Coast western distillate is the fuel consumed. A great Minneapolis plant is behind the Twin City and its performance.

THE TORRANCE TRACTOR.

The Union Tool Company of Torrance was sure of an audience every time the Union "sure-grip" tractor started plowing or cultivating. This machine did good work during the show, pulling three fourteen-inch plows well down into the soil. Measuring sticks were freely used by the visitors. This track-layer's performance with other tools was in keeping with its plowing.

BALL TREAD IN EVIDENCE.

The A. F. George Company was in charge of a demonstration of the Yuba ball-tread tractor, a machine which needed no introduction to the California farmer. Several sizes of Yubas were used in various sorts of farm work. One big machine pulled a Killefer subsoiler, while another hauled a land leveller. At the A. F. George implement tent. Yubas were used to run farm machines.

SIMPLE RULES FOR TIMING A MAGNETO.

When overhauling a motor it is frequently necessary to retime a magneto. In this operation it is necessary:

(1.) To place the crank for cylinder No. 1 on the dead center with the piston on compression. Disconnect the magneto coupling.

(2.) Put the circuit breaker in full retard position and rotate the magneto until the distributor registers for No. 1 cylinder.

(3.) Rotate the magneto shaft until the circuit breaker starts to separate the points. This is the firing point, and you can now connect the magneto coupling.

(4.) Connect the remaining spark plugs in the order of firing. For four-cylinder motors this is usually 1-2-4-3, always counting from the clutch side of the motor.

TRACTOR MEN BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Tractor Engine and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California, held in the Hotel Alexandria ballroom, Tuesday evening, September 16, was one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held by the association. This banquet was an anomalyno speaking was allowed, except from a song leader, who led the 400 or more banqueters through the mazes of the latest song hits. A good cabaret was enjoyed.

CANNERIES BUSY.

POMONA.—The two canneries of this section are having a busy season with peaches. The Lovell peaches are all up, and the Phillips clings are just now occupying the canners' attention. At the Golden State Cannery forty-five tons of peaches were canned in one day recently, and this plant has also started on tomatoes, the average amount handled being thirty-five tons a day. There will be a tremendous crop of tomatoes this year, and the season will last until Jack Frost nips the tender vines. The Golden State is handling not only local tomatoes, but has shipped some in from the California Tomato Growers' Association. To accommodate the growers and at the same time handle the crop from the outside, the cannery has been compelled to buy 10,000 additional boxes, which are now on the way, three cars being required to carry the boxes. Just now the intake is larger than the shipments out, for it was impossible to secure a sufficient number of cars during the disruption of freight service. At the present time there is stored in the house of the Golden State Cannery, a large amount of finished canned goods. During the strike this plant had on hands 7000 sacks of sugar and a tremendous supply of cans, and because of this it was able to relieve the needs of its branch canneries by sending truck loads of sugar and cans. The Sunset Cannery is rushed with Phillips clings and has a large tonnage of tomatoes on hand. When the peaches are all disposed of the cannery will devote its time to the big tomato crop.

CONTRIVES HIS OWN LUBRICATING DEVICE.

J. N. Pike, of Marion, San Fernando Valley, is so busy working his tractor night and day, three shifts, digging sugar beets and cutting beans for the farmers in his neighborhood that he finds no time to stop and "oil up" his machine. He has therefore installed on the tractor a compression lubricating system which oils the bearings while the tractor plows on.

Mr. Pike's tractor has two-gallon oil tanks installed, one on each side. From these tanks ten pipes fitted with cocks lead to bearings on the wheels and tracks. A tank of compressed air above the tractor seat furnishes the "power" for the lubricating system. Every two hours the driver turns the cocks while riding the machine. Mr. Pike uses heavy cylinder oil.

What Kind of Show?

favor, to judge by comments in implement publications on a recent demonstration held in Ohio, is an outdoor demonstration at which real tests of the merits of different makes and types of tractors are made. At the Ohio demonstrations much commented upon machines were pitted against one another in every conceivable form of competition, the various performances being left to the judging of disinterested committees. The interest of the farmer visitors, it is reported, was keen, the contests affording an attraction that the mere operation of the machines in the familiar work of plowing and harrowing could not give and enabling the spectators to make comparisons valuable to them.

Whether the Los Angeles dealers decide next year to try the still show, to repeat the combination still show and field demonstration of this year, to take a turn at competitive tests or to hold no show at all remains to be seen, but one thing is absolutely certain—there will be no more of the kind of demonstrations that are scattered in unorganized units all out-of-doors and in which all a visitor gets to see for the wear and tear on his shoe leather is a tractor outfit doing the things that he can see them doing any day out along the highways around Southern California's cities and towns.

its use, the tractor driver is able at all times to keep his load within the limits for which the particular machine is intended.

An exhibit of interest to autoists was that of Simplex rims in the Daly Manufacturing Company booth. This rim, which is new to the Coast, is jointed and locked and is easily demounted when a tire change is necessary. Hayes wire wheels were exhibited by Motors Equipment & Tractor Company. The Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company's Norwalk tire booth had a huge rock suspended from a section of tubing. Gore & Sharp demonstrated a tire-mending material, Patchem. The Vulca Patch Sales Agency had an exhibit of Vulca patches. Sta-Stuck tire patching was demonstrated. The McNall Arch Shape tires and Victor tires were shown by the Bershon Tire Company. The Matthews Paint Company had a display of tractor and implement paints. Columbia storage batteries were shown by Harold L. Arnold. Chicago wind deflectors had a booth. The J. M. H. carbon remover was demonstrated.

A home-made lubricating device.

It is the invention of J. N. Pike of Marion and is used by him in all his tractor work.

PUMPING PLANTS SHOWN.

The Fairbanks, Morse & Co. exhibit attracted much attention, a crowd being gathered about this firm's space most of the time. The center of interest was a huge fifty-horse-power Semi-Diesel engine operating a No. 5 Fairbanks, Morse & Co., centrifugal pump, representing an irrigating system of seventy-five inches capacity and pumping water at the rate of 700 gallons a minute. The firm also featured its new "Z" Bosch magneto-equipped farm engines in sizes from one to fifteen horse power. There was also an exhibit of lighting plants, dynamos, scales, tools, pumps and washing machines, together with a display of Hayes power sprayers in action just outside the tent.

The Frank J. Kimball Company had a noteworthy display in the form of a Kimball Direct Flow Turbine pump forcing water into an irrigation spillway.

Equipment for the farm home was shown by a number of firms. The Coleman Lamp Company had a complete exhibit of gasoline lamps for farm use, including table lamps, lanterns and headlights for tractors. De Jongh & Cochran featured their Delco Light products, including farm generating plants and automatic water systems. Dreadnaught oil-gas burners, stoves and water heaters were shown by the Scientific Specialties Company. The F. A. Clarke Company had a display of electric vacuum cleaners and washing machines. Household appliances of various kinds were displayed by the J. M. Overell Furniture Company.

SEED HOUSES EXHIBIT.

Two large seed houses, the Germain Seed and Plant Company and Aggeler & Musser, had booths in the accessories section, the former featuring garden appliances and poultry supplies and the latter featuring forage grasses. The Western Soil Bacteria Company exhibited plants grown under innoculation with this firm's Westrobac soil bacteria.

The American La France Fire Engine Company had a display of fire extinguishers designed for household use and for extinguishing fires in autos, tractors and farm machinery. The E. B. Y. Machinery Company "sawed wood" all week with a Wade saw, which consists of a blade worked by a compact engine, the whole being set in a frame which is attached to the log which is to be cut in two. The U. S. Tractor, Truck and Auto School had a space in which instruction in tractor operation was given, a Caterpillar tractor being used in the work. The De Weese-Hallock Company had an exhibit of Invincible pulley covering. The publishing business was well represented, the Country Gentleman, the Rural World, Orchard and Farm, Motor West, System on the Farm and the Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section all having booths.

TEACHING TRACTOR DRIVERS.

An institution that is turning out operators and service men for tractor owners, the National Automotive School, exemplified the work of instructing its men on the demonstration grounds at the tractor show, having a large tent near field headquarters. In this tent cutaway models of tractor motors were displayed, and charts showed the courses of instruction.

NEW INDIANA MODEL.

Otto Smith, distributor in Southern California of the Indiana tractor, has received a lot of the new models, especially designed for California farming and orchard conditions. The new Indianas are lighter, turn in a shorter radius, and get under low hanging limbs easy. The new models will be seen in farm demonstrations shortly.

Potato production this year is short, except in the central delta sections, where the production is slightly above average. The production in California this year will be about 11,686,000 bushels.

Many New Farm Tools.

cial tools made by various implement manufacturers for use with the Fordson tractor. These were shown hitched to Fordsons in the W. L. Hughson Company tent. They included an Oliver two-bottom plow, an Oliver sulky plow, an Amsco seed drill with grass seed and press wheel attachment, Roderick Lean orchard disc harrows in extended and contracted forms, a Roderick Lean automatic disc harrow, a Knapp orchard plow in both two and three-disc forms, an Oliver orchard and vineyard plow, an Amsco tractor drill, a Roderick Lean automatic spring-tooth harrow, a Roderick Lean flexible three-section spike tooth harrow, a Niagara sprayer, a Sandstrom land leveler, a Byron Jackson pump and a McKay two-disc plow.

Fordsons were seen in belt work operating a Byron Jackson pump, a Hammco alfalfa and corn grinding mill, a Ross ensilage cutter, a K. C. hay press and other machines.

HEAVY TOOLS SHOWN.

Making heavy tillage tools, bean and beet tools and orchard and field harrows for Southern California conditions is the business of a Los Angeles concern, the Killefer Manufacturing Company, which exhibited an array of these implements in a tent at the demonstration. The Killefer tent was located convenient to the exhibits of the large tractors. Holt, Best, Avery and Yuba and the big fellows demonstrated to interested crowds the Killefer subsoilers, automatic double-disc harrows and heavy tractor chisels. Many small tractors drew the Killefer disc and chisel harrows. In the Killefer exhibit were set out for inspection tractor automatic-disc harrows, bean cutters, four-row bean cultivators, beet plows, Monarch cultivators and one and two-standard subsoilers, besides the heavy tractor chisels in many sizes.

The Shaw-Palmer-Bakewell Company had an interesting windmill display on the principal tractor show avenue.

Another individual exhibit that created interest was that of the Jones tractor mower attachment, distributed by the Pratt-Gilbert Company of Phoenix, Ariz. This attachment was demonstrated in connection with a number of tractors, notably the small-size Avery.

In July, the level of prices paid for farm produce increased 6.1 per cent. On August 1, the level of prices was 91.9 per cent. higher than the average of the past nine years on August 1.

EVERYTHING FROM PISTON RINGS TO TRUCKS IN ACCESSORIES TENT.

One of the notable accessory tent displays.
Fifty-horse-power engine pumping 700 gallons of water a minute in Fairbanks, Morse & Co. exhibit.

EXHIBITS of motor accessories, general farm equipment and farm household appointments have yearly come to occupy a more important place in tractor demonstrations and the accessories exhibit of this year's Los Angeles show was no exception. In a tent big enough to house a circus there was gathered an interesting assortment of mechanical appliances ranging from a simple motor piston ring to a five-ton truck, while there was everything for the farm from a kitchen cupboard to a fifty horse-power irrigation pump.

The phenomenal development of motor farming was nowhere more strikingly emphasized than in the many and comprehensive exhibits of motor oils and greases. The largest exhibit was that of the Standard Oil Company, which besides featuring a display of its Zerolene oils and other products intended for motor consumption, had a number of pieces of machinery cut away to illustrate the application of lubricants. Among these were a twenty-five-horse-power Union Sure Grip tractor motor, a rear clutch and transmission of the same machine and a Cletrac power plant.

The Union Oil Company had an extensive display of its Aristo products. The Puente Oil Company featured its Apex cylinder oils. The Ventura Refining Company exhibited a miniature gusher which spouted oil in a realistic fashion.

The A. B. C. motor oils were shown by Austin, Bryant & Carter in an attractive booth, the special A. B. C. grease for differentials and transmissions of tractors, trucks and automobiles being shown in use in a "cut-away" Cletrac tractor. The Monomobile Oil Company had an interesting display of Monomobile products. The Tidewater Oil Company had a good showing of its Veedol lubricants.

The New York Lubricating Oil Company had a complete line of Monogram oils and greases, featuring products particularly adapted to tractors. Five cans a day of automobile oil were given away at this booth to visitors receiving lucky numbers in a drawing contest, and the popularity of this feature was attested by the crowd that gathered about the Monogram display. A. W. Barrows was in charge of the exhibit. Valvoline motor oils were shown by the Valvoline Oil Company, tractor cylinder oils being featured. The Panama Lubricant Company had a display of Pennsylvania oils, with a special exhibit of its True Grease products. The Alemite Company exhibited its Alemite High Pressure lubricator for tractors and trucks. The Turner Oil Company had an exhibit of Lubro motor oils, enlivened with a guessing contest centering about the length of time required by a bubble to rise in a tube of oil.

THE TRUCK DISPLAY.

The growing importance of the truck on the farm was reflected in the extensive display of motor trucks of many makes and sizes. These ranged from the small types designed for the hauling of ordinary loads to the great five-ton monsters used by large ranches in transporting beets and beans to shipping points.

J. W. Leavitt & Co. exhibited two sizes of the Oldhmobile Cconomy truck, the tree-quarter-ton and the one and a half-ton, showing also the American Convertible Motor Truck body, designed to fit trucks of different sizes and which can be converted into many uses. The Walter H. Bissell Company displayed two Diamond T trucks, a two-ton model and a three and a half-ton model. The Kissel truck was shown by the Western Motors Company.

The Gary South Coast Agency showed a three and a half-ton Gary truck intended for ranch as well as general trucking use. Federal and Lee trucks in large and small sizes were exhibited by the William L. Hughson Company. The Service Truck Company had on display both the two and five-ton models of the Service truck. A truck new to this section was the Clydesdale, which was shown by the Pacific Coast Truck Company in one, two and a half and three and a half-ton sizes.

H. G. Pendell had an exhibit including a three and a half-ton Duplex Four-Wheel Drive truck, a three-ton Denby truck and a display of Zenith carburetors. J. P. Shelein showed the Kleiber truck in two sizes, the two and a half and the three and a half-ton. The White Auto Company exhibited two of its huge Whites, a three-ton and a five-ton truck. The Albertson Motor Company had four models of the Dodge Bros. light delivery car. The Fageol Motors Company truck was exhibited by Ruddle & Menillo.

TRACTOR ACCESSORIES.

Of motor accessories and appliances there was a great assortment and the number of exhibitors showing accessories and parts especially made to do tractor and truck duty was notable.

The Hobbs Storage Battery Company, besides exhibiting a full line of starting and lighting batteries for automobiles, showed its newest product, a battery built in Los Angeles especially for tractor and truck use. The Splitdorf Electrical Company had a display of Munger piston rings and Splitdorf Green Jacket spark plugs. The Ensign Carburetor Company showed the Ensign carburetors used in various makes of tractors. The Kelly Metals Company had an exhibit of bearings shown in a "cut-away" Continental E. motor.

The Bosch Magneto Company, through its San Francisco branch, exhibited the Bosch heavy duty impulse starter and special equipment for Fordson tractors. The Electric Equipment Company had a display of Buda motor parts, Eisemann magnetos and U. S. L. batteries. The Clark-Turner Piston Company booth featured De Luxe light weight gray iron pistons for autos, trucks and tractors. Double Seal piston rings were exhibited by the Double Seal Piston Ring Company. The Mapson Manufacturing Company had Mapson valve lifters. William Rush & Co. exhibited the Rush roller and the Rush piston rim extractor. The Bearings Service Company had a display of bearings for cars of all kinds, featuring Timken and Hyatt products.

Henry W. Schillinger of Pasadena exhibited Warnerite storage batteries, lighting systems and starters for Fords, together with Westco pumps and automatic water systems for houses. The Simplicity power attachment for Fords and Simplicity demountable wheel were shown by the Simplicity Wheel Company. The Universal Super carburetor had a booth. The Chordas Auto Body Company, manufacturers of special Ford bodies, shared a booth with a display of King gas-saving appliances. The American Engine & Airplane Company had a display of pistons and a valve grinding demonstration. The Weinstock-Nichols Company featured Red Seal batteries. The Miller Company showed Chebelar carburetors. Cambria auto and truck springs, rims and wheels were shown by the Cambria Springs Company. The California Peerless Starter Sales Company demonstrated the Peerless Ford starter.

DRAWBAR PULL TESTER.

One of the most interesting exhibits of the accessories tent was the display of Tractometers by the Bayer-Rothgeb Company. This new appliance, designed for testing tractor drawbar pull and speed, was also to be seen on many of the tractors pulling implements in the field outside. Through shown. Two, three and four-gang power lift plows in ten, twelve and fourteen-inch size for tractor use were shown in one section, deep tillage plows for beet fields in another. Oliver power lift tractor discs were shown in two, three and four-bottom sizes. There were Oliver horse discs, sulky and gang plows, corn and cotton riding cultivators, corn, cotton and bean planters and manure spreaders.

The Roderick Lean tools occupied one end of the tent, being in charge of R. B. Wheeler, western manager for this firm The exhibit included disc harrows for tractor and horses, automatic tractor discs and other implements. Acme Harvesting Company machinery and rakes had a generous space. Emerson & Brantingham mowers and rakes and Standard and Osborne mowers and side delivery rakes were shown. The exhibit also included Forkner tillers, the R. M. Wade & Co. bean thresher, a Chatham fanning mill, Simplex ditcher, Peru steel wheel metal trucks, Studebaker wagons and Ross ensilage cutters. The last-named machine was operated during the week by the Avery, Fordson and Samson tractors. A machine that attracted considerable attention was an Ohio Rake Company transplanter for setting out tomatoes, cabbages and other crops in truck fields. A good-sized section of the big Hayman tent was given over to the Planet Jr. products, of which a full line was shown. The display included hand, horse and tractor cultivators for use in garden, orchard and field, together with seeders, celery bankers and plows for use in potato fields. Outside the tent a Hammco alfalfa and corn grinding mill, operated by a Samson tractor, cut corn and other feed all week.

EVERYTHING IN ONE TENT.

The International Harvest Company exhibit was a veritable three-ring and two-stage agricultural show under one great top. Exhibiting only its own products, including the popular P. & O. and Chattanooga plow lines recently absorbed by this gigantic farm implement concern, the "International" covered the whole field of agricultural equipment adapted to this part of the country.

All three sizes of the International tractor, the 8-16, the Titan 10-20 and the 15-30, were shown in "still" exhibits or in action running belt machinery or demonstrating in the field. In the tent itself one tractor ran a harvester-thresher combine, another an ensilage cutter, a third a hay press, a fourth a cream separator and a fifth a stationary engine for pumping.

Complete lines as to size and models were shown in all tools. Corn machines, planters and cultivators; hay machines of every description, including balers; tillage tools of every kind; soil packers and pulverizers; feed grinders and silo fillers; drills and harvesters lined the walls of the tent. The International motor trucks had a corner. International twine had a booth. In the plow section much interest centered in the new P. & O. power lift plow designed to be operated by hand from the seat of a tractor. The International pivot axle cultivator for corn and cotton was carefully inspected by growers of these crops. Another tool that attracted attention was the Chattanooga two-way twelve-inch disc plow.

The exhibit was in charge of H. E. Daniels, Los Angeles branch manager for the International Harvester Company; C. P. Hawkins, Los Angeles branch advertising manager; and W. D. Zarley, the company's Imperial Valley representative.

COMPREHENSIVE EXHIBIT.

Arnott & Co. had a comprehensive exhibit of great interest to farmer visitors. The approach to the big Arnott tent was flanked on either side by Farquhar threshers, one for beans on one side and one for grain on the other. The former was operated by a Caterpillar tractor. Near by, a Cletrac tractor furnished power for an Ann Arbor hay pess.

Inside the tent the visitor was at once impressed by the great array of farm tools. On a special platform just inside the canvas were displayed two and three-disc models of the McKay plow, an implement new to the Coast and which attracted a great deal of attention from both tractor men and show visitors during the week. The plow is designed for work in hard ground, having a subsoiler attachment back of each disc, and was tried out by most of the machines on the ground.

In the plow section also were nine styles of Sanders disc plows and twenty different models of Imperial plows, including heavy moldboards for rooting up vineyards. Imperial harrows also occupied quite a space. The Pekin wagon, Myers sprayer, Freeman feed cutter, Racine fanning mill, Western land pulverizer, Buckeye cultivators and the American bean thresher were represented. Ranged around the walls of the tent were also displayed the Ann Arbor hay press, Walter A. Wood harvesting machinery, Dempster buck rake and stacker, Iron Age potato planters, garden tools and cultivators, Superior grain drills, alfalfa drills and corn planters and the Towner tractor subsoiler.

MACHINES IN ACTION.

Four Yuba tractors were in action in and just outside the A. G. George Company tent. Earl Nelson, foreman of the company's service department and who was formerly connected with the shops of the Yuba plant in the North, was in charge of their operation. A Yuba 12-20 was belted to a John Deere silo cutter, while a 20-35 model ran a hay baler. The others did various turns at belt work and pulling implements in the demonstration field, a big 40-70 pulling heavy plow loads and a subsoiler.

Included in the John Deere implement display were plows, disc harrows, feed cutters, silo fillers, hay balers, side delivery rakes and manure spreaders. A Rex concrete mixer and a Caledonia bean cutter were also exhibited.

Let us tell you about it or, better still, show you that it is just what you need, because

1. It has Manganese Tracks, which are practically indestructable.
2. Its weight on the ground, per square inch, is less than the weight of a man walking over the field; weight 3700 lbs.
3. It has three speeds forward and one reverse.
4. It is fully spring mounted, which eliminates wear and shock.
5. It is only 50 inches high which is low enough even for Walnut orchards.
6. There is no side play in the tracks—no "riding" the sprocket teeth—no clogging of the tracks.

Now, you will see why we say you MUST see the ORCHARD SPECIAL LIGHTFOOT before you buy your orchard tractor.

Our stock of repairs is complete and we are prepared to render reasonable service.

COMPARATIVE EFFICIENCY TESTS BIG NEED OF TRACTOR SHOWS.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, including the rural population, demands out-of-door entertainment, in the greatest out-of-doors country on earth. They attended the tractor exhibition and demonstration at Hollywood chiefly because they were interested in the latest improvements in farm power and implements. But one of the reasons why they attended was because the big open-air tractor show offered them an opportunity for outside entertainment.

The show was entirely different from any like event ever held on such a scale anywhere. For the first time the features of an indoor tractor show and a demonstration were combined, with successful results. Although the attendance was not as great as upon former demonstrations in Southern California, the number of persons who saw the exhibition and demonstration was double that of those who attended the demonstration held under the auspices of the California Tractor and Implement Dealers' Association at Sacramento this year. This show proved that the interest of the farmer in tractor demonstrations is not dead by any means. Nor is his interest in any outside show defunct.

The demonstration and attendance exhibitions this year, however, left much to be desired from the farmer's viewpoint. The competitive feature was practically eliminated from the demonstration by the elimination of any data on the horse-power, fuel, cost, weight or other specifications regarding individual tractors. At last year's demonstration in Los Angeles there were no real competitive tests, it is true, but each tractor was required to bear a placard with the name of the tractor, its weight, cost, fuel, horse power and plowing speed clearly indicated upon it. The present demonstration was merely an individual exhibition of tractors, the dealers being privileged to do what they liked in the way of showing their machines in farm work.

THE IDEAL DEMONSTRATION.

From the farmer's viewpoint, an ideal demonstration would be one in which actual, authoritative tests of the efficiency of each machine were made by a disinterested group of experts, preferably from a State university or a farmers' organization. These tests would show the actual pull exerted by each tractor per unit of horse power, the plows used, the fuels used and the time taken out for stoppage, for whatever cause. The farmer would appreciate the publication of results of comparative drawbar and belt tests.

But demonstrations such as that at Hollywood have their uses, and the local dealers' association have advanced the cause of greater farm output by staging this demonstration and exhibition. It was intended to be more educational than competitive. The farmer is cognizant of the fact that tractors have been designed which will do everything a horse can except kick out the side of the barn at night. But those who saw the fourth annual demonstration know now that there are many farm machines of which they were ignorant before the show. The latest wrinkle in tractors and implements, in many cases, were not shown until the demonstration opened. More than one new tractor was examined with interest. Tractors were hitched up to farm machines which were never before operated by them. Aids to efficient farming and higher production were seen on every hand. There is no doubt of the educational value of the latest Southern California tractor demonstration.

MORE SMALL TRACTORS.

One feature of the show was the advent of more small tractors and the disappearance from public view at a demonstration of many large tractors seen at Sacramento, Walla Walla, Wichita and at Los Angeles last year. Of the half-dozen new tractors seen at the show all were of the small wheel type. This is significant. It may not mean that the large tractors are not as popular as the small ones, but it means without doubt that many firms having large tractors prefer not to go to the expense of participating in a demonstration. The "big three" track-laying tractors, Holt, Best and Yuba, however, were on the job at this demonstration, chiefly because two of them are California concerns and big California ranches favor them.

What would a demonstration be like without the compelling, awe-inspiring Holt Caterpillars and the almost similar Best machine? These powerful farm machines are seen, with the Yubas, on large acreages from the Mexican to the Oregon line, and their owners would not do without them. Then there are the smaller track-layers, the Cleveland, Trundaar, Steel Mule, all of them popular. They and their work were the object of great interest at the demonstration.

The Fordson always draws a crowd, and who will say it is because of the reflected glory of the flivver car? These little wheel tractors did notable work during the show and, in combination with many farm implements and machines, gave visual proof of their efficiency. The ascendency of the tractor over the horse was also exemplified in demonstrations by the Fageol, Heider, International, Sandusky, Samson, Moline, Union sure-grip and others. One of the most interesting and pretentious exhibits was that of Douglas Boswell, who not only showed his Wallis wheel tractor and the new Toro motor cultivator, but exhibited an airplane as well.

THE BALLAST MACHINE.

The Los Angeles-made tractors, the Little Bear and Allen water ballast made excellent showings. The Allen is built upon an entirely new and reasonable principle. It has hollow wheels which may be filled with sand or water when greater traction is desired. The new tractors, including the All-Work, Happy Farmer or La Cross and Twin City, are well known in the Middle West, where they have been in profitable use for many years. The Avery line of tractors, a pioneer line and a proved performance group were shown effectively.

In the matter of implement exhibits this year's show was equal to the best ever given in California. Six large tents were filled with attractive implement exhibits, and these held the attention of the visitors. What the manufacturer is doing to fit the implement to the tractor and the outfit to the land and kind of farm work was shown in detail in these six great exhibits.

GROWING OF ALFALFA SEED IN ARIZONA.

According to incomplete figures from reports received there were on hand June 30 in the United States 3,959,281 pounds of alfalfa seed as compared with 9,999,664 pounds on the same date in 1918. Many dealers will have to rely on new-crop seed to meet their late summer and early fall seed demands. In Texas the second cutting which usually yields the seed crop they report a seed crop of only 25 per cent. of normal due to untimely rains.

"The bulk of the alfalfa seed produced in the Salt River Valley of Arizona is usually obtained from the second or third cutting, and it will be from this cutting that the seed crop will be obtained this year. The 1919 crop in that valley is reported to be 75 per cent. short of normal, because the high prices paid for hay induced growers to harvest hay crops instead of a seed crop. The quality of the 1919 seed is expected to be equal to that of last year. Offers of $16.50 per 100 pounds have been reported, but growers are not contracting to sell their crops at this price. A production of about 700,000 pounds of Chilean and somewhat more than 1,000,000 pounds of Peruvian alfalfa seed are reported for the Yuma project. About one-third of the 1919 production was estimated to have been threshed by August 2. The seed which has been threshed appears to be of excellent quality. Offers of $26 to $27 per 100 pounds are reported to have been made to growers for Chilean and of $32 to $33 for Peruvian.

OVERHAULING SEASON.

When the grain has been planted, and there is no silage to put up is a good time to overhaul the tractor. Parts should be cleaned, replaced when worn, the bearings should be adjusted and greased, the valves should be ground and the carbon removed from the motor.

GOOD CARE OF FARM IMPLEMENTS. ALWAYS REWARDED IN SERVICE.

BY ARTHUR L. DAHL.

IT HAS been said, whether rightly or not, that no class of workers are as careless of their tools as are the farmers. If they have blooded stock, they see that they are properly housed and fed, but an expensive machine will be allowed to remain out in the rain to rust, or bearings will not be properly oiled or needed repairs made. A carpenter or machinist takes pride in keeping his tools sharp and free from rust or dirt, and every farmer should take the same pride in his equipment, because it will mean dollars and cents in his pockets and will be reflected in the increased crops produced. It is of little value to grow a big crop of grain, for instance, if the grain is lost in threshing through the inefficient working of the threshing machine caused by neglect or careless overhauling.

The plow is virtually the foundation of agriculture, for it is this simple instrument that makes it possible to grow any kind of crop. If properly used, it not only turns over the soil but it is the most efficient pulverizer of the soil. As the moldboard turns the furrow, each particle of soil is forced to slip against the particle adjoining, a process which results in a tilth that no other single operation approaches. The general impression prevails that the plow is a single tool, requiring little adjustment and less care. To secure its best service, however, requires the greatest skill for adjustments. More effort has been made in the slow development of the plow than any other implement on the farm, and there are almost as many shapes to plows as there are keys to locks.

The plow should not be allowed to remain in out-of-the-way places subject to deterioration by weather conditions, but should be housed properly when not in use. When stored, it should be kept in a dry place away from contact with the ground, and the bright parts should be coated with grease to prevent rust. If the moldboard share and landside have become pitted with rust an efficient job of plowing can not be done until the corroded parts again have acquired a polish by use.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

The Department of Agriculture experts have given some good advice as to the proper means for repairing used plows, which will bear repeating.

If the share is of chilled cast iron and badly worn, it should be renewed; if of steel it can be sharpened, bearing at wing three-quarter inch for ten-inch bottom to one and one-quarter inches for sixteen-inch bottom; verticle suction, one-eighth inch; horizontal suction, one-eighth to one-quarter inch. If the landslide is badly worn, but a detachable sole is provided, the sole can be replaced, otherwise it will be necessary to renew landside. If the shin of the moldboard is badly worn it should be renewed, and the moldboard should be bolted tight to the frog. All bolts for bracings, handles, beams, etc., should be tightened. The bearings of the gauge wheel should be examined and if badly worn should be replaced. The gauge-wheel standard should be bolted rigidly to beam. The jointer should be bolted rigidly to the beam, and if worn should be resharpened or replaced.

Where hillside plows are used the swivel joints should work freely, but have little lost motion. The latch should catch and hold the moldboard tightly against the standard. The jointer should reverse automatically when the moldboard is swiveled. If it reverses too far in one direction and not enough in another, adjust to midposition.

Sulky and gang plows should be examined before being used and necessary adjustments made. The wheel bearings should be taken down and cleaned with cloths saturated with kerosene oil, and repacked with heavy grease before assembling. All loose bolts should be taken up in the frame. The connections for the landing and lifting levers should be tight and lost motion taken up. If the share is worn, it should be resharpened or replaced. The landside, if worn, should be replaced or a new sole replaced. The bearings of the rolling coulter should be examined and renewed if necessary, and the coulter standard should be rigidly attached to the beam.

The general features of disc plows are the same as in other plows except that the bottoms are replaced by discs. The disc bearings should be taken down, cleaned with kerosene, worn parts replaced and again assembled with sufficient grease to pack the bearings properly. The discs should be sharpened, or, if badly worn, replaced. All scraper connections should be tight, and worn parts renewed.

OVERHAULING HARROWS.

In overhauling harrows the frames should be examined and all bolts made tight. Bent frames should be restored to their original shape and broken frame bracing should be replaced. If the teeth of spike-tooth harrows are worn on one side only, they may be reversed in the clamps. If dull and blunted, they should be removed and sharpened. When replacing teeth, support the frame equally all around on the floor so that the teeth may be set to a uniform depth. All clamps should be drawn tight, and all lock nuts and cotter keys should be in place. Wooden tooth bars should be scraped clean, brushed and painted.

Lever connections should be made to work freely and latch positively, and broken or worn parts should be renewed. If the drawbar is bent it should be straightened, and likewise the bails. If these are bent the teeth will track, and good work cannot be accomplished. Toggle bolts and nuts should be made tight, and renewed if worn. If harrows are properly stored during the winter, and care taken to prevent the teeth and wooden parts becoming imbedding in earth or trash, and if wooden parts are painted to prevent checking, the life of the implement can be materially increased and better work performed.

Implements should not be exposed like these to the weather.

Where spring-tooth harrows are used, the teeth should be sharpened, and worn shoes should be renewed. Where wheels are provided, the wheel boxes and bearings should be examined and worn parts renewed. All seat fastenings should be rigid and tight.

The main frame of disc harrows should be examined to see that all bolts are tight and the gang bearings and frame bracing are attached rigidly. The gang bearings should be washed out with coal oil to remove grease and dirt and should be wiped dry. Worn parts should be renewed. Unless these bearings are dust tight, they show wear quicker than any other part. See that oil pipes are cleaned out and that oil gets down into the bearings. If grease cups are used they should be screwed down sufficiently to insure a supply of grease in the bearings. The discs should be sharpened if dull so that they will cut trash and penetrate the ground readily. If the discs are not tight on the gang bolts, they will wobble and good work will not result. The bumpers should come in contact with each other to carry the end thrust off the boxes. All scrapers should bear equally on the discs, or they will cause friction and wear. If too far away they will not clean the discs properly. If the gangs are cutting too deep in the center, raise the snubbing blocks, so the gangs will run level. If gangs are running too high in the center, lower the snubbing blocks. All levers should work freely and all seat and draft connections should be tight. Draft connections, if badly worn, should be renewed. Before storing, the disc harrow should be thoroughly cleaned, the discs greased with a heavy grease, wooden parts painted and the implement should be placed on a wooden foundation to keep it dry.

CARE OF MOWERS.

The life of all mowing, reaping and binding machines can be prolonged and greater efficiency secured if proper care is taken of them. The right time for overhauling these machines is during their period of inactivity and before the rush of spring work. If the job is put off too long, the troubles encountered in operation will be forgotten and the same difficulty met with again the next season.

At the end of the season's work with any machine, it is a good plan to make out a schedule of needed repairs and adjustments for that particular machine and file it in a convenient place until the opportunity arises for doing the work. The machines should be housed properly and not left in a fence corner where the wooden parts may rot and the metal parts rust. A little rust will cause more damage than a whole season's use.

When putting away, see that the knife bar is left clean and wiped with a greasy rag and stored in a dry place. Also place a block of wood or other support under the mid point of the tongue so that it will not acquire a permanent sag. If stored with the cutter bar in a verticle position, place a block of wood under the shoe to take the weight off the frame. All accumulations of vegetable matter, dirt, grease, etc., should be removed and the bright parts oiled or greased. In overhauling the machine the work should be done where the light is good and where dirt or dampness will not affect the parts removed. In reassembling all worn parts should be renewed, the cutter bar and guards properly aligned, bolts tightened, etc. Bearings should be thoroughly cleaned with kerosene or gasoline, all lost motion taken up, main and countershaft gears adjusted, and all parts of the implement gone over and inspected. Wooden parts should be painted and bright parts greased.

THRESHING MACHINES.

Threshing machine operators should appreciate the necessity of repairing their machines and getting them in thorough operating order before the beginning of the threshing season. But too many of them delay this work until a few days before the run is started, and often many needed repairs are not made and a large amount of unnecessary wastage of grain and consequent financial loss occurs. The loss of time may be even more serious than the loss of grain. If the operator will start the overhauling in time to make all necessary repairs or to get new parts, he will be assured of a machine in good operating condition before going into the field.

Too much care cannot be taken to see that the cylinder is in good shape for threshing. If the teeth are badly worn they should be renewed, and any bent or damaged teeth replaced. All teeth should be tight. All bearings should be thoroughly cleaned and oiled. If the shaft is scored the rough corrugations should be smoothed down with a fine file. If it is necessary to replace many of the teeth, the cylinder should be taken out of the machine and balanced. This is necessary to insure smooth and quiet running and to prevent uneven wear on the bearings. To balance the cylinder a pair of strong, rigid sawhorses should be used and a piece of smooth steel fastened edgewise, by means of blocks, to the top of each horse. This piece of steel should be at least twelve inches long to allow the cylinder to roll. Set the sawhorses far enough apart and parallel to each other, so that the cylinder will swing between them with the ends of the shaft resting on the steel plates. Before placing the cylinder the horses should be leveled both ways until the tops of the plates are exactly level, then place the cylinder and allow it to turn until it comes to rest. Make a mark on the topmost tooth and roll the cylinder over and again allow it to come to rest. Note the position of the marked tooth. If it is the same as before, it will indicate that the opposite side is heavy. To counter-balance this either put new teeth in on the light side until the cylinder is balanced, or if new teeth are unnecessary, balance by driving wedges under the bands, preferably under the center band. To be in perfect balance the cylinder should come to rest at any point.

Concave teeth should be inspected as well as cylinder teeth. All those badly worn or damaged should be replaced. Loose teeth should be driven firmly in place and tightened.

Inspect the grates and see that the bolts holding the sections together are tight, that the spacers are all in place and the bars straight. Bent bars should be straightened.

A careful inspection of the feeder should be made, as good threshing cannot be done if this part of the machine is not working well. Too heavy feeding causes the grain to be carried over and too light feeding is unprofitable because it does not get the maximum output from the machine.

If the machine is equipped with a chain rake or raddle see that the bearings are in good shape and that the slats and chains are in good condition. Any broken or damaged slats should be replaced with new ones.

INSPECT THE BEARINGS.

Beater bearings should be in good condition. See that the beater is centered in the machine and that the keys or set screws are firmly in place. If the beater is faced with metal, there should be no rough edges to catch and wind the straw, and if the blades are of wood, any split or badly worn should be replaced.

Inspect the aprons or curtains to see that they are fastened properly to the roof of the machine. If canvas curtains are used, replace those that are worn.

Broken slats, fingers and fishbacks should be replaced in straw racks or shakers, and the grain pan or conveyor should be inspected to see if in good condition and works freely in the separator frame. If of wood, broken slats should be removed and if of metal it should fit tight on the frame.

All sieves or screens should be inspected to see if the frames are in good condition and not warped, and that the corner clamps and wear plates are tight. If the screens are worn or rusted they should be replaced. The fan housing should be gone over to see if it is rusted through or wooden slats missing. The trucks and frames, weigher and bagger, pulleys and all portions of the separator should receive careful attention and all adjustments and replacements made before the machine goes into operation. If this is done more efficient service will be secured and a longer life can be enjoyed by the equipment.

SEED EXPORTS NOW EXCEED THE IMPORTS.

California this year will export more seed than the State imports, owing to the increased production of seeds, chiefly in Southern California. Before the war the greater part of the beet, carrot, spinach and radish seed was imported from Germany, France and England. Now it is raised here.

The crop of garden beet seed is now being harvested in Orange county, and will average 650 pounds to the acre, it is estimated. Sugar beet seed is being produced, but larger production awaits lower labor costs. Onion seed raising in the Coachella and Imperial valleys is growing to an important industry. The output this year will be about 350 pounds to the acre.

Early fall is an excellent time for planting a patch of barley in your garden for consumption by fowls.

TRI-COUNTY WATER PLAN TAKING SHAPE.

PERRIS.—Gathered at a mass meeting held in the assembly hall of the Val Verde school, the farmers of the Perris and Val Verde districts recently voted unanimously to take an active part in the organization of the proposed tri-county water conservation district, which has for its purpose the cooperation of the districts in the counties of Riverside, Orange and San Bernardino which lie in the drainage basin of the San Jacinto and Santa Ana rivers in conservation efforts. By a unanimous vote it was decided to send two delegates, one from Perris and one from Nuevo, to attend the meeting to be held at Anaheim, October 9, where the first steps will be taken towards the organization of the district.

That such a move has been long advisable has been recognized by everyone in the settled portions of the three counties. For some years with few exceptions the water table has been slowly lowering, necessitating the sinking of deeper and more numerous wells. It is the general feeling expressed at the meeting that instead of sinking deeper wells, which would only provide temporary relief, a more ample water supply must be found. This can be done in three ways, first by the system of check dams which has proven so successful in Los Angeles county, by distributing the surplus waters of the canyons on the debris cone at the points where the streams emerge from the mountains, and by the erection of reservoirs in the mountains and a surface irrigation system.

The meeting which is to be held at Anaheim will act under the new law passed by the last Legislature, which for the first time permits parts of counties having a river basin in common to act together legally for the purpose of developing and preserving the water supply. The proposed district would include San Bernardino county south of a line running through little Bear Lake and Big Bear Lake and as far east as the Whitewater River shed, would include that portion of Riverside county west of the San Jacinto Mountains, with the exception of the Beaumont-Banning district and the eastern one-third of Orange county.

Under the new law the Supervisors of the three counties, if petitioned by the residents of these counties, are to meet together at a time and place agreed upon and acting together, set the time and place for an election for all the territory to be included in the district. At this election, only those holding land may vote, each acre having one vote. The results of the election will be the selection of a board of nine directors who shall immediately organize and choose an irrigation engineer who shall be in charge of all the work of water development in the district.

The ranchers of the district are enthusiastic over the outlook. They feel that the time is at hand when there will be no more disputes between counties over water rights, and when the lowering of the water table will be definitely checked.

One of the surprises of the meeting was the address of C. E. Tait, United States engineer in charge of water research in this district. He stated plainly that in his opinion, there were many sites in the mountains suitable for reservoirs and said he did not know of any reason why they could not be utilized. In Perris Valley, at least, he said, a surface irrigation system such as exists in the orange country was by no means an impossibility. Moreover in one case, he specifically mentioned an ample water supply could be secured by tapping the stream known as the North Ford, and impounding it in a reservoir. This plan is certain to be considered when the new organization to be known as the Tri-County Water Conservation District is completed.

EGYPTIAN LABORER WORTHY OF HIS HIRE.

Dr. R. H. Forbes, formerly dean of the College of Agriculture of Arizona and now connected with the Societe Sultaniene d'Agriculture of Egypt, writes an interesting letter from Cairo which is quoted from a recent number of the Reclamation Record.

"Egypt is an easy transition from our own Southwest. The climate is generally the same and the crops specifically so; while the Nile and the Colorado belong in the same great family of irrigating rivers. The economic conditions are, however, vastly different. Sand is costly and labor is cheap, being, therefore, abundantly and intensively used in place of machinery, as with us, on the land. It gives one a wrench, though, to see a man cleaning a ditch with nothing but his hands to throw out the mud, or at best a basket with which to carry it out. Just at this time, with high prices for labor (35 cents a day for a good workman) there is an impetus toward the use of machinery, but as yet with very little result. Large ignorant populations move slowly, and the would-be improver of agricultural practice must look very carefully for the lines of easiest understanding along which to work. To begin with, I am introducing the successful varieties we grew in Arizona, of corn, wheat, legumes, etc., for it is a scientific matter to substitute a good seed for a poor one, and the result is conspicuous and easily understood. The first crops were quite satisfactory, and the coming season's work will include additional New World introductions which should add to the list of returns which we are making to the Old World for past contributions to our own prosperity.

"Incidentally, there is still much to learn from even the Egyptians, of more or less direct profit to our own agriculture, and it is very interesting to study out the details of their beautifully close-fitting scheme of agriculture, which has been hammered into shape through so many years."

CHANGE THE OIL IN CRANK CASE OFTEN.

Probably the most vital item in the care of tractors or other motor machines is the necessity for using clean oil at all times. Oil should be kept scrupulously clean and changed often. The particles of metal constantly thrown off in operation by the wearing parts act as emery to produce further wear when mixed with oil.

When the tractor is plowing or engaged in other dusty work, drain the crank case and refill with clean oil every six days of operation. For belt work change every ten days. Keep oil container absolutely airtight to exclude dust. Use the oil to lubricate springs and other outside parts.

WEED SEEDS IN BEAN STRAW.

Many bean ranchers cut morning glory vines with their bean vines, and thus get the obnoxious seeds in their bean straw, says E. S. Kellogg of Santa Barbara. He warns all bean men of a law prohibiting the transportation of bean straw along the roads unless it has been inspected.

GIVING BATTERIES REGULAR ATTENTION.

In order to prolong the life of a storage battery remove the electrolyte if the tractor is not to be used for two weeks or more. All batteries should be stored fully charged.

Be careful about short circuiting. If the insulation in the wiring shows signs of wear, either replace with fresh wire or carefully wind with friction tape. When the battery heats because of short circuiting, the plates are liable to buckle and the life of the battery is shortened. Do not allow the service man to charge your battery too rapidly. The usual rate of charg-

KERN'S CROP REVIEW REVEALS PROGRESS.

BAKERSFIELD.—Kern county's crop review reported by Farm Adviser Myron A. Rice shows this community to be progressing as an agricultural center.

The first carload of Bartlett pears from the Tehachepi Valley, fifty miles southwest of Bakersfield, sold in the eastern markets for $4.33 a box, or $2260 for the carload. Tehachepi has about 3500 acres of pears, the majority of them young trees.

Prices of agricultural products have not changed radically during the past year, the farm adviser reports, good markets and high prices prevailing. Based on the report of the County Assessor the acreage figures are conservative.

The bean acreage has been reduced from 500 last year to 100 this season, owing to the slump in prices at the close of the war, says the farm adviser. The corn crop is up to the average in acreage and value, there being about 20,000 acres. Last year there were 20,000 acres of barley and the acreage has been increased. Sugar beet acreage has been reduced from 5000 acres. Wheat has increased from 20,000 to 50,000 acres and high prices are being obtained. The yield has held up to the usual average.

Alfalfa acreage has grown from 90,000 last year to 100,000 this season, and other hay crops have increased from 15,000 to 20,000 acres. Last year there were about 100 acres of tomatoes, but blight and root worm reduced the acreage this year. Six hundred acres of potatoes were grown last year and there is a slight increase this year as the local demand grows. It is estimated that there are this season 1500 acres of rice and 1100 acres of cotton, with the yield for the latter being about one bale to the acre in some places, the D. L. Wishoh ranch near Lerdo figuring its production on this basis. Cantaloupes and berries have increased in acreage to some extent and the apple crop is increasing as younger trees come into bearing.

FOOD VALUE OF POTATO.

One medium potato gives as much body fuel as two slices of bread and more than one egg. The tissue building material, protein, is present only in slight amount, so that milk, cheese, eggs, fish, and meat, which are rich in protein, are the logical foods to eat with potatoes. However, the small quantity of protein which the potato contains is of an especially valuable kind. Poatoes are rich in the mineral matter necessary to keep the body in condition.

GRIT TO AID DIGESTION.

The hens should have access at all times to a supply of grit or stones of a size small enough to be swallowed readily. Grit is used by the hens to help in grinding in their gizzards the hard grains which they eat. A supply of ordinary gravel will answer the purpose of grit very well. Crushed oyster or clam shell also should be given to the hens and be kept before them at all times. If this is withheld the hens are likely to lack sufficient shell-forming material in their feed, with the result that they lay many soft-shelled or thin-shelled eggs. Grit or shell can be purchased in small quantities at any feed or poultry supply store.

SWAT THE SCRUBS.

Cull out and prepare for market all fowls, old or young, which appear weak, slow, or dull; fowls with drooping tails, rough plumage, or crow-shaped heads; all scrubs except those which have laying points; all hens which molt early; and all males except those strong, vigorous and of a pure type desired for breeding.

BIG CONSERVATION PLAN DISCUSSED.

TULARE.—Proper conservation of the water at present allowed to go to waste from the Sacramento River and its tributaries would mean the reclamation of not less than 7,500,000 acres of land now practically worthless, in the opinion of reclamation engineers and water appropriators, who attended the recent two-day water congress held in Tulare at the call of the Tulare Board of Trade.

As the outcome of the conference, the San Joaquin Valley Water Users' Association was formed; plans for a permanent organization of wide scope were adopted and a determination was reached to obtain State and Federal aid, if possible, in the prosecution of a valley-wide irrigation system.

Officers chosen were William Glass of Fresno, president; M. C. Zumwalt and J. T. Crowe, secretaries, with the following county vice-presidents: Herman T. Miller, Kern; C. W. Cleary, Tulare; A. H. Johnson, Kings; W. C. KeHain, Stanislaus; Alexander Gordon, Fresno; A. C. Folger, Sacramento. A committee on permanent organization, charged with extension of the membership to include all water interests of the valley and to arrange for further conferences from time to time as the need would be indicated, includes C. A. Barlow, Bakersfield; W. R. Long, Hanford; A. E. Miot, Visalia; L. L. Dennett, Modesto; and A. E. Poore, Merced.

Several resolutions adopted during the closing sessions embody the final judgment of the delegates after an extended discussion which included every legal and economic aspect of the plans. These provide essentially:

First—Every possible conservation should be devised for the streams of the valley proper and measures should be taken for augmenting this supply with proper storage and diversion of the annual run-off from the Sacramento, now going to waste, and estimated to equal at least an average of 21,000,000 annual acre feet.

Second—That a comprehensive survey be ordered of all resources to determine accurately their ultimate capacity.

Third—That the members oppose any and all efforts to divert water from the San Joaquin Valley as is now proposed by the East Bay Water Commission at Oakland.

Fourth—That legislation be enacted which will make possible the utilization of all underground supplies of water which may require power for their development.

A. E. Chandler of San Francisco, a member of the State Reclamation Board, declared during the course of the conference that any plan which involved investigation of the Sacramento water shed as a source of water supply for the San Joaquin Valley would be a waste of money. Mr. Chandler added that there is danger of water shortage in the Sacramento delta in a late season and that in his judgment there is no large surplus for diversion. He also contended that the proposal as outlined would be a State project and one for consideration solely by his commission. He advised that the irrigationists assembled devote their consideration to plans for conservation of water over the territory from the Kings River on the north to the Kern on the south.

P. M. Narboe, member of the State Engineering Department of San Francisco, presented a detailed statement showing the irrigable acreage of California and the amount of available water, declaring it is a physical impossibility to apply all the water to the arid land.

Frank Adams of the University Farm at Davis gave a detailed statement as to demands for water, giving it as his opinion that a great deal [illegible] much water is used in some localities and wasted in others, maintaining that wide education on irrigation practice is necessary.

In a lengthy address delivered by L. L. Dennett of Modesto he asked the conference to take some action looking toward complete revision of the California irrigation laws, which he said are antiquated and entirely unsuited to present conditions.

Among those in attendance were:

For the State Water Commission: Frank Adams, W. W. Atwater and A. E. Chandler.

For the Railroad Commission: C. H. Loveland, L. S. Reedley.

Los Angeles: E. R. Davis, A. W. Charles, J. R. Barre, F. H. Olmsted, W. M. Martzell, C. M. Stokes and Charles Fox.

Members of the organization committee announced at the close of the meeting that their first efforts would be directed toward securing in the membership all the individual water claimants from streams of the San Joaquin Valley, officials of ditch and irrigation companies, and of power corporations. When this membership has been sufficiently extended it is the purpose of the organization officials to call a further series of meetings in which it is proposed to adopt a constructive programme and start work at once.

SUGAR HARVEST TO BE GREATER THAN USUAL.

The sugar season of 1919-20 begins with a forecast of production of about 1,108,000 short tons, made by the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, or about 73,500 tons more than the average of the preceding six years, during which time the total of the two crops of beet and cane sugar has slightly exceeded 1,000,000 tons every year except in 1914-15.

The beet-sugar forecast for this year is higher than the record crop of 1915-16 by nearly 75,000 tons and is above the average of the preceding six years by about 169,000 tons, but the cane-sugar crop of this year is forecast at only 159,069 tons, compared with which is the average of about 254,500 tons of the preceding six years. During many years the cane-sugar crop of only 1915-16 has been lower and of only 1912-13 has been nearly as well. The low prospects of this year's crop, at the date of July 1, are due to a wet, cool spring and to a somewhat low acreage. In recent years cane sugar has usually been about one-quarter of the total of cane and beet sugar produced in contiguous United States, but this year the prospect is that it will be only about one-seventh.

The area planted to sugar beets this year is the largest one on record and, it is estimated, reaches 890,400 acres, or 200,700 acres more than last year and 83,800 acres more than the largest previous area in 1917.

PRUNING EXPLAINED.

PASADENA.—One of the largest gatherings of fruit growers in months attended the recent orange pruning demonstration conducted by County Farm Adviser Robert W. Hodgson at the La Canada avenue orange orchard of W. M. Eason. The demonstration, which was held under the auspices of the Pasadena center of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, attracted nearly a hundred and fifty citrus growers. After a lecture explaining the principles on which he bases his system of pruning Mr. Hodgson pruned a couple of bearing navel and Valencia trees, answering many questions as he proceeded. He condemned sucker wood not so much for its poor bearing qualities as for its physical weakness and undesirable nature for building up the tree. Keeping the tree reasonably open to light to encourage inside fruiting was strongly advocated, but this, he said, should preferably be done by a judicious thinning out of the outer shell of foliage rather than by opening up "gores" or holes in the tree. Such a system was stated to keep down to a minimum the amount of dead brush in the tree, the removal of which takes so much time and effort when it becomes very prevalent. Severe or heavy pruning of citrus trees was condemned as injurious. "A citrus tree can be starved to death more quickly by severe pruning than by withholding fertilizers," declared Mr. Hodgson. A light-to-moderate annual pruning, together with the removal of suckers and water sprouts at all times, was offered as a rational pruning programme for the navel. The Valencia was explained to have a more vigorous and upright habit of growth and therefore to be more apt to make weak framework formation with the resultant necessity of bracing and propping.

A GOOD OPERATOR.

Do not engage an operator unless he thoroughly understands your tractor or you are willing that he should spend several days studying it before operating the machine. Tractors vary widely in construction and the care of individual machines is as diverse. Provide the operator with a good set of tools.

ARIZONA CROPS AHEAD.

L. M. Harrison, Federal Crop Estimator, has issued a report covering Arizona crop conditions. He states that the farm production of Arizona this year will total in value $47,000,000, compared with $42,000,000 last year, a total almost equal to the production in Imperial Valley, which this year reaches the fifty million mark.

LESS ALFALFA SEED.

A seemingly authentic report states that the crop of alfalfa seed this year in the United States will be one-third less than that of last year. The California crop will be 25 per cent. less than the 1918 crop. California and Yuma project seed commanded a premium this year on account of early maturity and delivery.

GROWERS' EXCHANGE REPORTS HIGH VALUE.

The value of the citrus fruits marketed in California for the year ending August 31 was greater than the monetary total of any other year, according to a report made by G. Harold Powell, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. The total amount received by the growers was $75,600,000. During the season of 1916-1917, when the record crop of 53,830 cars were marketed, the growers received $47,675,000.

There were 35,778 cars of oranges and grapefruit shipped during the year ending August 31, and 9914 of lemons. Although the total cars of oranges and grapefruit have been exceeded in number during six previous seasons, the output of lemons was nearly 2000 cars greater than the best previous year.

CHESTNUTS DO WELL IN THIS SECTION.

Is the growing of the sweet chestnut to be one of Southern California's coming industries? A branch of chestnut burrs brought into the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce from one of the trees on Chestnut avenue, Santa Ana, suggests a future crop for the State which may some day rival the walnut output.

According to Guy E. Mitchell of Washington, D. C., who visited this chestnut grove recently with D. W. McDannald of Orange county, the chestnut of the Eastern United States is threatened with extinction. Tens of thousands of acres of chestnut timber are being devastated annually by the chestnut blight, which jumps from State to State with veritable seven-league boots, and there is no known cure for it.

The eastern lumber market is flooded with chestnut timber from dead trees which is selling for little more than half the price of oak. Ten or fifteen years from now there will remain practically no forests of the native American sweet chestnut, a nut which is dear to every easterner and of incomparable sweetness and flavor. The few chestnut trees of the Paragon, Spanish or Italian types in Southern California appear to be wonderful producers. The trees from which the branch in the photograph was taken have beaten the walnuts which they border and are loaded with nuts, indicating that the chestnut is thoroughly at home in Southern California. The chestnut blight has not yet crossed the Rocky Mountains and probably will not, so that it would seem that in a very few years the Pacific Coast would have a monopoly of American-grown chestnuts, the only competitor being the imported Spanish and Italian nuts. In Italy the chestnut is an important food.

EGYPTIAN SHIPMENTS OF LONG STAPLE FIBER.

"The following statistics on the movement of Egyptian cotton have been taken from the report of the American Vice-Consul in charge at Alexandria, Egypt, to the Department of State, dated May 24, 1919:

"The Ministry of Agriculture of Egypt has announced the formation of a Cotton Research Board with a view to assisting cultivators to improve the quality and yield of cotton grown in Egypt and to reduce losses due to pest and other causes.

"The Cotton Control Commission will cease to function from July 31, 1919. All further obligations to tender cotton to the commission will come to an end.

"Cotton movements during the month of April as shown in the weekly returns of the Alexandria General Produce Association were: Arrivals in Alexandria from the interior of 6468 bales as opposed to 57,017 bales for March, 1919. Exports to England 13,624 bales and to the continent 15,563 bales. Stocks on hand available for shipment on April 25 amounted to 558,730 bales."

GREEN BONE FOR HENS.

Green cut bone can often be purchased from the butcher. This material when procured fresh makes an excellent substitute for beef scrap. It should be purchased in small quantities, as it can not be kept fresh for any length of time and when spoiled may cause severe bowel trouble. It is best fed in a trough not oftener than every other day, allowing about one-half ounce per bird. Should severe or continued looseness of the bowels follow the feeding of green bone it should be discontinued or the quantity reduced.

CARE OF SQUABS.

Pigeon eggs are usually fertile if the pigeons are healthy and properly fed, especially when they have free range. One squab (usually the male) frequently hatches first, and where there are several cases where one squab outgrows its nest mate, it may be advisable to sort the squabs in the nests, making the pairs as uniform as possible in size and age. If the parent birds die, the squabs may sometimes be removed to a nest where there is only one squab, or they may be fed artificially, although this process takes considerable time.

GRASS COVER FOR HAY.

A thick covering, about four inches, of wild grass, Sudan grass, or fine sorghum makes an excellent covering for a hay stack, afterwards placing long poles over the stack and securing the ends by weights. Where the hay is stacked outdoors in oblong ricks, a good cover may be made by lapping one inch boards twelve inches wide over one another on top, wiring them together.

A MISSION GARDEN.

Where once the padres walked in days gone by,
At peace within this quiet, cool retreat,
The great white seagulls circling far and high,
The ocean coming, going at their feet,
Is silence now.

The roses bloom and die
With but the soft salt breeze to breathe their sweet.
On crumbled wall the lizard basks in heat,
And far away, and clear, the curlews cry.

Enter. The spell of time is over all.
What wonder if beneath the palm trees tall
A shadowy form is seen, a footfall heard,
Or breathes again at dusk some whispered word
From out of the Old World past? The Padre's sleep
Beneath the arches gray, is calm and deep.

GUSSIE PACKARD DUBOIS.

America Safe.

IT IS safe to say that not more than one out of every 1000 American boys who went to the war returned home enamored of military life. Their big idea was to do the work that was cut out for them, and then to get back home to stay.

There is more in this fact than you might think. For, it does not only mean that American boys are fond of their homes. It means also that fooling around with guns, wearing uniforms and shooting up some other nation is the last thing in the world they care to do.

Now, if on the other hand, after they had had a taste of war and of victory, these boys came home dissatisfied with home and hungering for adventure and more fighting, we might well fear for the future. It would mean that blood-lust and the lust of conquest had taken possession of America. And that would mean grief and disaster for the whole world.

But in view of what has happened, no one need worry over the future of this nation. It need fear nothing either from within or from without. We know now that we are not only a strong race, but that we are as well a home-loving and a peace-loving race.

And that is the kind of a race that God intended there should some time be on the face of this earth.

The Arizona Kid.

THERE was a news item in the papers a few weeks ago concerning an Arizona banker, 81 years of age, who ran 200 yards on the beach at Santa Monica every morning while spending a vacation there; besides which he took a big swim in the ocean every day; and also he danced two-steps and mazurkas in the evening on the pier with his 10-year-old daughter.

Just get all that into your cranium, and you will be compelled to admit that this gay youngster from the hot spots is, as the saying goes, "some kid."

Between Dr. Harry Brook and this end of this magazine, we have been and still continue to be engaged in the propaganda of youth. We, ourself, and Dr. Brook, are pleased to hold up this Arizona man to view as a living proof of our contentions that a man who is old at any stage of life has only himself to blame.

Dr. Brook contends that it is simply a question of the condition of the colon; while we, on our part, contend that it is more a question of the period.

But, what are a few punctuation marks, between friends?

This Arizona man doesn't use periods in his business. He goes right on. A period is a stop, as everybody knows, and this 81 year-old kid from down in the Salt River Valley never stops. It is a mistake to stop.

Also he smokes to beat the band. It is astounding how many men and women live to be a hundred and over because they have been good smokers.

We suppose the anti-cigarette league will jump us for saying that. But Dr. Brook and "we" speak of a pipe, a stogie or a cigar, when we mean smoke.

Anyway, let's all pattern after the Arizona kid.

Appearances.

APPEARANCES are deceiving. This has often been said before, but it can do no harm to say it again. A good thing can't be said too often.

We should certainly never judge anybody or any thing by appearances. If we do we are sure to be frequently misled. And the sooner we all get this fact firmly anchored in the estuaries of our minds the better we will be off.

The most loathsome looking thing we can imagine is an oyster. It is said that the first man who ate an oyster was a brave man, and so he was. An oyster is a positively disgusting thing as far as its looks are concerned, and yet it is exceedingly edible and pleasant to the taste when eaten, even raw.

There is no more beautiful animal, on the other hand, as far as looks go, than the common American skunk. But, you don't want to go any farther than its looks. Just one little skunk, single-handed and alone, routed a whole block of millionaires out of their palatial mansions in Santa Barbara not more than two weeks ago.

And if you take men for it, you can go less on appearances with them than with skunks or oysters.

We knew a man who could make $5000 a week in the movies, easy, if he cared to do so, playing anarchist and Bolshevik parts. His very whiskers alone would scare you to death. He is as big as a mountain, nearly. But, there ain't a milder man on earth. He is as gentle as a kitten, and kind. He wouldn't harm a fly. His wife bosses him around and makes him stay home nights. She even forced him to vote the temperance ticket last year.

So, you see, there is absolutely nothing in appearances. Beauty itself is only skin deep. And a man may have a Ford flivver and still stand a chance to go to heaven when he dies.

Life's Hypocrisy.

LIFE, as we civilized beings live it, is one vast hypocrisy. And it would all be inexpressibly pathetic were it not for the fact that it is so splendid.

How often it is that a smile but masks an aching heart; how often the cheery word hides despair. Very brave, indeed, is this hypocrisy of life.

You will meet a man on the street and say, "How are things going with you?" And he will say "Fine." You will meet a woman and ask, "How are you feeling?" And she will say "Fine." And, as likely as not, things are not going well at all with the man. And the woman feels any way but well.

Yet they hide their fears, their worries, their disappointments, their mental and physical sufferings from the eyes of those whom they meet and with whom they associate in life.

Women are the bravest. How many a woman there is who has a bad husband or a bad son, yet who never whines about it. They smile though their hearts are breaking. They make themselves look well though they may be seldom well. It is a fine bravado, is it not? How gloomy and grouchy the world would be were it not for this hypocrisy.

It is a thing that makes us take our hat off to the average man and woman. In the face of it, the soldier on the battlefield is not so worthy of his laurel wreath as these folks are who trudge the commonplace walks of the world.

We think it will be very interesting on the Day of Judgment when we are all lined up in the open and each man sees what the other man had to contend against, and how he bore it, and hear what God will say then.

Not Concerned.

THERE are a number of people in the world whom the high cost of living in nowise concerns. You might think that it concerns everybody, but this is not the case.

The high cost of living does not concern the man who has so much money that he doesn't know what to do with it. It doesn't concern the young man who has a rich father. It doesn't concern porch-climbers, burglars, boot-leggers or pawnbrokers.

Also it does not concern the man who has his own little house and a little piece of land around it; who has nine bean rows and a hive for the honey bee; four laying hens and a rooster, blackberry bushes, grape vines, a couple of walnut trees, some Belgian hares, one wife and six or seven children, and a job.

That fellow doesn't care a whoop if they boost the cost of living ten times higher than it is now. And maybe that's just what they will do.

To Get Together.

WHAT is wanted all over the world at the present time, and particularly in America, is a better understanding between the man who tills the soil in the country and the man who works in a factory in the town or city.

And, after that is accomplished, there should be an understanding as to what is to be done with the man who doesn't work anywhere.

It seems to us to be clear that the factory man and the farmer man are chasing each other around in circles, instead of cutting straight across the circles and meeting each other face to face. There is so much theoretical talk by so-called "economists," college professors and, worse than all, politicians, that we will never get anywhere unless something be done to make these persons shut up and give the world a rest from their perpetual-motion jaws.

You can reduce the whole idea of the day's work down to this simple principle, that if the man in the factory will work to make things that the man in the country needs and can't grow on corn stalks and bean bushes, why, then the man in the country will plow up ground and plant it to rutabagas and things and take them to town so that the man in the factory will have something to eat.

Is there anything else to the whole thing except that? Would there be any trouble whatever in the world if these two principals in the world's business were to get together and thoroughly understand each other?

Of course this will make the big-talk persons laugh. But, it is for us to laugh at them, and we would do so were it not for the fact that they are mussing and mixing things up so that nobody knows where he is at, anymore.

Some day, as sure as you are a foot high, all this bunk and foolery will be put to an end.

Whoa!

SOME one should take it on himself to holler "whoa" to the prohibitionists before another moment is lost.

They are headed now for Europe to make England, France, Italy and Germany "dry." They are advancing on the theory that they must have new worlds to conquer. They think they have made America dry, and that they will die of "ongwee" unless they have more work to do.

But they haven't made America dry. This country is about as dry as a day in Seattle during the rainy season, if anybody should ask you. It is not only as easy to get a drink in this country now as it was before, but it is a whole lot easier. Before the country went dry you had to hunt up a saloon to get a drink. Now you can get it right in your own house, or the house next door.

The papers are filled with advertisements to inform the simplest-minded person in the world how to make his own Dutch courage and conversation water. The public has learned to take a bottle of Bevo, put two raisins in it, and have a drink that makes the old-fashioned, ordinary rye whisky taste like soda pop in comparison. One thousand and one recipes are on the market, any one of which will enable any man, or any woman for that matter, to make his or her own wine, beer, whisky and cocktails and gin fizzes as easily as rolling off a log.

We have never been invited so often and so generously to take a drink for the past forty years, as now. Stuff with the kick and the punch to it, too, mind you.

So, why are the prohibitionists running off to Europe? we would like to ask. They would better get somebody to hold on to their coat-tails and keep them at home.

No Pay.

MANY poets have complained to us because newspapers do not pay for poetry.

Really, we do not think that poets should ask pay, any more than someone should ask pay for sunshine, rain, the dew of the morning, starlight or the moon.

For, all that those things are to the body, poetry is to the soul. Poetry, like virtue, should be its own reward. Moreover, there is an old maxim which says "Poets are born, not paid."

A Solution.

MEXICO appears to furnish a most exasperating problem at the present time. It is a country infested with robbers, murderers and outlaws. The life of a decent man there seems always in danger, and his purse always at stake.

The question is, what can be done? Well, we think we can offer a valuable suggestion.

Send to Mexico a horde of residents of our big cities and let them take the situation in hand. They have had all the experience necessary. They have been held up, beaten and robbed so much, so beset with burglars and porch climbers, that Mexico would look like home to them.

The way to straighten out Mexico is to populate it with folks from the cities of the United States.

Is China to be Dominant Power?

573 Chinese women of the upper classes committed suicide rather than endure the indignities they suffered.

Marshal-General Von Waldersee took supreme command in obtaining reparation. Russia withdrew for her own reasons. There were the usual exactions including $630,000,000 indemnities. A number of the missionaries refused to accept their share and the United States arranged for its share to go to the education of the youth of China.

Russia had withdrawn with the purpose of occupying Manchuria, and there was a terrible massacre of Chinese on the Amur in reprisal for an attack made by Chinese on some Cossack troops. Thousands of men, women and children were driven at the bayonet's point into the river. The protests of Japan, Great Britain and the United States secured the promise of evacuation, but as there was no intention manifest of fulfilling the promise Japan, seeing she was to be shut out from the mainland, attacked the Russians and so began the war which lasted two years (1904-5.) Japan succeeded to the privileges of Russia in the Liao-tung Peninsula, and Korea came under the direct rule of Japan.

America Introduces the "Open Door" Policy.

BUT a new force had begun to work; America had moved over to the Philippines. While the Boxers were preparing to clear China of foreigners, Secretary John Hay (September 6, 1899) communicated with the interested powers, notifying them of the desire of the United States relative to the "open door" policy and asking their co-operation in the maintenance of the integrity of China. All the nations replied favorably and on March 20, 1900, Col. Hay was able to notify the United States representatives abroad that the powers addressed had accepted and that he would consider their consent definite and final. China didn't "break-up."

The Manchu government had awakened to the need of advancement and many reforms were being effected; but the reformers were counting without Sun Yat Sen, a highly educated and much-traveled man, who was thoroughly out of sympathy with the Manchus and whose war cry was "The old monarchy must transform itself into a republic."

When it came, it came all at once; the immediate cause being a railroad strike, due to the fear that the Four Power loan would lead to foreign political control. The strike led to the movement of troops, and this to the rising against the Manchus. The almost bloodless revolution brought the 267 years of Manchu rule to an end February 12, 1912. The oldest monarchy of the world became the new Chinese republic, with Yuan Shih Kai as its first President.

We have but to compare China with Russia, and recall the horrors and bloodshed France experienced in effecting the change in its government, to realize that China has made a tremendous stand to maintain and consolidate a republican form of government in the face of all the difficulties in the way.

Every Country Has an "Interest" in China.

A RECENT "sphere of influence" map of China shows only a small fraction of the country that is not in the "sphere" or the "desired sphere" of some foreign nation—Japanese, British, French, Russian—though since the collapse of Russia her "sphere" has been given up by the Bolsheviki. Until the present time British interests have dominated the Far East.

Foreign garrisons are stationed at each strategic point. China's railroads are largely controlled by these foreign nations, Japan taking the place of Russia. It follows that the mines, the timber and the vast resources of China generally are in the hands of the railroads. There is no unity, either in administration or finance. Each works for itself, against the others, and to the detriment of China. The military element tends to monopolize the roads and establish the bully's rule to the exclusion of civil authority. This has already happened in Shantung, where the Japanese have usurped great authority.

The powers that have been exploiting China have little interest in her success, much interest in her failure. It has been said that the only nation that could hurt China that hasn't done it is America.

China is a money-making nation. No wonder, with the indemnities and the attitude of the remorseless foreigners that permeate the empire, that her currency and her credit is low. When she sought a large loan from foreign powers it is publicly stated that she was fleeced by the banks, to the decided profit of themselves.

And above all else she has been beset by Japan, who aims at all costs to prevent the success of the new government and by peaceful penetration to conquer the country. It has been suggested that Japan is the proper nation to dominate China, to the benefit of both. As well expect an Orangeman and Catholic to dwell together in peace and harmony. Never in their history have the Japanese and Chinese been friends.

Japan has introduced every obstacle possible to China's success, and every principle that was fought for in France is at stake in China. Putnam Weale is authority for the statement that at all ports where Japanese commissioners of maritime customs hold office, opium and its derivatives are being so openly smuggled that the annual net import is said to be something like twenty tons a year.

The Japanese Derive an Immense Revenue From Opium.

AT TSING-TAO it has been proved beyond doubt that since Japanese military occupation opium has been introduced as military stores on such an immense scale as to give the authorities a royalty of several million pounds sterling, with which immense tracts of land around Kiao-Chow Bay have been purchased; so that no matter what the peace treaty may say, Japan will be in absolute control of this outlet to a crowded "back country" and thus secure commercial supremacy for all time. We are told by the same authority that Japanese peddlers by the thousands roam over the land retailing great quantities of morphia and opium in defiance of the law.

China's greatest industrial enterprise, the Han Yang iron and steel works in the center of China, is in the grip of Japan through the forced treaty of 1915, not to mention many other mineral, coal and timber resources.

Patient, plodding, long-suffering China! More than any other nation she has turned the other cheek—has followed the doctrine of non-resistance. Peace, not war, is the policy of China. Yet it must be remembered that this Quaker of nations has the blood of the Mongol and the Manchu in her veins and can fight if she must; but woe to the nation that forces China to learn modern warfare. A writer in touch with affairs says "the Japanese Korean policy toward China has nothing to offer Japan except unhatched hell in some hour of the world's tomorrow." China represents a fourth of the population of the world. Some one has figured out that if the Chinese should begin passing a given point, one at a time, before the first generation has passed the second would be in line, and the procession would never end.

China is Awake and Calmly Watching.

THAT China did not sign the peace treaty indicates that in her calm, imperturbable way, she is awake and on the job. One of the great speeches of the Peace Conference was delivered by Wellington Koo, a Chinaman. China won the respect of the world by her representation there, and her leadership came from three men who learned the science of world politics in American schools: Dr. Wellington Koo of Columbia, Dr. C. T. Wang of Yale and Mr. Alfred Sze of Cornell. These men ask three things for China: Territorial integrity, political independence and economic independence.

Given half a chance young China will make herself an honored place in the new fraternity of nations, that has for its rallying cry, not "Might makes Right," but "Do unto others as ye should that they should do to you."

An amateur authoress who had submitted a story to a magazine, after waiting several weeks without hearing from the editor concerning it, finally sent him a note requesting an early decision, as she stated "she had other irons in the fire."

Shortly after came the editor's reply: "Dear Madame: I have read your story and I should advise you to put it with the other irons."—[Punch.

THE BO'SUN

BY ALBERT HOUGHTON.

IT'S A LONG step from Libau, Russia, to Savannah, Ga., but that's where we met again, the boatswain and I.

He was not the boatswain then, but a common seaman on an English tramp, quite a fall from boatswain of a British bark to seaman on a tramp steamship, but a sailor's life is nothing but a series of ups and downs anyway, and he deserved all the downs he could get—but I'm getting ahead of my story.

One morning at 4 o'clock I was awakened by someone shaking my leg vigorously, then a voice gruffly said,

"Be you a sailor man?"

I replied that I was.

The voice continued:

"There be a ship here what's going to sail soon and they needs one more sailor before they can get their clearance papers, and I seen you crawlin' under here last night, and thought p'raps you wanted a ship."

I crawled out of my bedchamber, which happened to be one of the large coal cranes on the wharf in Blyth, England. I had been "on the beach" for a fortnight, and had heretofore walked the streets at night, and had snatched a few winks in the daytime in the Sailors' Mission. However, the night before I had felt very tired as I had walked twelve miles to North Shields in quest of a ship, there was nothing doing and I had to walk back to Blyth.

Arriving there I went down to the wharf. It was already dusk. I was gazing around for a place to rest when my eyes fell on a crane which was busily engaged in loading coal on an old windjammer. I casually strolled over to it and was watching the colliers at work, when I noticed that there was about two feet of space between the bottom of the crane and the wharf. That would make a fine bed I thought. I stooped down and looked beneath the crane; it was just as I anticipated; the wharf under the crane was full of coal. The sight of that coal was too much for me, I could already feel it's glossy softness beneath me. I gazed cautiously about. No one seemed to be looking so I quickly and stealthily crawled under. I stretched luxuriously, yawned a few times, and then went to sleep, my blissful repose being unbroken, until the shaking, of which I've already told you.

Springing blithely to my feet, I saw before me a collier.

I said:

"Where is the ship?"

He pointed with his thumb. I thanked him, indeed as I look back, it's a wonder that I didn't kiss him. A "ship" how fine that sounded, I kept repeating it to myself, "ship, ship." It meant food and sleep, the food would not be edible and the sleep would not be comfortable, but who cares? I didn't.

I got aboard that ship in a hurry. The first person I bumped into was the mate.

"Do you want a seaman, sir?" I said.

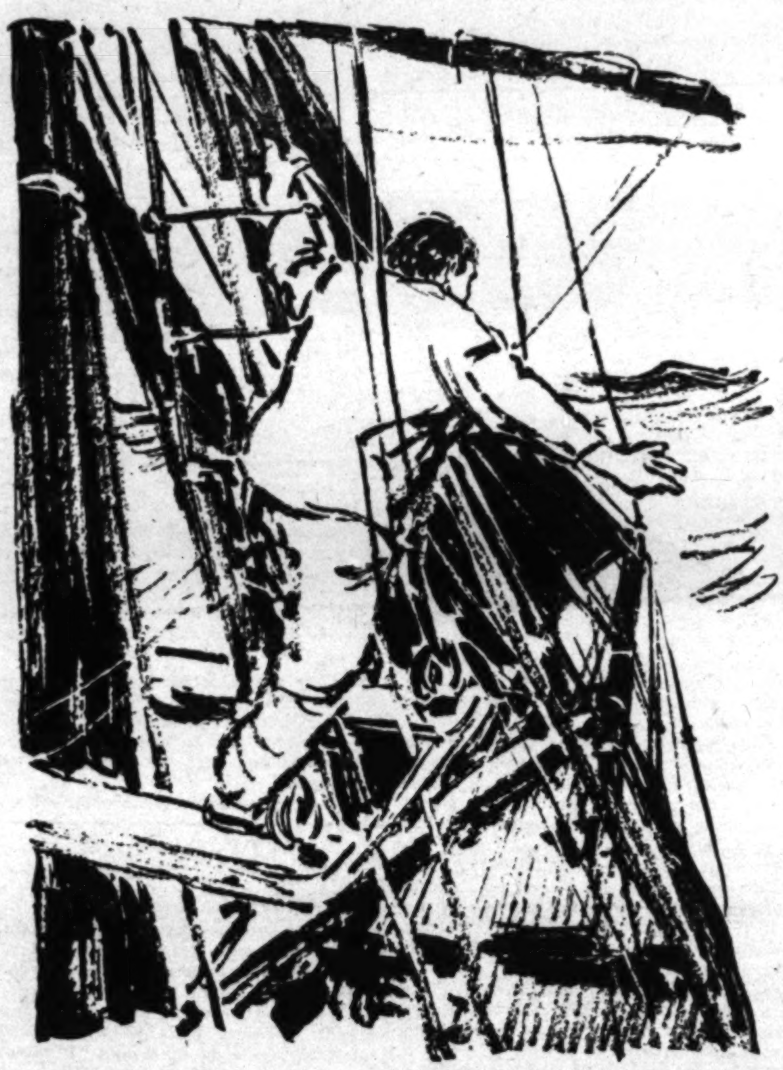
"I certainly do," he replied. He almost ran me aft and into the cabin, got out the shipping articles, which I signed, and I was a member of the crew almost before I knew it.

When I got out on the deck again we were half way out to sea. They certainly didn't waste any time I thought, then I remembered that in the hustle I had forgotten all about my seabag which was reposing in the Seaman's Mission in Blyth. I had no clothes with me except the ones that I was wearing.

"Well," I thought, "I'll resort to the mop-chest." The mop-chest is the stock of sailors' clothing that is carried by the skipper, and it is sold to the sailors at exorbitant prices, the money being deducted when the sailors are paid off. This furnishes the skipper with his booze-money. "When I reach port I'll have no pay coming—but it can't be helped—but they might have given me a chance to get my bag."

In a short time the tugboat cast us off, and we were all busy loosening and setting sail, then snugging the decks, coiling all the cordage, etc. When this was done I was ordered to the wheel by a man with a sour face, I didn't know who he was, but on a deep-water ship one never questions anyone's authority, a little trick one learns very quickly.

In my three years at sea I had seen all sorts of faces, mostly fierce or cruel ones, but an utterly soured one was something new to me. "There indeed," I thought, "is a face that only a mother could love."



As I took the wheel I said to the man whom I relieved:

"Who is that man standing over on the port side by the galley?"

"That's the boatswain," he replied, "you'll know him before the day is over."

With that he went forward, and I promptly forgot them both, the ship steered badly and that kept me busy until my two-hour "trick" had expired. Upon being relieved I went forward and into the forecastle, it being my "watch" below.

Breakfast was on the table. It consisted of oatmeal with no milk and coffee ditto. I swallowed my portion and then gazed around curiously at my shipmates to see if I recognized any of them. I didn't. They were the usual miscellaneous gathering found in a deep-water ship, the hardest kind of men imaginable, still very easy to drive if one knew how. One of them said:

"When did you come aboard? I never saw you before?"

"I made a pier-head jump this morning," I replied "and left all my dunnage ashore."

He merely grinned.

"What ship is this, and where is she bound?" I asked.

"The Beeswing, to Russia with a load of coal for the Russian navy."

Just then a seaman came in with his face all raw and bleeding. He went to his bunk and picked up a bandana with which he proceeded to mop up his face. He sat on a bench beside the bunk and applied some salve. The men looked at each other. Then one spoke up:

"Did he do that, Jensen?"

Jensen nodded. There was a pause. Then another man spoke:

"That's the second man already, and we ain't across the bar yet."

There was another ominous silence and a fingering of sheath-knives. Then at the companionway we heard a snarling voice.

"Jensen, if you ain't up here in one minute I'll bash your damn head in."

Jensen started up and the expression on his battered face was not good to see. We watched him until he disappeared through the companionway.

"Who is putting on all the show," I asked, "is it the mate?"

"No," said one of them, "It's the bo'sun, I don't know how he got the berth, he ain't a sailor, he couldn't ship as ordinary seaman on some ships I've sailed on, yet he comes aboard here and knocks us about when there ain't no reason."

"Yes," chimed in another, "I've sailed with some mean ones in my time, but they was men anyway, and a feller don't mind gettin' knocked down by a man once in a while, I hates even to have that feller put his lamps on me."

"Well," said I, "perhaps someone will get him in the dark some night."

"No fear of that," was the reply, "that feller will be watching hisself all the time and that's risky business anyway. The way shippin' laws is now if they catches a seaman just talkin' back to anyone they puts him in irons and says it's mutiny and then he gets five year in quod for it."

I thought of some of the things I had seen in former ships. The shipping laws were certainly made for the officers and the men had no chance at all.

I said, "Yes, sir, the steering gear has a lot of slack in it and it's hard to hold her on her course."

"What is your course?"

I told him.

"You are a half point off."

I said.

I said, "Yes, sir, the steering gear has a lot of slack in it and it's hard to hold her on her course."

I noticed the mate approaching, so did he. He stepped back a pace and brought the back of his hand against my mouth with as much force as he could, then in a loud bullying voice he yelled,

"I'll teach you to talk back to me."

The mate stepped up.

"What's the matter," he said.

"I just asked him the course, and he started in to lip me sir," said the boatswain.

I was startled at the humble and ingratiating manner in which he spoke to the mate. The mate turned to me and said,

"Don't ever let me hear you talking back to anyone on this ship."

I said, "Aye aye, sir."

And then went forward. When eight bells went and I entered the forecastle the men saw that my lips were swollen, so I said, "Yes, same man did it, he's got the habit by this time and can't stop it."

The next day we had some choppy weather, so I asked the mate if I could get some oilskins from the mop-chest. He took me aft and fitted me out and I wore them that watch on deck. When I went below I hung them on the rack with the rest of the oilskins, and turned in.

Upon being awakened for my watch on deck again I inquired as to the weather.

"Better put your oilskins on, she's still taking on some spray," I was told.

I hurried into my clothing and stepped to the oilskin rack. Mine were not there. They were very easily distinguished as all the rest were black while mine were yellow, and I wondered who could have taken them. Turning around I saw Jensen watching me.

I said, "Who took those yellow oilskins?"

"Bo'sun took 'em."

"Did he say anything about them?"

"No, just walked in and took them."

The next day he knocked down two men who had collided with him while hauling on the braces, and that evening, in the second dog-watch, the man on lookout who was sitting down on the capstan-head, was also knocked down and when he said that he didn't know that he wasn't supposed to sit down and that he had always heretofore done it, he was brutally kicked for insolence.

From that time on the bo'sun was the sole topic of conversation in the forecastle. The men were always sullen, and I missed the inevitable singing with which sailors usually go about their work. Then hauling at the braces or clewing up sail, someone would grunt almost inaudibly instead of the cheery chanty that always accompanied such labor. And always handy, was our friend the boatswain, ready to display some new kind of torture for our benefit. Really, he was a genius at that sort of thing; he seemed to be proficient in all kinds of petty abuse and yet in his attitude towards the officers, he was so disgustingly cringing and

STRONG WALNUTS SWEETENED.

Old walnuts which have become somewhat strong need not be thrown away. Place the meats in a pan. Pour boiling water over them and allow to stand a moment. Drain and leave in the oven until dried off. Such meats can always be utilized in cooking and candies.

METAL WOOL.

A package of metal wool can be bought for 10 cents. A piece kept on the soap dish is invaluable for rubbing off burned or sticking food from pots, pans, dishes or silver. It can be used where pumice stone, sand paper, sapolio or the knife can not as it will not harm aluminum or silver. It is very economical as a small piece pinched off can be used some time before it rusts.

A NEW WAY TO COOK TOMATOES.

When tired of stewed tomatoes with bread in them, try cooking them this way. Fry two sliced tomatoes and one shredded pepper in a tablespoonful of hot fat until the onions are transparent. Add a little chopped parsley and a can of tomatoes or six fresh ones. Cook fifteen minutes or until fresh tomatoes are soft and pulpy.

MARROW BALL FOR SOUP.

Mash the marrow from a raw bone with a silver spoon until very smooth, mix in potato meal until the mixture comes almost clean from the bowl, add two whole eggs, a small piece of soaked matzo, pepper and salt. Boil for about three minutes in the soup.

CHREPSHAS.

Roll out noodle dough rather thick and cut in two inch squares while wet. Chop a portion of cold meat with a little onion, parsley, salt and pepper. Mix in an unbeaten egg and put a teaspoon of the mixture on each square of dough. Fold over in tricorn shape, pressing the edges well together and boil fifteen minutes in the soup.

HOW TO WASH CORDUROY.

Corduroy is a kind of cotton velvet which may be washed providing it is not rubbed, squeezed or ironed. If it is made up at home, stitch the seams with a loose stitch to prevent puckering when washed. Before laundering babies' coats or other lined garments loosen the lining at the bottom to avoid bagging. Use a solution of mild soap, or for dark colors which may streak or fade a solution of soap bark. Souse the garment up and down in a soapy water, changing the water as it becomes soiled. Rinse in several clear waters until no more dirt and soap come out. Hang the garment up dripping wet and so that it will dry in the shape in which it is worn. Dry in the wind if possible. When dry brush briskly to raise the nap.

CHEESE PATTIES AND MACARONI.

Cook one ounce of macaroni in quickly boiling water until tender, drain and cut in small pieces. Put in a pan and mix with it one tablespoonful of cheese, grated, and a little salt and pepper. Line some small patty pans with pie crust and fill with the macaroni mixture, sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese and bake until lightly brown.

COFFEE CUSTARD.

Four tablespoons ground coffee, one quart milk, two-thirds cup sugar, one-half tablespoon cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon salt, four eggs.

Add the ground coffee to the milk, put in a double boiler and scald, keep the lid on during the preparation, strain carefully. Pour the hot liquid over the well-beaten eggs, sugar and cornstarch and salt. Strain and bake in a moderate oven. When puffy on top and firm in the center, the custard is finished.

COFFEE JELLY.

One-half box gelatine or two tablespoons granulated gelatine, two cups strong coffee, one-half cup cold water, one-half cup cocoanut, one-half cup sugar.

Soak gelatine twenty minutes in cold water, dissolve in boiling water, strain, and add to sugar and coffee and cocoanut. Turn into mould, and chill. Serve with sugar and cream.

STUFFED PEPPERS.

Three green peppers, one onion finely chopped, two tablespoons flour, one cup greens finely chopped, three-fourths cup bread crumbs, four tablespoons bacon finely chopped. Salt and pepper.

Cut a slice from stem end of each pepper, remove seeds and parboil pepper fifteen minutes. Fry bacon and onion three minutes; add flour, greens, salt, pepper, and bread crumbs. Cool mixture. Sprinkle peppers with salt, fill with cooked mixture, cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake ten minutes. Serve hot.

TASTY CHEESE RECIPES.

Than cheese there is nothing more nourishing and tasty. Cheese, like all foods in these unaccountable days, is high, but considering its food content is still economical when compared with other viands. The following suggestions may prove a help in warm weather when many people do not relish meat and when fresh cuts are hard to keep.

POTTED CHEESE.

Grate two pounds of American cheese fine, pound to a paste, add gradually five tablespoons of melted butter, a pinch of cayenne, one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce. Pack tightly in small jars covered with melted butter and keep in a cool, dry place.

BAKED POTATOES FOR PICNICS.—One day, while visiting one of the parks, my friend and I opened our baskets and began to make preparations for lunch. "Look," she exclaimed, as she exhibited some well-washed, medium-sized potatoes, "We are to have these baked today; I'll show how you do it." And she picked up a discarded lard bucket, which boasted of a well-fitting lid. I was rather doubtful as she proceeded to pack the potatoes evenly in the bucket. Then she clamped down the lid and placed the vessel between the blazing sticks of our camp fire. In less than three-quarters of an hour, they were done. Clean, moist, perfectly baked and free from troublesome grit and ashes, they proved to be delicious.

In case the vessel used be rather thin, it is always well to place a piece of tin in the bottom where the heat may prove more severe.

Large potatoes may require a full hour, medium-sized three-quarters, and small ones at least half an hour, provided the fire is even and good.

To keep small rugs lying smooth sew a small brass ring on each corner of the rug and slip each over a tack put in the proper place on the floor. This will keep the rug from slipping and stripping, even where there are children running about.

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

The Unexpected Curtails Their Sunday Visit at a London Suburban Home.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, it'll spoil your dinner," protested Helen, urging Warren past a chop house window with an alluring display of cold joints.

"Huh, we may have to sit around and chin for an hour before dinner. I'm hungry—I could do with a snack now. By George, that's real Stilton!" eyeing a mound of cheese.

"It's almost 6 o'clock—it would make us late. Oh, here's our bus!" as a number "34" turned the corner. "Come, let's take it—there's room on top!"

A London bus rarely stops. It only slows up while you run pantingly after. If agile, you climb on; if not, you are an object for the conductor's derisive grin.

Having achieved the first step, Helen, clinging to the railing scrambled to the top, while Warren grumblingly followed.

"It's going to be an ideal ride! We've never been out this way," she glowed, when they were settled in a much-desired front seat. "How far is it?"

"'Bout forty minutes," grumpily. "And I'm not keen on these long bus rides on an empty stomach. Haven't had a thing since breakfast!"

Helen refrained from reminding him that "breakfast" had been a midday meal of four hearty courses—porridge, kipper, bacon and eggs, and marmalade.

As it was Sunday he had insisted on "resting up." A whole morning in bed when they might be seeing Westminster was to Helen a criminal waste of time.

The afternoon he had spent over his check book and letters, and as she would not go out alone, the whole day had seemed lost. And now came the ordeal of dining with strangers—business friends of Warren's.

"Dear, tell me something about them," abruptly. "Have you met her?"

"No, but Grendon's quite a man. Put me in touch with Kent & Tucker—that's worth a whole lot. Now don't be silent and offish—have something to say!"

"It's always so hard for me to talk to strangers."

"Talk about the garden—that's always a safe subject over here. Jove, hope they won't have a late dinner—my 'Little Mary' feels mighty empty."

It was almost an hour's ride, but to Helen it was all too short. She loved the quaint suburban roads, the vine-covered cottages nestling back in well-kept gardens, half hidden by thick box hedges.

"Falstaff Road!" announced Warren. "Here's where we get off."

They climbed down, but it was some time before the bus grudgingly slowed up. As they walked back to Falstaff Road, Warren consulted the envelope on which Mr. Grendon had scribbled the complicated directions.

> No. 34 bus to Falstaff Road. Straight to the top, second turn to the left, third to the right, past the church, then cross the Green, take first turning to the right, straight to the bottom to Ivy Lane—fourth house on the left—'Bramble Lodge.'"

To Helen it seemed hopelessly involved, but Warren's keener sense of direction finally brought them to a gateway with 'Bramble Lodge' on the stone arch.

Up the graveled walk to the front door, where a tap of the highly polished brass knocker summoned a red-cheeked maid. She ushered them through the wide hall to the garden in the back, where the family were assembled.

Wicker chairs, hammocks, and a red-striped awning gave a garden-party atmosphere.

After a series of introductions, a barking fox terrier contributing to the confusion, Helen found herself in a deep willow chair between Mrs. Grendon and her daughter—a pretty girl of 14.

"Down, Jerry, down! Don't let him spoil your dress. He gets so excited over company," apologized Mrs. Grendon.

"Oh, he's a dear! I love dogs—but it's so hard to keep them in New York. Here you have such wonderful gardens," grasping Warren's suggestion.

"It's late now—you should have been here when the sweet peas were out. And the roses did so well this year—that rambler was covered!"

Mrs. Grendon launched on her garden, Helen felt more at ease, but the steady gaze of the young girl grew disconcerting. Every detail of her New York hat, gown and shoes was being minutely inspected.

The bus-top ride had blown her hair. She hoped they would ask her upstairs before dinner. But so far there was no evidence of dinner.

From gardens and gardening she finally steered the conversation to her one long suit—antiques.

"If you're interested in old furniture—I must show you the china cupboard Mr. Grendon just gave me for my birthday."

Helen responded with enthusiasm. The china closet would be in the dining-room and she could judge of the progress of the dinner. She knew that Warren, though seemingly engrossed with Mr. Grendon, was fuming at the delay.

The dining-room was most attractive, but to Helen's amazement the table was bare! Only a bowl of flowers graced its gleaming mahogany surface!

While she admired the china closet, a really fine old Sheraton piece, she tried to grasp the situation. After 7 o'clock and the table not even set! Would Warren's politeness stand the strain?

"There's an interesting old secretaire in the library," Mrs. Grendon suggested.

Helen almost forgot her anxiety about Warren's menacing appetite, in her keen interest in the house. There were many fine old things, but, as in all English homes, every room was cluttered with unessentials.

Every chair had a "tidy," and every door its woolly mat! And rugs! Little rugs over big ones. And bric-a-brac—endless, useless things to dust.

And brass! Andirons, fenders, candlesticks, jardinieres. How the English love brass and the time they spend keeping it polished!

Helen estimated that in this house at least two extra servants must be kept for work that a clearing out of unessentials would easily eliminate.

"Mrs. Curtis, would you like to walk up to Hamford Green?" asked Mr. Grendon, entering from the garden. "We've a very fine view from there."

"Oh, yes, I'd love to," murmured Helen, dismayed at the retreating dinner.

"When in blazes do we eat?" mumbled Warren, as Mrs. Grendon reprimanded the barking terrier who had sensed a walk.

"Hush!" warningly, moving away. "Oh, yes, do let him go! He's so eager."

"He'll be wanting you to throw sticks all the way," laughed Mrs. Grendon.

As they passed out by the dining-room, there was something in the quiet repose of the table and sideboard that brought to Helen a sudden panicky doubt. Was there to be any dinner?

She must make sure. Warren might make some dreadful break!

"It's such an attractive house," she had turned at the gate for a keen survey. "It makes our New York apartments seem so cramped. Is that the kitchen in the wing—where the shades are down?"

"Yes, and the servants' rooms above—quite apart from the house. I'll take you through when we come back—the maids are all out this evening."

Now she knew! But how was she to tell Warren? He was walking ahead with Mr. Grendon.

A passing neighbor, pausing for a moment's chat, gave her a fleeting chance.

"There's to be no dinner!" in a tense whisper, drawing the frisking Jerry close to Warren.

"Eh! What's that?"

"They're not having dinner!" desperately. Then as the Grendon's approached, "Oh, you are the dearest dog!"

She was furious at Warren for staring so dumbly. She covered his stunned silence by throwing sticks for the terrier, who joyously brought them back.

"He could keep that up all day," laughed Mr. Grendon.

Further on an excited encounter with a portly bristling tabby, gave Warren an opportunity for a suppressed,

"How'd you know?"

"Kitchen's closed—table not set! Oh, you wouldn't hurt the poor kitty!"

"We've got to make a getaway!" he hissed. "Frame up something—quick!"

"Why, I thought you were a nice, gentle doggie!"

Jerry's wagging tail acknowledged her blandishments, while he growled belligerently at his escaped prey, now glaring down from a protecting tree.

What excuse could she make? How could they get away without offending the Grendons? Warren would never sit through a long dinnerless evening!

Hamford Green finally reached, the view duly admired, they were starting back when she asked abruptly,

"Dear, did you send that cable?"

"Eh? What cable?" with exasperating obtuseness.

"To Mr.—Mr. Fisher!" stammeringly. "You asked me to remind you."

"Jove, that's so!" with dawning enlightenment. "I forgot all about it!" Then frowning at his watch, "Cable offices close at 10, don't they?"

"On Sundays?" hesitated Mr. Grendon. "I'm not sure they're open at all."

"Some of them must be," with conviction. Then apologetically, "Mighty sorry to have to rush off—but I've got to get that cable through tonight."

Ten minutes later they had caught a returning "34," and were waving good-by to the Grendons, who, effusively regretting their early departure, had taken them to the bus.

"Great Guns, that was a close shave! But why in thunder didn't you cook up something that wouldn't take all that lying?"

"I thought I did very well," hotly, resenting his ingratitude. "I suppose you wanted me to do it all?"

"Well, that's your specialty. I'm not keen on lying." Then explosively, "What was the idea, anyway?" Didn't they invite me for dinner?"

"Evidently not," with increasing resentment.

"But he said dinner! Why he wanted us to come out early and spend the day. I said we couldn't get there before 6 o'clock. What time do they eat, anyway?"

"Probably have Sunday dinner at 2, tea at 5—and nothing after."

"'Nothing after' is good!" growled Warren. "Next time I'll ask 'em when they feed!" Then gloatingly. "Well, here's where we make straight for Scott's—and stoke up! A good thick chop, grilled tomatoes, bubble and squeak, marrow, Stilton—and a pint of half and half! Eh? How does that strike you?"

The Bo'sun.

servile. "A strange mixture," I thought, "and one that will surely bring on mutiny," and that I had no taste for, having seen the effects of them several times.

By this time we were in the Baltic Sea and the elements were assisting friend boatswain to pile on the agony. It rained most of the time and we seemed to be always shipping water. We were laboring under a head wind which struck us at the Skager-racks and which stayed with us like a brother, with its attendant tacking and wearing ship, and loosening and clawing sail.

"Gosh," I reflected, "if there's anything we've missed I'd like to know what it is."

One day the wind freshened to such an extent that we were forced to take in our royals and topgallant sails. After clewing them up Jensen and I went aloft to make them fast. We both tackled the royal and it was done in a trice. We then moved down to the topgallant yard. Before stepping to the footrope Jensen paused a moment.

"Don't it feel good up here?" he said.

I replied, "Yes, it is good to get away from deck for awhile."

"For awhile? I'd like to stay up here for the rest of the trip," he replied, "I wish that I was never to see the deck again."

I glanced at the deck so far beneath us. The bo'sun was waving his arms like a maniac, and I imagined I could hear his voice above the wind and rattle of the rigging. He looked about the size of an ant. The lurching and swaying of the ship was soothing to me—and the foamy specks and icy spray flying across the decks recalled the happier days in the tropics—when the sun was shining and the wind was steady. I came back from my short day dream and looked at Jensen. He was wearing woolen mittens on account of the cold. Several of our shipmates had warned him against wearing them aloft, but he always laughed at them. He had a very pleasant laugh too, with his round and healthy colored face.

He got out on the foot-rope and I followed, then we started to furl the sail. After picking it up we started to make the skin. The ship was lurching pretty badly by that time, the sail was slippery and wet and suddenly his hands slipped. He grabbed the topping-lift but on account of the mittens was unable to grasp it firmly, and he went over backwards.

I was horrified for a second, then yelled as loudly as I could,

"Man overboard," but they had already seen him.

His body turned over lengthways twice before it hit the water and I thought that I could hear the splash.

All the men on deck rushed over to the weather side and stood in a group, looking at the water, then one man detached himself from the group, sprang to the rigging, and made his way aloft. When he got into view I saw it was Russell, an old seaman. I let my gaze wander back to the spot where Wheat and Flour.

A DEPARTMENT of chemistry to be devoted to wheat and flour research has been established in Stanford University.

Will they show the people that super-refined white flour is a starvation food, deprived of two-thirds of the essential mineral elements found in the wheat?

From the fact that the department is endowed by a flour manufacturing company, I am decidedly of the opinion that they will not, but rather that the department will resolve itself into an additional propaganda against the use of natural whole meal flour.

By the way, soon after the establishment of the office of Food Administrator, the report was sent out that Mr. Hoover had said that bread made from the whole wheat was objectionable, and had been the cause of the death of the Belgians. Whether this report of what Mr. Hoover said was true or not, the millers of the country made the most of it, to bolster up the faith of the public in their superfine denatured products.

The situation is cleared up by the testimony of a Utah miller and wheat dealer, who told how 17,000 bushels of wheat, unfit for food, which he sold, were sent over to Belgium, and that this was the cause of the deaths in Belgium, and not the whole wheat, as had been claimed.

So you see it was boodle, not bran, that made these Belgians sick.

An "Exploratory Operation."

A SAN DIEGO woman, suffering from abdominal disturbances, due to gas in the bowels, caused by putrifaction of food, went to a dozen physicians, who doped her in various ways, while she gradually grew worse. Finally, she went to one who disgusted her with the whole tribe, and opened her eyes. She writes:

"He 'thought' I had a diseased appendix, because it did not 'show up' in the X-ray pictures he took. As he was not sure, he said I ought to have an 'exploratory operation,' as very likely my gall bladder was also affected. To this I would not consent."

Any comment on this would be entirely superfluous.

Army Diet.

FOLLOWING is from a Los Angeles man: "The United States Field Army diet should prove a most interesting subject for investigation and public discussion.

"Almost without exception, the boys returned with considerably increased weight. Arriving home, they quickly dropped back to their normal pre-war weight. In many instances the process of reduction was accompanied by health disturbances of more or less serious character.

"The boys say that drugs, such as salts, to keep their human machinery in smooth running order, were used as a regular proceeding. Some of them may have become addicted to that habit for life.

"Practical, as well as scientific, experience proves that a lean, muscular man is best fit for insurance."

And for endurance.

2. A slight subluxation of a vertebra in this part of the spine may be the cause of so-called throat trouble, neuralgia, pain in the shoulders and arms, goiter, nervous prostration, la grippe, dizziness, bleeding from nose, disorder of gums, catarrh, etc.

3. The arrow head marked No. 3 locates the part of the spine wherein subluxations may cause so-called bronchitis, felons, pain between the shoulder blades, rheumatism of the arms and shoulders, hay fever, writers' cramp, etc.

4. A vertebral subluxation at this point may cause so-called nervousness, heart disease, asthma, pneumonia, tuberculosis, difficult breathing, other lung troubles, etc.

5. Stomach and liver troubles, enlargement of the spleen, pleurisy and a score of other troubles, so-called, may be caused by subluxations in this part of the spine, sometimes so light as to remain unnoticed by others except the trained Chiropractor.

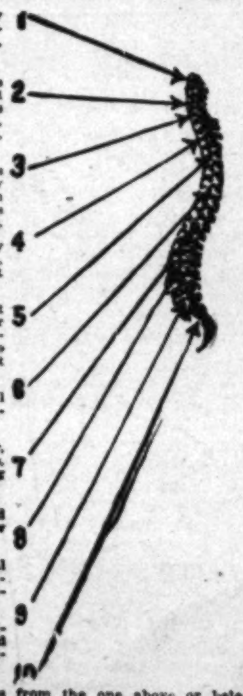
6. Here may be the cause of so-called gall stones, dyspepsia of upper bowels, fevers, shingles, hiccough, worms, etc.

7. Bright's Disease, diabetes, floating kidney, skin disease, boils, eruptions and other diseases, so-called, may be caused by nerves being pinched in the spinal openings at this point.

8. Regulations of such troubles as so-called appendicitis, peritonitis, lumbago, etc., follow Chiropractic adjustments at this point.

9. Why have so-called constipation, rectal troubles, sciatica, etc., when Chiropractic adjustments at this part of the spine will remove the cause?

10. A slight slippage of one or both innominate bones will likewise produce so-called sciatica, together with many "diseases" of pelvis and lower extremities.



When I speak of a vertebra being subluxated or displaced, I refer to its being separated more or less from the one above or below.
Ill health may continue in varying degree until the nerve pressure is adjusted away. I use only my hands to make such adjustment, which I do in a manner that is no part of the teaching or practice of any other health form of an earlier origin than Chiropractic.
The Chiropractic adjustment, by restoring normal action to these nerves, supplies new life force to the weakened organs of the body.
If you want the best in the Art, call and see me. Consultation and complete spinal analysis is free. It may mean health and happiness to you.

TO RENT: BUT NO BABIES.

By Clarence Budington Kelland.

AFTER thirty years of sailing the Great Lakes, Capt. Pitistick retired with a comfortable nest egg, a hoarse voice much addicted to bellowing, an intensively grown area of whiskers, a wife who claimed and maintained a position of full partner in the concern and not a chick or a child.

They decided to move to Detroit, and to build one of those layer-cake structures that flourish in that city, and which permit two families to thrive where nature provided room for a small portion of one. The old sailorman and his wife inhabited the upper layer, and purposed to rent the lower to some congenial family.

The matter of renting it and the choice of people who would be permitted to occupy it presented no little difficulty. Cap'n and his wife gave the problem careful consideration, and many pleasant evenings were spent bickering over it.

"I won't have no red-haired woman, because disposition," Mrs. Pitistick declared positively; "nor one with stringy hair and pale eyes and slipin' shoulders, because gossip; nor one that takes patent medicines or plays the violin."

Cap'n nodded in full approval.

"Nor a preacher nor a phonograft, because both is onendurable to the ear," he added; "nor no dodderin' old skeezicks, because I'm old enough now without bein' reminded frequent how much worse I kin git. Find 'em young, I vote, and quite, and well behaved, and not buyin' their furniture on the installment plan."

"And—" began Mrs. Pitistick.

"And—" interrupted cap'n.

"No children," they announced firmly in chorus, "because colic and squawlin' nights and always braggin' about 'em by parents, and general nuisance," added Mrs. Pitistick.

Thus cap'n arrived at the point where he could insert an advertisement in the newspaper, briefly codifying their demands in the matter of tenants. It offered for rent a desirable apartment to a young couple without dogs, phonographs, babies, red hair or a wooden leg—which last was added by cap'n in the interest of new hardwood floors.

Several applicants appeared and were inspected, but each had his fatal blemish. Not one of them—so cap'n and his wife felt—could be trusted to treat the apartment as they would have it treated. Renting a flat was, to them, like giving away a pet dog.

However, on the third day—a circumstance which cap'n regarded as suspicious—a young man and woman rang the bell and asked to see the premises. Mrs. Pitistick had seen their approach up the street, and almost acknowledged to her husband that she hoped they were answers. When they turned in, she hurried to the door to get first look at close range; and so thoroughly did she perform the office that she was dubbed "the stary old lady" by the young couple, and bore that name for a long time.

Cap'n Pitistick stared, too, when he got a chance, and neither could he find a thing to object to in the applicants' exteriors. However, he was cautious and cross-questioned them remorselessly.

"Do you play the coronet?"

"Or the violin?" supplemented Mrs. Pitistick.

Neither applicant did. Mrs. Eldred—that was the young woman's name, and consequently her husband's—admitted the piano, but that was not objected to.

"You ain't got no phonograf!"

This was stated as a fact by Cap'n Pitistick, and in no sense as a question. Their appearance precluded phonographs.

"And your hair is brown," said Mrs. Pitistick to Mrs. Eldred. "If it had been red."

The old lady made a complete sentence, of this, ending it with a distinct period, instead of a dash, which would have held you in suspense as to what dreadful thing would have resulted from hair of that color.

The young man was not a clergyman nor a detective, and his wife went to the Presbyterian church, and made her own house dresses; so it began to look as if they would be allowed to look through the apartment. But the crucial question, the one that Cap'n and Mrs. Pitistick knew was the determining one, must be asked.

Cap'n cleared his throat portentously, but this bit of vainglory cost him his chance. His wife popped in ahead.

"Have you got any babies?"

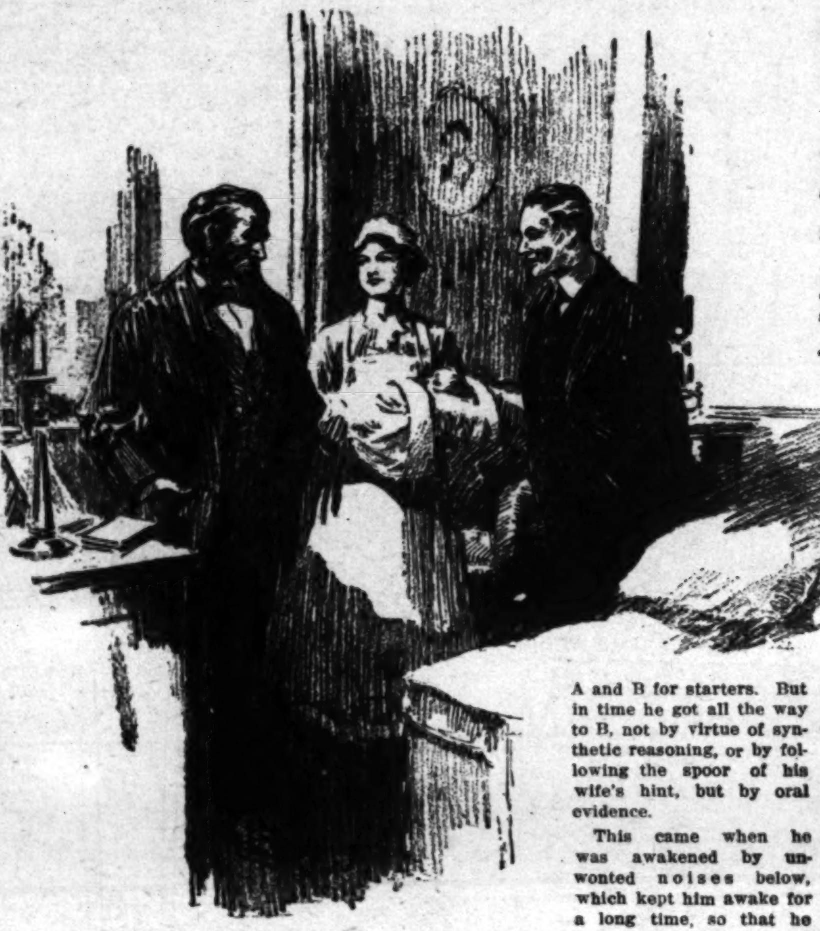
"Not even one," answered Mr. Eldred, who was enjoying himself very much. "Is it necessary?"

"Necessary!" exclaimed cap'n and his wife in a breath. "No!"

"Because of noise and pencil-marks on the walls, and doctors coming to see with spasms in the night," supplemented Mrs. Pitistick.

"Of course," acquiesced Mrs. Eldred.

Cap'n looked inquiringly at his wife, who nodded slightly. In this manner they agreed that the applicants might be taken below and shown through.



Nurse and Father Waited Expectantly for the Burst of Enthusiasm.

Mrs. Eldred thought it was perfectly lovely. She was delighted with the clothes-chute to the laundry, and with the fireplace for winter nights, and with the ice chest, which was filled from outside, saving muddy tracks in the kitchen. Mr. Eldred thought it was very nice, too; but then he thought whatever Mrs. Eldred did, because it was only four months, and they still squeezed hands when folks weren't looking. Everybody being satisfied, the flat was engaged on the spot and a two-year lease was signed.

That evening cap'n and his wife congratulated themselves on their tenants, who combined all that they had demanded, and embodied nothing that they had excluded. It was almost too good to be true!

II.

For nearly a year everything went along smoothly, so that cap'n and his wife were much given to singing the praises of the Eldreds, and to blessing the day when they made their initial appearance. Suddenly, however, Mrs. Pitistick seemed to draw in her enthusiasm, like a person pulling his head back through a car window when he sees a bridge ahead; and she began to sniff when her husband waxed complimentary to the young couple.

"Ain't we lucky!" he exclaimed one night. "Who'd ever thought we'd get tenants like them, with nothin' in the world to object to—not even sneezin' too loud when they've catched a cold?"

"I ain't got a word to say," Mrs. Pitistick replied untruthfully. Women usually start important announcements or long discourses on unpleasant subjects with this preface. "I ain't got a word to say. Not that they ain't been nice young folks, but things can't be foreseen always."

"Why, Mary, what's the matter?"

But Mrs. Pitistick only sniffed in the most belligerent manner, and showed her contempt for some quality, or the lack of some quality, which she detected in her husband.

Women like to give one the first letter, and have one guess the rest of the alphabet. Cap'n Pitistick could not have guessed to the letter D in a week, if he had been given A and B for starters. But in time he got all the way to B, not by virtue of synthetic reasoning, or by following the spoor of his wife's hint, but by oral evidence.

This came when he was awakened by unwonted noises below, which kept him awake for a long time, so that he spluttered to his wife, and wanted to know what company was staying so late for, and why they couldn't have some consideration for other folks. Owing, however, to the floors not having been sufficiently deadened, he heard a series of purposeless squawks that could have been emitted by only one living thing; and then he knew that the visitor below would stay many nights, and, without doubt, would frequently sit up late.

"That's what you meant, is it?" he growled.

Mrs. Pitistick sniffed.

"And the lease with a year to run," he added a moment later. "Twelve months more!"

"What you goin' to do about it? You ain't goin' to let them folks stay there with that baby?"

"The lease?" spluttered cap'n. "I don't see's I kin do a derned thing."

"And a baby carriage always standin' on the porch to stumble over!"

"We sha'n't allow it."

"It ain't honest. It's rentin' a flat under false pretenses. The law ought to do somethin', Cap'n Pitistick; but never is no good when you need it, like a policeman when a burglar."

Cap'n Pitistick, who had really grown fond of Mrs. Eldred, sneaked down the back way in the morning to spy out the land, and to reassure himself on the point of coming through it all right. Mr. Eldred, rumpled as to hair and drawn as to features, answered the timid knock.

"How is she?" asked cap'n in a hoarse whisper.

"Fine!" replied Mr. Eldred. "Fine! Couldn't be better."

He grinned vacuously, and Cap'n Pitistick recoiled. He recognized the signs.

"Next thing," he muttered to himself, "he'll begin braggin' about it." However, he knew he must ask about the baby, and managed to do so with ill grace. "How's it?" he growled.

Mr. Eldred beamed and shook his head weakly, as if at a loss for words.

Cap'n grunted savagely.

"I expect this here flat'll be pretty small for you now, with sich a fam'ly," he hinted.

Newly raised to the peerage with the title of "father," the young man failed to notice the underlying tone.

"Oh, no," he said lightly. "We wouldn't think of moving. You needn't worry a bit about losing us. Besides, there's the lease."

"Of course," snapped cap'n. "There's the lease."

"Want to see him?"

"Him?" Cap'n had thought of baby as "it."

"The baby."

The old fellow began backing off with an expression of dismay.

"I got to go downtown," he gasped, and almost choked over the words.

"Won't take a minute. Come in, and I'll have nurse bring him out."

Seeing no way to avoid it, cap'n entered. Presently the baby was held before his eyes, while nurse and father waited expectantly for the burst of enthusiasm.

The old sailorman blinked and said "H'm!" several times. He tried not to look at baby, but couldn't help it. Never had he wanted to get away from any place so badly in his life—never had he been so embarrassed. He said "H-m!" again. "Whee-eew!" as if it were the hottest day in summer.

"Just lift it," urged Mr. Eldred. "You wouldn't believe it!"

Cap'n had been anticipating this suggestion with growing horror. With a wild look around him, he pivoted on his heel, scuttled through the door and fled down the street, leaving nurse and father to gaze after him with jaws sagging.

Mrs. Pitistick's first encounter with the cause of her ill temper was when she nearly stumbled over it and its cab, which stood on the porch to get the breeze.

But she did look under the canopy of the cab for a peep at its contents, and saw baby asleep with one little fist gripping tightly a microscopic ear. She scrutinized him a moment, and then went upstairs. It is notable that she failed to relate the circumstance to her husband.

The old sailorman found that looking at a baby was like eating one's first olive. When you get away, you try to remember the sensation, know it was peculiar, can't decide whether you liked it or not, conclude that you didn't and determine never to do it again. But curiosity is strong. The time always comes when the second olive is eaten and the second look taken at the baby.

Consequently cap'n, when he met nurse and baby around the corner one afternoon, stopped in front of the cab and insisted on inspection. Baby said "Blub!" and kicked with both legs, and cap'n prodded it amidships with his finger.

Within a week or so he acquired the habit of sitting in the front window every afternoon and eyeing the street. When he eyed the street it was, of course, possible for him to see when nurse took baby out to get air. There was no reason at all why he should stay all day indoors himself, so he would get up and go for a walk.

He always met the cab somewhere. Then a certain ritual was carried out, which was precisely as follows:

Cap'n advances toward the baby, with his mind deeply immersed in important affairs. It is evident that he does not see the cab, for his brow is corrugated, his eyes are fixed intently on some distant object. Presently he almost stumbles over the nurse, makes a dab at his hat, says "H-m!" several times, scrutinizes the cavalcade which he has all but run down, says "H-m!" again, and wonders aloud if it ain't that Eldred baby.

"It's him," says nurse.

"H-m!" says cap'n.

"A nice day," says nurse.

"What's his name?" asks cap'n.

"Freddie," says nurse.

The Bo'sun.

Jensen struck. I thought oddly enough: "Well, he certainly won't see the deck again, poor fellow"

Then I heard Russell's voice beside me saying, "It jars a feller to see a shipmate fall like that, Yank, but he was lucky not to hit the deck; he'd a been all broke up."

"Won't they heave to?" I asked, "and try to get him."

"No, we're steerin' by the wind, and we make so much lee-way that we'd never find him, 'sides our boats is all stuck in their chocks and time we got them overboard he'd be drownded anyway."

—o—

We made the sail up as quickly as we could and as I passed the last gasket and made it fast, I breathed a sigh of relief. In a few moments we were on deck again.

I was still shaken up about poor Jensen, and could not help thinking about him. His name would be entered in the log book as having fallen overboard and that would be the end of it. His folks would never know what had become of him as a sailor seldom writes home.

A few days after this I was standing on the forward deck, just at the break of the forecastle head. I had been sewing on some canvas and had just straightened up to take the kinks out of my back when the boatswain appeared.

"What you mean by loafing like that?" he yelled. "I been telling you all this voyage to loaf when it's your watch below."

I replied that I had just stood up that minute. He smashed me in the face with his fist and as I went down he jumped on me several times as I lay struggling on the deck—he was wearing a pair of heavy sea boots too—then gave me a few kicks and snarled:

"Now get a move on and if I catch you loafing again I'll turn myself loose on you right."

I managed to crawl back to my work and he stood over me, cursing and bullying until eight bells when the other watch came on deck. He then said, "Now you can stay here till one bell, you was loafing that long anyway."

—o—

The next half hour was a bitter one.

The next three days we spent most of the time aloft, the worst days I ever spent —I was stiff and sore all over from the kicking. My shipmates tried to make it easier for me by doing as much of the heavier work as they could, but just the going aloft was torture to my bruised body and I was very glad when an antiquated little tug came out to tow us into Libau.

Arriving in the harbor, we dropped anchor. and another funny little tug boat came to our starboard quarter and passed a line to us. We made her fast and threw a Jacob's ladder over the side. A very imposing looking person grabbed the ladder and started to board us. We watched him. He wore a magnificent uniform, lots of gold braid, patent leather boots, and a dazzling gold belt. On one side of his gold belt he had a jewel-handled dagger in a sheath, and on the other side a revolver. His beard was cut naval style. As he sprang on deck he was greeted by the skipper, and the mate, who were all gathered to meet him. After shaking hands all around they entered the cabin.

"That must be the Czar," I said.

"Czar nothin', said Russell, "that's the custom's officer."

"Gosh," I said, "if the customs inspector rigs himself out like that I wonder what the Czar's like?"

"Never seen him," was the reply, "but they wears everything in this man's country."

—o—

In an hour or so a tug hooked on to us and we were taken up a canal and into a dock, where we tied up. Around us there were several old hulks tied up; we found afterwards that they were in commission in the Russian navy and were being used as training ships. They had several hundreds of Russian peasants there who were just being trained for the navy.

The next morning at 5 o'clock about fifty women came aboard and started to unload our cargo. It was the first time I had seen women stevedores, and it was interesting to see them doing all the work, even shoveling the coal into the huge bags which were given to us for that purpose by the naval authorities. About 9 o'clock that morning the second mate came to me and said,

"Lay off work now, you're going to be night watchman while we are in this port."

That was the first pleasant thing that had happened to me on that ship and I was highly elated at being able to get out of working during the day, as my bumps and bruises were still very painful. In the daytime I used to go ashore for an hour or so and I finally concluded that Russia was not so bad as the bo'sun, so when the ship sailed I was ashore, safely hidden, and that was the last I saw of the Beeswing.

Three years later I was a seaman in the United States Navy. I had grown quite a lot in that time, also I was lightweight champion of the Atlantic Fleet. One day out ship was steaming up the Savannah River, and as we neared the city a group of us were standing at the rail commenting on the ships we were passing. I gazed casually at some men who were standing on the deck of a steamship that was tied up to the dock. Suddenly I started, I looked again. Yes, it must be he.

"What's the matter? You look as though you've seen a long lost brother," said Tom, my chum.

"No, but I've seen a long lost shipmate, or someone who looks very much like one."

—o—

I noticed the name of the steamship.

"Are you on liberty this evening, Tom?"

"No," he replied.

"Let's put in for special liberty, then I want you to come with me to see if that is my old shipmate."

Tom was a fine chap to have with you in almost any kind of a party, and I was glad to have him agree to visit my old friend.

Accordingly we applied for the liberty and got it, when we left our ship and walked up the water front.

Arrived at our destination we sped up the gangway, then up forward and into the forecastle. The seamen glanced curiously at us. I suppose they had never seen a man-o-warsman in that foc'stle before, and they wondered what we wanted. I gazed about until I saw the man I was seeking, he was sitting on a bench near the forecastle door.

I strolled over to him and, in a casual tone, said:

"Weren't you on the Beeswing about three years ago?"

He grinned.

"Yes," he said, "I made a voyage in her, why?"

"I made that same voyage," I replied, "don't you remember me?"

He stared at me for a few moments, then he said:

"No I guess I can't place you."

"Now that's strange, you've been in my memory so much ,and it's only three years. Why man, I'll bet that I'd know you a hundred years from now if we should meet."

—o—

He looked pleased.

"You sure got a good memory."

"On the Beeswing, they called me the 'Yank,'" I said.

"Oh yes, I remember you now," he replied, "you do look the same, but you've growed quite a bit, ain't you?"

"Yes, I've grown, I'm 19 now—a man. Do you remember the time when you knocked me down and kicked me, the time when I was sewing the canvas?"

"Yes," he replied, with a grin that was a little worried, "and if you wait till I get my shore clothes on, we'll have a little drink."

He arose.

"Never mind your shore clothes, you're not going to need them for a week or so," I replied.

At first the men didn't pay much attention to us. They had seen a lot of shipmate reunions in their time doubtless, but at my last words they perked up a bit and started to show interest. Tom all his time was leaning against a stanchion, listening.

"I'm going to take you out on deck, and you're going to get the worst licking you ever saw anybody get."

At my words the men crowded closer, Tom noticed this and said:

"Now this is a two-man scrap, and if anybody else crowds into it, we've got a fine bunch of boys on our ship, and I'll bring them up here and there'll be something doing."

—o—

"Don't worry about nobody else gettin' into it, matey," said one of them, "that feller ain't got a friend in the ship."

We were facing each other by this time. Without a word he reached for his sheath-knife and I struck him squarely in the mouth. He landed on his back, out on deck.

Tom was the first man out after him. As he reached his side Tom put his foot on his chest, and reached one hand under him, withdrawing it in a second with the sheath-knife in it's grasp.

"I never did like these things to fight with," he said, as he threw it overboard.

My adversary got to his feet, his only move was to rub his mouth with the back of his hand. I strode over to him. He backed, but made no effort to fight. I said:

—o—

"Look here, you've got to fight, if you don't it won't help you a bit, because if ever you get the authority again, you"d do the same things you did on the Beeswing, and I'm going to teach you a lesson."

Seeing that he was in a corner, his face turned white; he scanned the faces of his shipmates they were all smiling. They gibed him. One of them said:

"Go in an' eat the bluejacket up, you've allus told us what a bad man you are."

"Yes ,think of all the men you've killed," said another.

"This is only one man, 'member the time you crippled six at once," yelled a third.

All this time he seemed to be trying to get the courage to fight. I turned to say something to Tom, and as I turned he struck me on the ear. I went down and he rushed in to kick me. I rolled towards him and grabbed his foot and he went down.

We arose together, and I shot one in on his plexus, following it with one to his jaw, neither one hard enough to knock him out, but just to jar him up a little, and then I commenced to chastise him.

He was swinging as hard as he could with both hands, and every once in a while he would put one over on me, and I was just cutting his face to pieces. In just a few minutes he was panting, and then I had to go easy as he was liable to crumble any minute. His blows now had no force at all and I could encourage him by letting him hit me frequently. This continued for about fifteen minutes, and then I was unfortunate enough to land a blow on his throat and he went down. I waited for him to arise, but he wouldn't. I said, "Come on, get up."

—o—

He refused, so I assisted him to his feet and knocked him down again. I did this three times. The fourth time I lifted him to his feet he immediately sank to the deck again and as I wouldn't strike him while he was down, the show stopped.

I wiped the blood off my hands and said to him as he lay there:

"Every time I meet you I'm going to give you the same dose."

As we stepped on the dock again Tom looked at me and grinned—then he drawled:

"Let's pin on a lot of ham and eggs."

Dr. Garlingham. A few days later, when the bleeding and other unpleasant factors of his wounds had abated, so that he could think again of things closer to the earth, he was shocked to realize that his heel hurt as much as ever. Limping to the office of the specialist, he complained loudly.

"There is a bare possibility," rumbled the specialist, when he had pondered a little, "that your teeth may also be infection manufacturers. I would suggest that you call on my friend, Dr. Enamel, the dental X-ray expert.

"No doubt of your teeth being culpable," pronounced Dr. Enamel, after he had done a lot of probing. "A picture will prove my assertion."

A picture did prove it; and so alarmed Peacock that he sat down at once and suffered the loss of a majority of his teeth. But, soon after leaving the dentist's office, he became aware of something familiar, and on investigation, found it was his old cross, the heelache. Early the next morning, he hobbled his way back to the dentist's parlor and there bemoaned the inadequacy of the tooth-puller's treatment.

The dentist scratched his head, figuratively, of course, for he was a sanitary dentist, and concocted his defense. "Mr. Peacock," he said at length, "I have done everything possible in my line. Your heel is evidently infected from a source that would be unethical for me to treat. The best thing for you to do is to place yourself confidently in the hands of Dr. Biped, who has an international reputation as a specialist in the treatment of appendices. Now if—"

Peacock had bolted. He was tired of specialists; besides his heel hurt him more than ever; moreover, his frequent trotting to and fro had so worn his shoes that he now needed a new pair. But he couldn't afford a new pair; he had so little money left that he had to follow the example of Mr. McAdoo, and have his old pair half-soled. He went to a place where the job is "done while you wait."

When the shoes were finished and again on his feet, Peacock looked at them admiringly. "You have done the work very nicely," he said to the cobbler. "And," he added, in a tone of surprise, when he had stood up and taken a few steps. "my feet seem to feel easier than they did."

"Perhaps that, sir," suggested the shoeman, "is because, in addition to half-soling your shoes, I pulled out a sharp nail that was sticking up through one of the heels."

In sending this clipping from Judge, a correspondent writes: "While this is supposed to be high-class humor, I will say that it might almost be the plain downright truth."

Civilization.

RIOTING and gross excesses in Boston, headquarters of American "culture," reminded us of Russia.

They also reminded us that what we call "civilization" is but a thin veneer.

It requires more than big bank clearings, and tall skyscrapers, and "store clothes" and "company manners" to make civilization.

Two thousand five hundred years ago, Greece was more truly civilized than the United States is today.

Is, then, what we call "civilization" a failure? To a great extent, yes.

Medical Trust Methods.

WE OFTEN read of the arrest of men who use herbs, or some other simple methods, for practicing medicine without a license.

How about arresting a few M.D.'s, who recklessly poison the blood with animal filth, of which they know nothing, except that is "highly recommended" in a medical journal; or who advise surgical mutilations of the body that they must know—or at least should know—can only be harmful?

These prosecutions and persecutions are not for the benefit of the people, but to maintain the closed shop in medicine.

A Clown's Advice.

THE latest development of "health" propaganda is the engagement of a circus clown, to amuse and incidentally to give "health" advice to the children of public schools. Some cynical persons might say that this is very appropriate.

The clown, employed by the Child Health Organization of New York City, and loaned by that body to the health department of the United States government, appeared in a New York school arrayed in full "clownonicals" and told the children that they should and should not eat. Among other things, he warned them not to eat radishes or cucumbers.

They would much better eat radishes and cucumbers than candy and ice cream cones. These vegetables played a leading part in the diet of the Israelites, when building the Pyramids, and making bricks without straw, for a cruel taskmaster. They are both wholesome, when perfectly eaten—as a main part of a meal, not as an appendix.

When a person is full of impurities, the medicinal qualities of the cucumber start a house cleaning. Then fool people and their medical advisers say they are unwholesome. That is like the farmer in hog-

Some Good Short Stories from Everywhere.

The Princely Liar.

THE Russian Prince, Paul Troubetskoy, who is engaged upon a monument of the late Gen. Harrison Gray Otis for the city of Los Angeles, tells of an incident that occurred at the Alexandria Hotel. He was exhibiting some photographs to a young woman.

"I recognize you here," she said, "but who is the other gentleman?"

"That is Tolstoi."

"Who?"

"Tolstoi, surely you know of him."

"Oh, but my friend," protested the flapper, "I don't know half the men at this hotel!"

When the Prince related this anecdote to a group at the Metro Studio the other day, Victor Andre, chief of the modelling shop, laughed.

"You know," he said "The Prince calls on me sometimes to chat. He came the other day, but my name slip his mind.

"'Are you Gregore?' asked the studio gateman, who expected a new laborer.

"'Gregore? Yes, I am Gregore,' said the Prince, who thought that was a good way to get inside. But the gateman was suspicious and turned him away. I hear of this, and the next day I say to the gateman:

"'That man you turned away was the famous sculptor, Troubetskoy. He's a Russian Prince!'

"'He may be a Prince,' say the gateman, 'but he is one big liar.'"

And at that Troubetskoy's laugh was the heartiest.

"SAY! Mr. G—, that girl in 530 is flim flamming you."

"How?" asked the well-known director.

"Well, you were going to star her because of her wonderful hair, and I found out it is false."

"False?" gasped the director, "It can't be. Why it's the longest hair I ever saw."

"Nevertheless, last night I heard her tell her friend it never bothers her because she throws it outside the bed."—[A. L. M.

Too Much Bristle.

GATES B. AUFSESSER, manager of the Mohawk Brush Company, one of the largest companies of its kind, tells the following story of his early experience as a salesman.

He had just graduated from high school and was having his initial experience in the selling game. "The first prospect that I struck looked me over and said, 'I do not care to hear anything about your goods today.'

"'All right,' said I and walked out. This sort of reception was mine for the rest of the morning, so in the afternoon I resolved to make somebody listen. I approached the buyer of a growing mail-order house and rattled off my sales talk like a Billy Sunday evangelist. The business man seemed attentive, but I noticed that his stenographer paid no attention to me, she simply wrote on a pad as unconcerned as anything.

"The more he listened, the more imaginative I grew, and I sort of used a bit of poetic license about my offers.

"I closed my talk and the stenographer left the room. The buyer and I chatted awhile and just as I was about to 'land him' the stenographer returned.

"'Mr. Aufsesser,' said my friend, handing me a sheet of paper, which she had given him, 'I will take some of your goods on these terms.'

"I looked at the paper and saw that it was a verbatim report of the sales talk which I had delivered. While I was speaking the girl had taken a shorthand account of what I had said. I agreed, but in the future I took care to see that no matter how enthusiastic I felt over my brushes, I will not make any sweeping statements nor say anything that I cannot easily back up."

BILL JONES went fishing the other day with a friend, and fell into the lake. His friend finally dragged him out insensible. Scratching his head he said audibly to himself: "There are sixteen rules for the treatment of drowned people, but I'm hanged if I can remember one of them!"

"Is there one about whisky?" asked the half-drowned Bill.

"Yes."

"Then don't worry about the other fifteen!"

Worse than Ever.

A NEWCOMER in Los Angeles smacked his lips longingly and conjured up visions of a glass of foaming lager.

"Say," he said finally to a passer-by. "I'm simply dying of thirst. Isn't there any place in this forsaken town where I can get a drink?"

The native eyed him for a moment, and then leisurely pointed his finger.

"See that millinery store across the street?" he asked.

"Uh-huh."

"Wal"—(very laconically,) "that's the only place in town you can't!"

Wasted Blushes.

THE Gangplank, published by the American soldiers in the embarkation camp at Saint Nazaire, France, recently printed the following:

She was one of those girls everybody is sure to like and the smile that played about her lips made all the boys who visited the Y hut feel satisfied that she was the right girl in the right place.

But there was one buck who had taken advantage of the situation and had become quite friendly. Of course, all the other boys noticed this and different opinions arose. Some thought that it was just another of those instantaneous affairs, while others were convinced that he and she had been friends back in the States.

One afternoon, while she sat in her usual place in the reading-room of the Y hut, he approached her, and the following conversation ensued:

"I got off for a few minutes because I had something important to ask you."

She lifted her eyes to his, and found his face had taken on a crimson hue. Her face changed color also.

"Really now," she said, "you haven't come here to talk confidentially, have you?"

"Well, I don't care who knows it, but I shouldn't like any one to hear me ask you," he replied.

"But you have only known me a month, and—"

"Yes, I know that, but I thought that you wouldn't refuse me, because I—I."

"Hush," she said, "don't let all those boys hear you talk so foolishly."

There was a moment of silence and then she said as she looked into his crimson face:

"Well, if it's so important whisper in my ear."

His hands trembled and his face grew redder as he leaned over and whispered:

"I wanted to ask you if—if you would—er—sew a button on my trousers for me!"

Going Into Mourning.

ROB WAGNER, the movie director, said at a luncheon the other day:

"Movie audiences are very sophisticated nowadays. They insist on accuracy. If you are inaccurate in the smallest detail they write you hundreds of jeering letters. It wasn't so in the past.

"The movie audiences of the past were as naive as Uncle Ted Prouty. Uncle Ted came to town one evening and went to the theater with his wife. In the first act a woman was shot, and when the curtain went down a good many men left their seats and went out.

"Uncle Ted fidgeted awhile, and then he took his hat and started out in his turn.

"'Where be you goin'?' his wife asked.

"'Look here, Hannah,' said Uncle Ted, 'I've stood this thing jest as long as I can, and now I'm goin' out like the rest to see how that pore woman is gettin' along that was shot. The unfort-nit wretch may be dead by this time, and if she is, this ain't no place for us.'"

Missed Her Car.

THE assistant manager of one of our popular hotels asked a country visitor—who was seeing hotel life for the first time from the mezzanine floor—how she liked it.

"Wal, it's purtty nice! But I didn't know your women were so conceited."

"Conceited?" gasped the A.M. "Why, some of the finest women in the country are staying here."

"Wal, may be they are. But I don't like a woman that sends a little boy around to tell folks she's missed her car," replied the country dame.

"Impossible!" said the A.M. "Why I never heard of such a thing."

A Princely Liar.

"GOVERNMENTAL extravagance! When I consider how the public funds were wasted during the war I shudder to think of the extensive governmental owenership advocated by some people."

The speaker was President Franklin of the International Mercantile Marine Company. The occasion was a banquet in New York. He continued:

"The experience of a pretty girl typist I know is illuminative. In search of a position she called on a man in whose office she had worked before the armistice, an ex-director of an essential war industry.

"'I can only expect $30 a month!' she exclaimed. 'Why, Mr. Blank, when you employed me at the Khaki Shirt Control I had $100 a month.'

"'Yes, I know,' Blank replied suavely, 'but this is my own money I'm spending now.'"

All Wrong.

"THE way Japan plays politics with America reminds me of the story of the Jap and the jar," said Senator Phelan, recently.

"An absent-minded Japanese went into a store to buy a jar, and, noticing one turned upside down, blurted out: 'How absurd! The jar has no mouth.'

Turning it over, he was once more astonished.

"'Why, the bottom's gone, too,' he exclaimed.

To Rent but No Babies.

"H-m!" grunts cap'n, while he peers under the canopy. "He's growin' rapid. Bet he's a pound heavier'n yestiddy."

This routine of conduct and conversation was always carried out to the letter. From this point, however, proceedings varied. For instance, one afternoon cap'n deliberately deprived nurse of her place as motive-power, and wheeled the cab himself—"just to see if it was hard pushin'," he explained.

After that he always propelled the vehicle.

"But," he cautioned nurse, "don't you ever say a word about this to my wife. She just nat'rally despises babies—and so do I. You kin see plain I don't like 'em, can't you?"

Mrs. Pitistick had her little secret, too. The glimpse she had of the baby when she almost stumbled over it on the porch had the same effect that the first sight of him had on the cap'n. She wondered what he had looked like, and what he would have looked like, if his eyes had been open, and how it felt to touch him.

Consequently, when cap'n was off downtown, she went below stairs to borrow a cup of sugar—for which she had not the least use, though she persuaded herself that she had. Having secured it, she looked around uneasily, and asked how the baby was.

Of course, it was shown to her, its eyes were open, and it smiled. Mrs. Pitistick sniffed, as was her custom. Baby smiled again, and made an enthusiastic bubbling noise in his throat.

Mrs. Eldred smiled and held out baby, who smiled again at the old lady, and somehow got over into her arms without her knowing just how it happened.

If you ever saw a man in a new suit of clothes carrying a freshly painted garden bench, you know the expression Mrs. Pitistick wore. She held him as far away from her as she could reach, but clutched him with an agonized grip. Her eyes sought succor, and she moistened her lips.

"I guess," she whispered, "you better take him, or else he'll slam down on the floor in spite of me, him bein' slipperylike."

But, agonizing as the experience was, Mrs. Pitistick climbed downstairs next day, at the same hour, to return the sugar and sample the sensation again. After that she appeared every day, and soon she grew so expert that she would lift the baby from his crib and hold him on her lap with scarcely a quickened heart-beat.

"Missis Eldred," she exclaimed after a third or fourth visit, "don't you never tell cap'n I been takin' baby in my arms. He ain't got no use for 'em whatever, and nobody to blame for it. But you keep quiet about me to him, for there's no knowin' what he'll do. Maybe go to lawyers and bust the lease!"

III.

So matters went on, cap'n spending his afternoons in surreptitious and ambulatory proximity to Freddie. Mrs. Pitistick sneaking downstairs every morning to hold him on her lap and make believe that she was a grandmother. But thirty days before the end of his terms, Mr. Eldred presented himself at the door.

"Cap'n Pitistick," he said, "I want to give you notice that we are going to give up possession next month. The lease expires then, and we have decided to rent a house farther out. We'll be sorry to go, but we'd have to go some time, anyhow."

"Yes," replied cap'n. "You'd 'a' had to go some time, and I guess it's better now than after a while when we get more attached—that is"—he lowered his voice—"when I got more attached to Freddie."

Cap'n went out with Mr. Eldred and took a long walk alone. Somehow, he couldn't bear to make the announcement to his wife and to witness her delight at getting rid of the baby. But it had to be done; so at supper he told her.

The old lady swallowed something the wrong way, and had to run out to the kitchen for a drink. When she came back her eyes were red, because she had coughed so hard.

"When they goin'?"

"Last o' next month."

A long silence intervened.

"We'll have to be gittin' in somebody else."

"Yes," agreed cap'n.

Another silence fell, then from a drawer, where it had been preserved carefully, he drew the old "To Rent," sign' and with laborious pen printed on it a further legend. When it was done he read it aloud.

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Improved Eyesight.

ALL functional ailments of local organs are but danger signals, showing that the blood is loaded with waste matter. This is a fact that is lost sight of, or ignored by the "regular" medical fraternity, and by those who look to them for guidance. Hence, the pitiful folly of useless and often harmful local treatments, or extirpation of the offending organ, while the cause still remains, to manifest elsewhere in more severe form.

For instance, the eyes are organs of the body, affected directly by the condition of the blood. You all know how, when you have dined "not wisely, but too well" the morning after finds your eyes more or less bloodshot and gummy. This comes from an inflamed condition of the lining of the stomach, a condition that also produces neuralgia and toothache.

Some foods have a specially bad effect on the eyes. This is particularly true of sugar. Scores of my consultants have written to me, telling how remarkably their eyesight improved, after they had given up the use of cane sugar, in every way, shape and form.

Following is from "Auto-intoxication and Intestinal Toxinia" by J. H. Kellogg, M.D.

"Here are three cases which have come under the writer's observation:

"A young woman of 18 years found her sight failing. Examination by an eye specialist showed that the young woman's eye accommodation was so much impaired that she needed glasses, such as are usually worn by a person of 50 years. By a change of regimen and improvement of bowel action the abnormality in a few weeks disappeared.

"A college professor of fifty years, wearing glasses adapted to a presbyopic person of his age, after following for a few months a diet regimen, found his eyes improved to such a degree that he had the same range of accommodation as a normal person of 50 years.

"A physician, 60 years of age, who had adopted a laxative, aseptic regimen, found his glasses uncomfortable, and on examination by an oculist discovered that his glasses, which he had been wearing for several years, were ten years too old for him. A change was made to 'younger' glasses, and he is still wearing them at the age of 66, with entire comfort, although they are adapted to a person of fifty.

"In the above cases the rejuvenation of the eyes was accompanied by the disappearance of numerous symptoms of senility, and a great increase in physical and mental vigor and endurance."

Edward Winquest of San Francisco, writes:

"I have been a careful reader of the Care of the Body for the past two years, and am living up to the teachings set forth. I have given up eating salt, condiments and refined sugar.

"Seeing an article on the care of the eyes reminded me that I should thank you for the great benefit I have received from reading the Care of the Body. I wore glasses for ten years, but now I am going without glasses. My eyes are strong, and I don't think I will ever have to put glasses on again, if I continue to live right.

"Among the first articles I read in the Care of the Body was one on eye exercises. I took up some of them, with change of diet, and continued them for about six months. I then tried to do without glasses, but could not, and finally gave up the exercises. About five months ago my eyes began to hurt me, and I had to cut down on my reading. I told my wife I would have to get a new pair of glasses. However, I began my eye exercises again and before I could spare the money to buy a new pair of glasses I noticed that I was going without them for two or more hours every morning, and wouldn't think to put them on until I started to work. So I thought I would try it one day and do without them. I got along finely. I haven't had my glasses on for nearly three months, and am doing as much reading as ever.

"I can see now why I didn't get results the first six months. I had to build up my general condition first. I have had stomach trouble since I was 15 years old, and am now 38, but after eating and living according to the Care of the Body I have got over my stomach trouble, including the ailments of the whole body.

"I feel so much indebted to you that I had to write and thank you."

More "Flu?"

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND, Commissioner of Health for New York, is one of the most sensible health officers in the country, but that is not saying much. Predicting a "minor epidemic" of influenza this winter, he says the Board of Health is "still working on vaccines" (God help us!) He adds, however:

"Masks are no good, it has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of scientists. We are old fashioned here. We do not believe in closing schools or churches. We did everything unconventional here in 1918 and had the lowest death rate of all."

To prove that masks are dangerous instead of healthful, Commissioner Copeland cites the case of San Francisco, which had a high death rate, he thinks, because "the masks are filthy, prevent the patient from getting good air, and cause him to rebreathe bad breath.

"Above all, let's not get excited." He advises everyone to do his utmost to "keep his equanimity, piety and occupation."

He also recommends soap, and adds:

"My only fear is that it will attack another age group this year. Apparently the germs develop an appetite for a certain kind of food, and choose people of a certain age, though there is no known explanation for the attraction to certain ages."

I can easily explain it. The "attraction" is the waste matter in the blood—"pathogen." If there is no waste matter in the blood, you can no more "catch" influenza—or any other disease—than you can grow wheat on a cement sidewalk. If there are cracks in the sidewalk, and dirt, some wheat may sprout, and the amount will be according to the quantity of dirt.

Faulty Diagnosis.

THE pain in Peacock's left heel became so bad that it finally drove him to his family physician, Dr. Petibone Parboil.

"A plain case of infection," declared the general practitioner, when he had learned the symptoms and made a conventional examination. "But your tongue is all right, your pulse is O.K., and your temperature is normal. There must be some hidden cause for your trouble. Let me see your throat."

Peacock threw open the throttle.

"I am not sure," said the doctor, as he lined his professional forehead with dubiosity, "but I think your tonsils may be the breeding-places of the unnatural condition of your foot posterior. Hadn't you better consult Dr. Garlingham, the nose and throat specialist?"

Peacock thought he had; he was beginning to get worried. An interview with the specialist resulted in two operations: one, the snipping off of Peacock's tonsils, and the other, the lassoing and severing of a few appendages, which the specialist said were adenoids. The operations were costly for Peacock, and thoroughly satisfactory to

IS CHINA TO BE THE DOMINANT POW

BY M. G. FRE

HAS China reached the flickering-out stage of a burnt candle, or is she gathering her latest strength to become a dominant nation? To us of the Pacific Coast China is not the "Far East" but our near neighbor on the West, and we nave more than a Far-East interest in what is going to happen ot her.

Like the waves of the ever-changing sea, nations come into being, increase in momentum, reach their climax, subside and disappear. All but China, like a Gibraltar she has stood, contemporary of the first nation of which we have knowledge, and of the last. The Valley of the Hoang-ho is believed to be the location of one of the oldest settlements of the earth, and the Chinese one of the first peopels to become national. Has China now lost her secret of everlasting life, or are the forces of destruction still powerless to extinguish her?

Of one race, one language (though many dialects,) and one country, her history is supposed to go back nearly 5000 years (B. C. 2852) which, according to Usher's chronology, would antedate the birth of Noah by 400 years. Others place the date of the accession of Fiu-hi, reputed inventor of writing and founder of Chinese polity, at 3322.

The Origin of the Chinese is Wrapped in Mystery.

WHO the Chinese were—except that they are of Mongolian stock—where they came from, and why they came, is not known. Chinese historians assume that they have always been there. However, there are characteristics which would seem to connect them with the pre-Semitic dwellers in the Euphrates Valley.

Like other peoples they have had their troubles—anarchy, revolutions, wars, dynasty succeeding dynasty; yet the government has remained stable and enduring, adapting itself to the changing times, and is now being transformed from a monarchy into the new republic with far less turbulence and bloodshed than has befallen Russia, or was experienced by France.

The earliest China is believed to have extended little beyond the present provinces of Shansi, Shensi and Kan-suh. Not until B. C. 250 did the whole of the present China come under one government. With the exception of the 400 years of anarchy, when there sprang up a great many small kingdoms, and the fifty years of "Five Little Dynasties," the country has been ruled by but ten dynasties in the 4117 years from B. C. 2205 to A. D. 1912. The longest of these was the Chou dynasty, which lasted 873 years and included the reign of thirty-nine sovereigns.

It cannot be exactly stated just where myth and tradition end and real history begins, but Chinese chronology is given as follows:

The Age of the Five Rulers, B. C. 2852-2205, 647 years; the Hia dynasty, B. C. 2205-1766, 439 years; the Shang or Yin dynasty, B. C. 1766-1122, 644 years; the Chou dynasty, B. C. 1122-249, 873 years; the Tsin dynasty, B. C. 249-210, 39 years; the Han dynasty, B. C. 210-A. D. 220, 430 years; the Four Centuries of Anarchy, A. D. 220-618; the T'ang dynasty, A. D. 618-905, 287 years; the Five Little dynasties, A. D. 907-960, 53 years; the Sung dynasty, A. D. 960-1279, 319 years; the Yuan or Mongol dynasty, A. D. 1260-1368, 108 years; the Ming dynasty, A D. 1368-1644, 276 years; the Manchu or Tsing dynasty, A. D. 1644-1912, 268 years.

Out of thirty-five dynasties known in China only two, the Han and the Ming, are considered of purely native origin; yet even during the dynasties of the Mongols and of the Manchus, who subjugated China, her identity and that of her people remained intact, Tibetans, Manchus, Tartars, Japanese, Shans, etc., were swallowed up and absorbed as a robin absorbs earthworms.

Imperialistic in her foreign policy, China has always been democratic at heart, and has trusted the people, whose welfare has been considered from earliest times. According to Chinese books, marriage, agriculture—including the plow—wheeled vehicles, silk culture, curative properties of plants, pottery, armor, ships, writing, music and other civilized arts had been established long before the time of Yao (B. C. 2357-2258,) "who drove a red car drawn by a white horse" and "united and transformed the myriads of states." Yao placed a tablet outside the palace on which anyone might write advice in regard to the government; also the man with a grievance could make known his desire to the king.

Yu, founder of the Hia dynasty, was a great engineer and labored nine years to lead the waters of the Hoang-ho (Yellow River) back to its proper channel, and his appreciative subjects originated the saying, "But for Yu we should all have been fishes."

Revolution Has Always Cleared China of Weak Rulers.

AS LONG as the rulers governed wisely a dynasty was likely to continue. When they became so weak, cruel, or profligate that conditions could no longer be endured, a revolution placed a new power on the throne, often the leader of the revolt.

The leader of the revolution that established the great Chou dynasty "found the people hanging head downwards and set them on their feet." His son, Chou Kung, is sometimes said to be the inventor of the mariner's compass, and was one of the three great sages of China.

As far back as B. C. 2595 the ancestors of the Huns or Tatars (Tartars) were a danger on the north. In the Chou dynasty wars continued most of the time, against Huns on the northern frontier and the aboriginal tribes south of the Yang-tse-kiang (Willow River.)

Gradually misrule and anarchy developed. Vassal princes took possession of entire provinces, as of Lu, part of the present Shantung, of which Confucius wrote a history

It was in this period that Confucius, of the family of Kung, in the state of Lu (Shantung) was born, June 19 B. C. 551. He lived a busy life but not seeing such results as he hoped, died discouraged at his apparent lack of success, at the age of 72. After more than 2000 years the social, moral and political life of about a third of mankind are under the full influence of his mind.

He left a single descendant, a grandson, through whom the succession has been transmitted to the present day. In A. D. 1671 there were 1100 living males bearing his name. The Kungs of Shantung are perhaps the oldest nobility on earth, and the only hereditary nobility in China.

It became more and more difficult to hold the contending states together, among which that of Tsin was conspicuous. Tsin-shih-hwang-ti, of this state, the "Napoleon of China," was the country's first real conqueror and great emperor, founder of the present China (B. C. 255-202.) He confederated the states, formed them into an empire, and for the first time the Middle Kingdom, usually known by the name of the ruling dynasty, was called China, probably from Tsin.

Also he built the great wall (B. C 215) from Liaotung Gulf along the northern frontier, "the most gigantic work of defense ever erected by man." A writer remarks, "it occurred to him that it would be less worry and expense to employ his army to erect a wall than to decimate it by meeting the Hun on the field." The wall was part of a general plan for connecting the empire with good roads and so making a defense more practical than it had hitherto been. There were many other great engineering undertakings—leveling hills, piercing mountains, bridging rivers, by which the conquests of Tsin-shih-hwang were made secure.

Just before the beginning of the Christian era, in the Han dynasty, which was contemporary with the greatest power of Rome, there was a remarkable expansion of the empire westward. The Huns had grown more powerful and still carried on their age-long warfare, threatening the existence of the nation. In the conflict many great generals came to the front. Li Kwang, victorious in seventy battles, committed suicide after the last one because the Khan, whom he had pledged his word to capture, made his escape.

In these victories the Tartar country was subjugated as far west as the Caspian Sea. The banners of China met the banners of Rome on the shores of the Caspian and made a way for the merchants of China to carry their silks and iron into the markets of Europe. Cochin China and Liao-tung Peninsula were reduced to feudatories and Yun-nan was added to the empire.

At the time of the birth of Christ the country was at peace without and within and strangely enough the emperor was called Ping ti—"Emperor Peace."

For 400 years after the Han dynasty confusion reigned and at one time there were as many as eighteen little sovereigns disputing among themselves for imperial dignity. A large number of foreigners were living in China by this time and the much-dreaded enemies of the Chinese, the savage and warlike Tartars whom they had succeeded in keeping at bay for 3000 years, now took advantage of the situation. A colony of Khitan Tartars established themselves on the Liao-tung Peninsula as an independent kingdom, calling it the Liao dynasty (A. D. 380)—and received tribute from the Chinese to keep them quiet The ancestors of the Manchus settled near the River Sungari. As their kinsmen had taken the name of Liao or Iron, they called themselves the Kin or Gold Tatars.

In something over 600 years—keeping things lively in the meantime—the Khitans became so strong they conquered the provinces to the Yang Tse Kiang. The Kin Tatars were invited by China to assist in their overthrow; and with their wild charges of horsemen, "worse than wolves and tigers" their enemies said, they expelled the Khitans, but went on with the conquest of all the region north of the Yang Tse Kiang. Peking became their northern capital, Nanking, the southern or Chinese capital, and afterwards Hang-chau.

Genghis Khan Came to Conquer Them.

THEN came Genghis Khan. He adopted the title Genghis (Greatest) and called his people Mongols (The Bold;) but they were a tribe of the same old enemies, all of them belonging to the Mongolian race.

Passing the great wall (A. D. 1211) Genghis made the land waste as a desert, and millions of lives were sacrificed. His grandson, Kublai Khan, established the Yuen or Mongol dynasty in China, with the seat of government at Peking. It is said more than one hundred thousand Chinese and Mongols lost their lives in the last heroic defense.

Kublai Khan now reigned over all Asia except India and Japan, the greatest area under one government in the world's history. He lived like Solomon and called to his court men of letters from all countries, including the Venetian merchant, Marco Polo, who wrote such a wonderful account of his twenty years' experience in this practically unknown land that it was not accepted as fact. The Mongols completed one great work for China, the grand canal, 700 miles long.

Probably no nation in Europe up to this period was as highly civilized as China. The savage Mongols, losing their language and most of their customs, absorbed the superior culture of the Chinese, even as the Mongols themselves were more or less absorbed by them, and after Kublai Khan their power waned together with their separate identity.

This was the first conquest of China by foreigners; and a century later she emerged as completely herself as the moon emerges from a total eclipse. A Buddhist priest turned bandit, headed organized guerrilla bands to worry the Mongol government. Apparently not realizing the import of the movement they captured the southern capital, Nanking, and from this stronghold continued the war with such success that by 1368 Chang, much to his astonishment, found himself Emperor of China and founder of a dynasty—the Ming (Bright)—and the Mongols retreated to their own land. Nevertheless Mongol invasions continued.

In the Ming dynasty two entirely new factors enter into the history of China, the arrival of Europeans by sea at Canton, and the Japanese.

In 1516 the Portuguese appeared, and by their tremendously loud guns shook the place far and near The effect was much the same as if an unknown and unexpected visitor should announce his arrival by throwing a brick at your front door. An order was given to drive them away immediately. About the same time Hollanders came in two or three large ships and frightened the people by their strange personal appearance. Portuguese settlements were established at Canton, Ning-po and Macao.

The Japanese had been vassals but now considered themselves not only independent but able to conquer China. "I shall do it," Hideyoshi is reported to have said, "as easily as a man rolls up a piece of matting and carries it away under his arm." But first he would conquer Korea. Invading that country he was checked by a large army of Chinese. A great battle was fought in 1597, in which 38,700 Chinese and Koreans are said to have been slain. The ears and noses, pickled in tubs, were sent back to Kyoto and buried in a mound. We are told that the monument erected on the spot remains to the present day and represents all Hideyoshi got out of his campaign.

The Mings a native house, ruled brilliantly and well; but eventually gave way to another branch of theTatar family, the Manchus (Pure,) at the time when the Thirty-years War was convulsing Europe and when China was at the maximum of her power and population. It is believed there were 60,000,000 people in China at that time..

The Manchus had invaded the Liao-tung Peninsula in 1582. Believing themselves unjustly treated by the Chinese they declared vengeance and perhaps 200,000 Chinese were killed in battle. Later the Manchus made their capital at Mukden (1625.) Soon they broke through the great wall in three places and ravaged the province of Chih-li, but were driven out. They were planning the conquest of China when the door was opened for their entrance by the Chinese themselves.

The last but one of the Mings had died of a broken heart. In 1635 his successor saw the beginning of a revolution in China that lasted until 1644. When the people had been reduced to such straits that human flesh was sold in the shambles for food and the dethroned emperor had committed suicide, the commander of the imperial troops sought an alliance with the Manchus to save the country from the revolutionists and restore order.

Was it Patriotism or Treachery that Opened the Door?

THERE is a difference of opinion as to whether this act indicated a most exalted patriotism or the most diabolical treachery. If Villa's forces should succeed in bringing things to the same pass in Mexico and the government representatives should call in outside assistance there probably would be the same difference of opinion. Many of the generals of this most terrible campaign were Chinese but of course the Manchus had no thought of saving the nation for the Chinese. In 1644 Shun-chi was proclaimed Emperor of China and the Manchus ruled until 1912, when China became a republic.

The Manchus wore queues and forced the fashion on their new subjects as a badge of subjection. Millions of natives were slaughtered rather than submit their heads to dishonor. The new rulers also tried to do away with foot-binding, a fashion started about the year 500 by a belle of the Chinese royal household; but the female of the species, more defiant than the male, would not and did not yield.

But the security of the Manchus was by no means assured. Rebellions broke out from time to time in the south. Most horrible massacres occurred. After an investment of ten months Canton was captured and over a hundred thousand people perished. At another time 30,000 literati were massacred. And one Chinese leader, believing his army would be invincible if his soldiers were free from domestic ties, had 400,000 women slain—but without avail.

Shen-chi redivided the land into the Eighteen Provinces of today, instead of the fifteen of the Mings. The names and situation of provinces are as follows:

In the North, Chih-li (Direct Rule;) Shan-si (West of the Mountains;) Shen-si (Western frontier;) Kan-suh (Voluntary Reverence) name made from combining the first two syllables of two chief towns.

In the East, Shan-tung (East of the Mountains;) Kiang-su (from the first syllables of Kiang-ning and Su-chau:) Cheh-kiang (Crooked River;) Fuh-kien (Happily Established.)

In the South, Kwang-tung (Broad East;) Kwang-si (Broad West.)

In the West, Yun-nan (Cloudy South;) Sze-ch'uen (Four Streams.)

In the Center, Ho-nan (South of the River;) Ngan-hwui (or An-hwui) from combination of the first syllables of Ngan-king and Kwui-chau;) Kiang-si (West of the River;) Hu-peh (North of the Lake, i.e. Tung-ting;) Hu-nan (South of the Lake;) Kwei-chau (Noble Region.)

In addition to the Eighteen Provinces of China Proper, the Chinese realm includes Manchuria, Mongolia, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet. Until recently there was also included the island of Taiwan, or Formosa, ceded to Japan in 1895, and the Peninsula of Chosen, or Korea, formally annexed to Japan in 1910.

Shun-chi was educated by the German Jesuit missionary, Adam Schaall, who arrived in 1628, and who now became the Prime Minister. He was succeeded by the Dutch Jesuit and scientist Verbiest and Louis XIV recognized the honor by the gift of a large bronze azimuth and celestial globe for the Emperor's use. These remained prominent objects on the city walls till Peking was looted by the allies in 1900. The astronomical instruments were taken by the Germans and displayed among the treasures of Potsdam.

The Manchus Have Had a Busy Reign.

ALTHOUGH the Mongols of Mongolia submitted to the Manchu emperors of China, they have been treated with respect and watched with anxiety. While the Manchus were busy with the invasion of China the Russians, who had long been quietly but persistently moving eastward, entered the Sungari and came to the mouth of the Amur. A new trouble had arrived. With the Russian menace, the Japanese, the Europeans and the ever active centripetal and centrifugal forces within, representing the monarchy and the independence of the people (sometimes one and sometimes the other being in the ascendency,) the Manchus have not lacked for employment.

Secret societies, some of them dating back to Ming and Mongol times, multiplied and spread, many of them with the anti-Manchu spirit, especially in the south, a center of political and religious unrest. Pirates ravaged the southern coast. About the year 1800 the piratical force was estimated at 70,000 men with 1800 junks; and another question now arose in acute form—the opium trade.

The traffic remained in Portuguese hands till 1773, when the East India Company entered the unhappy business, sharing with smugglers, who defied all law. The port of Canton gradually became a storm center. Finally a new viceroy arrived at Canton in 1839. He demanded the surrender of all opium in the hands of the merchants and ordered a siege of the foreign settlement till the last ounce should be delivered up. This occasioned forty-eight days of confinement, but 20,283 chests of opium valued at about $10,000,000 were secured, and Canton had her Boston Tea Party. The whole quantity was placed in trenches, mixed with lime, and sea water turned in.

But the traffic still continued. Then trade with England was declared at an end (1839.) While opium was the occasion of the war it is said not to have been the cause of it—the real cause being the closing of trade. By the last of June, 1840, seventeen British men-of-war and twenty-seven troopships had arrived. In some cities the Manchu garrisons made a creditable defense. A deplorable incident at Chen Kiang was the suicide of some thousands of panic-stricken people.

China lost. By the treaty of Nanking, dated August 29, 1842, China ceded Hongkong to Great Britain, agreed to an indemnity of $21,000,000 — $6,000,000 for opium destroyed, $3,000,000 for debts due British subjects, and $12,000,000 for the expense of the campaign, to the opening, in addition to Canton, of four more ports, and the recognition of extraterritoriality. And the opium traffic continued.

The Unwilling Doors of China Were Opened Now.

THE walls were broken down. The other nations of Europe and America had access to Chinese commerce. Hongkong soon became the world's third largest port.

But this did not better the feeling in China, which also had other reasons for hating the foreigners. The Portuguese at Macao conducted a traffic in kidnaped Chinese and cast them off on forced contract system to work in California, Cuba and Peru. Trouble again started at Hongkong. Various forts were seized by the British. Instead of the viceroy yielding he offered a reward for British heads. There was also an attempt to poison the British residents of Hongkong. The French, who found a cause in the murder of a French priest, joined the British. This war, begun in 1856, ended in 1860 with more indemnity; the establishment of a permanent legation at Peking; the cession of Kowloon to England and the opening of Tientsin as a treaty port.

The French treaty pushed matters further. The provision for reparation to be made by China for the confiscation of all buildings or lands which had ever belonged to Christians, paved the way for claims extending back a hundred years or more. A Jesuit interpreter inserted in the Chinese version of the treaty two other provisions, "one securing that Christians shall have a right to the free exercise of their religion all over China, and the other that the French missionaries shall have the right to rent land in all provinces of the empire and to buy and construct houses." When the fraud was discovered the French Minister thought it would do no good to denounce his interpreter, so the treaty was treated by the French as binding and never questioned by the Chinese. The other powers profited by it under the "most favored nation" clause.

As a final act of the war Lord Elgin felt himself justified in the destruction of the famous summer palace in Peking—one of the glories of the early part of the dynasty. This no doubt had its aftermath in the Boxer uprising.

Bad Feeling and Excitable Individuals Caused Panic.

THE French treaty created a bad popular feeling which eventually manifested itself. Propaganda was as useful in those days as in these. All sorts of impossible rumors were current. When a Chinese committee of investigation visited the Catholic orphanage it was resented by the excitable French Consul, who not only refused them admittance but drove them from the premises. A little later at the yamen of Chunghow, it is said, he drew his sword, struck the table, and fired two shots at the commissioner. Pushed to the door he fired two shots into the hostile crowd outside and was thereupon murdered by the infuriated mob. The cathedral was attacked, ten sisters of mercy, two priests, and four other French subjects and three Russians were killed. In addition eight Protestant churches were wrecked—the result of popular panic.

The local officials were banished, fifteen of the rioters executed and a large indemnity paid and a special mission sent to France to declare the regret of the government.

In 1858 a treaty was signed with Russia ceding all the territory on the left bank of the Amur, together with the coast district east of it and south of Korea, which made possible the establishment of the great port of Vladivostok. (Russia was already in possession of the country and had erected forts for its defense.)

Six years before the French and English war with China the Tai Ping (Perfect Peace) rebellion had started. This rebellion "lasted fifteen years, devastated sixteen provinces, destroyed 600 cities and cost the lives of at least 20,000,000 people." The foreign settlements were threatened, as well as the overthrow of the Manchu government; therefore as soon as their own war was ended, the imperial armies were supplemented by detachments of French and British forces and by natives drilled and commanded by foreign officers and armed with foreign weapons. The first foreigner to offer his services was Frederick Ward of Salem, Mass., who organized "The Ever Victorious Army." From 1860 when this force began its career, the tide turned. Ward was killed in action. The Victorious Army was finally placed under command of "Chinese" Gordon, but it was not until 1864 that the rebellion was subdued.

During the Tai Ping troubles the Muhamadans of Yunnan were goaded to rebellion and met with the usual idea of extermination. Thirty thousand men, women and children were massacred. An insurrection of the Muhamadans of the north brought Russia into Ila and she established a government in the Chinese city of Kuldja. Ila was restored to China, except a strip on the extreme west, after an indemnity of 9,000,000 rubles had been paid to Russia (1881.)

The murder of a British consul (1874) opened two new ports of trade and four places on the Yang Tse where foreign goods could be landed, an indemnity and other matters.

A Famine Brought First Railroad to China.

THE famine of 1876 was the means of introducing China's first railroad. It was estimated that 9,000,000 people perished in the provinces of Chih-li, Shan-si, Honan and Kan-suh alone. In getting food to these people a company of foreign merchants constructed a railway twelve miles long. So fearful was the populace for the graves of their ancestors that it was not until 1881 that Wu Ting Fang had influence enough to secure the construction of the line to the capital.

France had secured a slight foothold in the southwest part of the Chinese Empire in 1715; had increased it from time to time in the usual way until in 1885 she was in full possession of Fernch Indo-China . The French war at this time led to the introduction of the telegraph, which met with no opposition from the Chinese.

A year later another feudatory was lost by the occupation of Upper Burmah by Great Britain; and on March 17, 1890, China's back door was crowded upon by the establishment of a trade route from India to Tibet. In 1892 in a rebellion in Mongolia and Manchuria 8000 insurgents were put to the sword.

The idea of Chinese statesmen has been to govern through moral agencies rather than physical force. War was considered an abominable business, the soldier despised, the scholar exalted. In Japan the soldier and scholar were one, the Samurai or servant of the emperor, the glory of Japan.

Japan Took Her Naval Lessons From England.

BY NATURE a warlike race, Japan had earlier than China awakened to the demands of the times and organized and trained her armies, at first entrusting them to French and German instructors. Then her promising young men were sent to Europe to study. From British naval officers she learned how to fight on the sea. A British commander headed a naval mission sent to instruct the Japanese navy. Later a rear-admiral served as naval adviser to the Japanese government. Admiral Togo himself studied his profession in England.

Trouble had long been brewing between China and Japan over Korea, and in 1894 Japan was ready to settle it; China was as unprepared as was America when we were called to war. Besides, the war was regarded by most of China as a personal quarrel of the Manchu court with Japan and Korea and took no part. Japan was victorious on land and sea. As a result Liaotung Peninsula including Port Arthur, Formosa and the Pescadores were ceded to Japan with an indemnity of $280,000,000.

But the eagles forced the fish hawk to give up its prey. Russia, Germany and France warned Japan to drop her prize of Port Arthur "in the interests of peace" and as the advice was backed up with a bay full of warships Japan relinquished the "key to China" and accepted Formosa and a slightly larger indemnity.

Other Nations Now Began to to Gouge Out Pieces.

THE conclusion of peace was the signal for the other nations to gather around the prostrate form of China and help themselves. And this was the beginning of the Chinese problem we face today. Russia had posed as her friend in saving Port Arthur and loaning money to pay the indemnity, and felt entitled to reward herself with the right to extend the rans-Siberian Railway across Manchuria to Vladivostok, with branch lines to Mukden and Port Arthur. Germany had already taken her reward in the seizure of Kiao-Chow Bay, Shantung, November, 1897, ostensibly because of the murder of two German missionaries by robbers. Great Britain "leased" Wei Hai Wei, France obtained Kwang Chou Wan. "By 1899 China hadn't a harbor left in which to mobilize her own ships without permission of the foreigners." A British author wrote a large book called "The Break-up of China."

Among the anti-Manchu societies which were flourishing at the time was the Righteous Harmony Fists Association—abbreviated to "Boxers." They were already madly hostile to the foreigners and in 1900, taking up the cry "China for Chinese," they undertook their expulsion. The movement started in Shantung, where Germany and Great Britain had the ports of Kiao-Chow and Wei Hai Wei "to the wrath and despair of all China."

The first fury of the Boxers fell upon the missionaries and several thousand native converts who met their fate with unflinching heroism. The legations were shut up within the walls of the British Embassy at Peking. In the French cathedral were eighty Europeans and 3400 native Christians, many of them women and children. Four hundred of them died during the siege, mostly buried under ruins caused by exploding mines. The Chancellor of Japan and Baron von Kettler, the German minister, were murdered. The whole civilized world was in suspense and apprehension, and warships of eight allied nations went to the rescue.

And then came the horrible looting of Peking by the a[illegible] is recorded that in Tung Chou alo[illegible] a city that made no resistance and where there was no fighting.
